Royal Flight Twice Diverted By Bad Weather

Queen, Prince Stay In Vancouver Hotel

VANCOUVER (CP) — A routine refuelling stop that turned into an impromptu royal visit ends today—maybe.

For the second time, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip will attempt to leave Canada — a country which, with assistance from the weather, proved Thursday it was as reluctant to let them go as it was eager to welcome them back.

They spent an unscheduled night in Hotel Vancouver after an enforced double delay believed unprecedented for a royal flight.

Their British Overseas Airways Corporation jet, a Boeing 707, was diverted twice Thursday. The first time, over Enderby in interior British Columbia, the plane turned around and landed in Edmonton.

The second diversion came Thursday night when the jet—by then on its way again and 900 miles out over the Pacific—turned around and came back to Vancouver.

G. S. McDougall, superintendent of South American operations for BOAC, said:

"From whatever time the flight gets away it's 13 hours to Fiji," he said.

WILL MEET YACHT

The royal couple is flying from London to Fiji, to transfer to the yacht Britannia and cruise to Australia and New Zealand, where they will tour.

Thursday was a day of confusion and frustration.

Said Cmdr. Richard Colville, royal press secretary:

"The Queen and Prince Philip had a short, three-hour sleep and that's all."

Including the time the aircraft was on the ground in Edmonton, they had been aboard for more than 19 hours.

After the jet had been reported past Edmonton en route to its Vancouver refuelling stop Thursday, Lieutenant - Governor George Pearkes, Premier W. A. C. Bennett and Mayor Bill Rathie gathered at the airport to lead the welcoming committee.

The premier and the lieutenant-governor returned to Victoria and Mayor Rathie went back to his office when it was reported after much indecision that the jet would return to Edmonton.

PLANE WAS READY

A Canadian Pacific Airlines Britannia — a four - engined turbo-prop — was loaded with

VANCOUVER (CP)—It was a full day for Ronald Evans when the Queen came to Vancouver.

Ron, district sales manager for British overseas Airways Corporation, is a large, beefy man with a moustache like the rack of a longhorn steer. And he's a calm man.

Everything was laid on long in advance. The Queen's plane would land here en route to Fiji. Food would be put aboard and fuel would be pumped into the huge jet.

Then it was out over the Pacific.

"A piece of cake."

Things began unwinding for Ron Evans about 9 a.m. when word came that not only were landing conditions suspect at Vancouver International Airport, but snow was also falling at Seattle, Portland and Edmonton—the alternate landing fields.

Ron was besieged by an army of reporters, broadcasters, photographers, civic officials, airline personnel — just about everybody in sight. Would the land? If so, what time? Was it going back to Edmonton? If she did go back there, when could she be expected to arrive?"

MAKES PREPARATIONS

Before the word came that the flight had been diverted to Edmonton, Ron was busy lining up a Canadian Pacific Airlines Britannia — a fast, four-engined jet-prop.

When the word did arrive, he had the Britannia loaded with all the food and other supplies which had been destined for the jet. The fresh crew for the royal plane was put aboard the Britannia and, bringing up the rear, was Mr. Evans.

He had to oversee the transshipment of crew and goods to the jet in Edmonton.

After various delays, the jet took off for Fiji and Ron took off back to Vancouver. Half an hour after he landed he got the news—she'd coming back.

Ron had a little ear on hose to get Trans-Canada Air Lines to set aside a standby Viscount with crew—in case the Queen and Prince Philip might want to fly to Victoria to spend the night at Government House.

Then, with the aircraft to stay right here, he called the Hotel Vancouver and told them Queen Elizabeth would be dropping in and to please have the royal suite ready. And, oh yes a couple of floors for the retinue.

In the end, Ron's preparations paid off. Word came from the air that the Queen would stay in the hotel.

East German Trapeze Artist Travels Hydro Line to Safety

BERLIN (AP) — It was quite a feat anyway.

Sliding along on the seat of his pants, an East German trapeze artist fled over the heads of Communist border guards into West Berlin on a power cable.

The cable normally carries 110,000 voltage — but West Berlin police said it long had been out of use when Horst Klein, 36, made his escape Dec. 27.

BRITAIN READY TO INAUGURATE V-BOMBER PLAN

Says Entire Force Available to NATO

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain today prepared to press ahead with its plan to assign its nuclear "V-bombers" to NATO as a start toward the multilateral Atlantic pact nuclear force following Parliament's approval Thursday night of the Anglo-American Polaris agreement.

The House of Commons approved Defence Minister Thorneycroft's order of submarine-carried Polaris missiles to Britain to replace the abandoned air - to - ground Skybolt missile after a crucial two-day debate on defence policy.

At the same time, Defence Minister Peter Thorneycroft said Britain's entire force of 175 Vulcan "V-bombers" and some 200 Hbombs are available to NATO.

Talks could start now with the supreme allied commander in Europe, U.S. Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, on the targeting and planning of the force, he said.

But Thurneycroft said bombers assigned to strengthen NATO's defence would be kept under British control.

"We should keep the V-bombers under the Supreme Command," he said. "That is important for its morale, for its discipline, and above all for its fighting efficiency."

VOTE APPROVES

The changeover to the Polaris was announced last April by President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan in the Bahamas last December. Now it was approved by a vote of 330 to 236—a Conservative margin of 94.

All Labor opposition amendment declaring "no confidence" in the government defence policy, which it said had "collapsed," was defeated 337 to 234 —a government majority of 103.

Harold Wilson, Labor party leader and opposition spokesman, in a stinging attack on the government, said the Labor party supported neither the Polaris nor the Skybolt missile.

"We can only make the contribution which it is our duty to make to Western Europe if we cease these vain nuclear posturings," Wilson said.

Macmillan defended the Nassau deal on the grounds that "we were right to take this system on the best terms we did—on the assumption we are t ogo on with the British deterrent at all."

AMBASSADORS GET-TOGETHER — Canadian Ambassador Charles S. A. Ritchie, right, talks with Llewelyn Thompson, White House adviser on Soviet Affairs and Ambassador-at-large, at a reception in the Canadian Embassy in Washington for a touring Canadian military group. Canadian Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced Thursday that Ambassador Ritchie is being recalled to Ottawa for consultations on apparent differences between the U.S. and Canada on the necessity of using nuclear capable weapons in the North American defence systems. ### Summoned Home for Consultation

Recall of Ambassador From Washington Canadian Rebuke to U.S. Government

WASHINGTON (CP) — Slim, friendly Charles Ritchie, selected as ambassador less than a year ago, flew to Ottawa today, recalled for consultations as a Canadian rebuke to the U.S. government. But the cross-border nuclear weapons crisis that stirred that rebuke was no nearer solution.

Friends anticipated that the 62-year-old, Halifax-born diplomat would be back at his job in a few days, his trip being more of a diplomatic gesture than for any deep consultations. An authoritative view is that Ritchie bears no new advice but will remain at Ottawa at Prime Minister Diefenbaker's disposition.

Meanwhile, two United States congressmen called for a truce to the Canada - U.S. cold war and U.S. diplomats pondered whether they had made some tactical error in their bombshell attempt to clarify the public record on the history of Canada-U.S. nuclear weapons negotiations.

Senator George Aiken, Vermont Republican, and representative Stanley Tupper, Maine Republican, called for an urgent meeting of Canada - U.S. parliamentarians to restore harmony.

Aiken, member of the Senate foreign relations, committee, suggested the state department should not have made any public criticism of the Canadian government. Tupper disagreed. He said the criticism was warranted but that it should have come from President Kennedy and not the state department.

Ironically, those most affected had the least to say.

A group of high-ranking Canadian military officers, members of the National Defence College, toured Washington and spoke to the legislators, diplomats and other officials here during the charges and counter-charges. They listened but said nothing.

Ritchie's last affair here before departing was to entertain the 36 officers at a lavish residential reception where Llewlyn Thompson, Kennedy's special adviser on Soviet affairs, also was a guest. Thompson willingly posed with Ritchie for a press photographer.

It was the end of a hectic day for the Canadian embassy. Telephone calls poured in all day as U.S. reporters sought more information on reasons for all the sudden fuss along what has always been called the world's friendliest border. Ritchie shunned reporters as he stepped into the limelight as the first ambassador to be recalled for consultations during a period of Canada-U.S. strain.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
THURSDAY, Jan. 31, 1963

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said a U.S. press release statement about Canadian defence policy was an "unwarranted intrusion" in Canadian affairs.

Opposition Leader Pearson said Mr. Diefenbaker's claim that Liberal defence policy is made in the U.S. is a "cheap and false insinuation."

Social Credit Leader Thompson said Canadians will not be "pushed around," by the U.S., but blamed the government for provoking the U.S. statement.

NDP Leader Douglas said Canada should tell the U.S. it isn't dealing with Guatemala or Cuba this time.

Speaker Lambert's rulings against a Liberal request for an emergency debate on the U.S. statement were overturned by the three opposition parties.

Defence Minister Harkness said the government defence policy is "clear and responsible." He was drowned out by opposition laughter.

Soviet's Prospect Cessation Until Feb. 12

Ban Talks Halt; Atlantic Split Blamed

WASHINGTON (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev's decision to break off the latest round of nuclear test ban talks is regarded in high U.S. government quarters here as almost certainly a direct result of the split in the Atlantic alliance engendered by French President de Gaulle.

The U.S.-British-Soviet discussions, which resumed three weeks ago amid hopes of agreement on a test ban treaty, collapsed Thursday in New York. The Soviet Union proposed that the talks be ended subject to resumption in Geneva Feb. 12.

A U.S. statement said that negotiations for a test ban treaty "must be conducted" and promised first priority would be given to that effort when an 18-nation disarmament committee, which includes the three nuclear powers and Canada, meets in Geneva.

Thus, on the record, the reaction of the U.S. government was surprisingly moderate and pessimistic. But behind the scenes, the surprise at this sudden turn of events set in motion by the Soviet Union was coupled with a sharply critical attitude toward de Gaulle.

The reason is that officials believe Khrushchev may see an opportunity opening up to exploit the rift in the Western alliance and he does not want to limit his future range of action in any way by pushing forward a policy of agreement at this time.

One comment making the rounds in official offices is that the failure of the test ban talks is the first concrete result in East-West relations of he de Gaulle policy line on Europe—pursuing a course largely independent of the other North Atlantic Treaty allies.

The test ban talks were started in Geneva three weeks ago after an exchange of letters between Khrushchev and President Kennedy in which Khrushchev agreed to accept some international inspection on Soviet territory. This reversed his earlier policy and gave rise to hopes for a breakthrough on the critical inspection issue which has deadlocked all disarmament negotiations since 1955.

During the new round of talks the Russians stood firm on Khrushchev's statement to Kennedy that he would accept two or three on-site inspections in the Soviet Union each year. Kennedy had already told him by letter that the U.S. would require eight or 10 such inspections and U.S. officials believed that negotiations probably would bring Khrushchev closer to Kennedy's position.

Education's Financial Woes Called National Emergency

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian School Trustees' Association said today the financial strain on education in Canada is becoming a national emergency, and it called on the federal government for "bold and decisive leadership."

The association, which represents most school trustees in Canada, presented a brief to Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The association recognized that education was primarily a provincial responsibility. "However, the degree of urgency in respect to all phases of education in Canada is fast reaching the point, if it has not already done so, of becoming a national emergency and, as such, a matter of concern and responsibility of the federal government."

The association asked the federal government to:

1. Meet with provincial governments and redefine responsibilities, and see that money needed for education will be available.

2. Extend the Technical and Vocational Training Assistance Act beyond present deadline of March 31, 1963. This act requires the federal government to pay 75 per cent of the capital cost of new schools for technical and vocational training.

3. Contribute more towards the current cost of providing technical and vocational training.

4. Pay the entire cost of all English and French language courses.

5. Remove all sales and excise duties on all material purchased by educational institutions, and family allowances to the age of 18 while children are in school or college; give representation to school trustees on the national technical and vocational training advisory council, and provide the same tax benefits to school trustee expense allowances as is given to elected municipal officials.

Opposition Says Move Provoked By Indecision

Harkness Denies He Contradicted Leader

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Harkness rose in a tense Commons chamber Tuesday night and firmly denied that he had contradicted his leader, Prime Minister Diefenbaker, on the nuclear arms issue.

The minister's statement, with public galleries jammed and attentive MPs hanging on his every word, was one of the highlights of a day of high drama in Parliament.

Another was Prime Minister Diefenbaker's blunt assertion that the United States had made an "unwarranted intrusion" in Canadian affairs with its statement Wednesday night blistering Canada for stalling on nuclear defence.

Leaders of all three opposition parties also rebuked the U.S., but said the U.S. move had been provoked by Ottawa's indecision on whether Canada is to play a nuclear role in NORAD and NATO.

Mr. Harkness' statement culminated a rare emergency debate which was forced by the opposition parties and tied to Wednesday's six-hundred declaration by the U.S. state department.

The declaration said Canada had failed to propose a practical arrangement that would effectively control its own continental defence, and took direct issue with statements made by Mr. Diefenbaker in a Commons speech last Friday.

Mr. Harkness got out of government Monday giving his interpretation of what the Prime Minister had said.

Opposition leaders alleged that this now - famous statement, in which Mr. Harkness represented Mr. Diefenbaker as having clearly enunciated a pro-nuclear policy, actually contradicted the prime minister's remarks.

Thursday night, in a speech that was often interrupted by opposition jeers—but also enthusiastically applauded by desk-thumping government supporters—Mr. Harkness rejected the allegation.

"It is simply not true," said the defence minister, who evidently was under some strain but spoke in a clear and generally firm voice.

Paul Martin, the Liberals' foreign affairs critic, said after hearing Mr. Harkness that the minister had just repudiated the appearance of a deep cleavage between himself and Mr. Diefenbaker.

He challenged the defence minister to produce proof that he had threatened to resign last weekend. Mr. Harkness did not reply; he sat chatting to colleagues with his deskmate, External Affairs Minister Green.

Thursday's emergency debate formally proposed by Opposition Leader Pearson, took place despite a ruling by the Speaker Marcel Lambert that the subject matter was not of sufficient urgency to set aside the regular business of the House.

Who Stole Free Enterprise? Question Posed in B.C. House

VICTORIA (CP)—Who stole British Columbia's free enterprise system?

"It was here when I left last year," thundered Gordon Gibson, millionaire retired logger and Liberal member for North Vancouver, across the floor of the legislature Thursday.

And a plug of chewing tobacco crossed the floor of the House for the second time.

Mr. Gibson said during the throne speech debate that Forests Minister Williston was quoted as saying at a truck loggers association convention in Vancouver this month the preservation of free enterprise is not involved because it no longer exists in B.C.'s No. 1 industry."

He called on the minister to deny making the statement.

"Someone stole it . . . someone gave it away," Mr. Gibson said.

Mr. Williston said the government never gives anything away.

Mr. Gibson said if he were Mr. Williston he would deny the statement or claim "I was so stupid drunk when I said it I didn't know what I was saying."

"At the start of his speech Mr. Gibson sent a plug of tobacco to Premier W. A. C. Bennett as a goodwill gesture.

PLANES COLLIDE OVER ANKARA, 115 KILLED

Hundreds More Reported Injured

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A passenger airliner and a Turkish Air Force plane collided over Ankara today and plunged into the city's crowded main square. Police estimated at least 115 persons, most of them on the ground, were killed.

The two planes, a Middle East Airlines four-engined Viscount and a military C47 Dakota, fell in flames with pieces of burning wreckage raining over a wide area of Ulus Square, heart of this Turkish capital.

Flaming pieces of wreckage crashed among pedestrians and into stores and other places of business

Fifteen persons were reported aboard the propeller-jet Viscount which was heading for a landing on a flight from Nicosia, Cyprus.

It collided with the military plane six minutes away from Ankara's big, modern airport northeast of the city.

The disaster was the worst of its kind ever to occur in Turkey.

Radio Ankara appealed for blood donors and sent all doctors to report to hospitals.

The Mea Viscount flight had originated in Beirut, Lebanon, stopped at Nicosia, then flown on to Ankara.

The Dakota is believed to be a two-man crew aboard the Turkish Air Force plane.

Ulus Square is in the centre of the old city of Ankara which was made the capital of Turkey by the late Kemal Ataturk. The huge statute of Ataturk is at one side of the square. Hotels, restaurants and other business places occupy the other three sides.

MONTREAL (CP) — The three - storey F. Baillargeon Limitee building near the centre of Montreal's downtown financial district was destroyed Thursday by flames.

North Front Street

Will Detour Traffic Feb. 7 For Bridge Construction

The city engineering department announced today that traffic on North Front Street will be detoured starting on February 7th to allow for construction of the new North Front Street bridge.

The Canadian National Railways will move in on February 11th to remove the old overhead bridge, while the general contractors, the Looby Construction Company of Dublin, Ont., will begin construction of the new bridge immediately the old structure is taken away.

It is expected the new four-lane structure will be completed by the first of April and plans are to have the approaches completed by the end of June.

During construction of the new bridge northbound traffic on North Front Street will be diverted by way of Grove St., north on Geddes and west along Evans and back to North Front Street.

Southbound traffic will go east on Evans, south on Grier and back to North Front Street by way of Harvey Street.

Present traffic signs on the route will be altered to coincide with the new detour route.

As a convenience to residents in the immediate area Ridley Street will be kept open as long as possible, but with the construction of the new bridge and its approaches Ridley Street will be cut off at North Front Street.

In recent weeks demolition crews have been razing residences immediately north and south of the site of the new bridge. The Canadian National Telegraph wires have been elevated and telephone and hydro wires have been re-located.

As noted above the detour on North Front Street will not go into effect until next Thursday, Feb. 7th. In the meantime, detour signs will be erected and left covered until the detour goes into effect.

City traffic officer Sgt. Ralph Blatchford will visit schools in the area to give directions to children on how best to get to school during the period of bridge construction.

Two Injured In Bay Bridge Vehicle Crash

A Belleville couple were admitted to hospital after their station wagon was wrecked in collision with a pick-up truck on the Bay Bridge last night.

Reported in satisfactory condition today in Belleville General Hospital were Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Leeman, R.R. 1, Belleville.

Mr. Leeman, age 48, did not suffer any fractures in the accident, hospital authorities said. His wife may have chest injuries.

Only one lane was opened to traffic on the narrow causeway after the accident. Traffic was tied up completely as both vehicles were towed, linked to tow trucks after provincial police officers finished on-the-spot investigations.

Police said the accident occurred after the Leeman station wagon struck the side of the north bridge on the outskirts of Belleville.

The impact pivoted the rear of the vehicle which was struck by the half-ton truck driven by Kenneth Dingle, R.R. 7, Belleville. Higgins' nine-year-old daughter Wanniella, was admitted from hospital after being treated for a bump on her head.

Fair Directors Approve Move To Advance Rating to "A"

Approval to submit an application to the federal Department of Agriculture requesting ratification of the Belleville Fair as a Class "A" fair received the unanimous consent of the 1963 board of directors of the Belleville Agricultural Society in their first official meeting.

Approval was given following some discussion as to the benefits and advantages to be gained under the advanced classification. Currently the Belleville Fair is the major class "B" fair in Ontario and the decision to attempt to step up into the big league of Ontario fairs was made only after full consideration of the proposition.

Acceptance of the application by the federal government will place the Belleville Fair in the same category as the Canadian National Exhibition (Toronto), the Western Fair (London) and the Central Canada Exhibition (Ottawa).

Currently the Belleville Fair is the eighth highest spender amongst the 21 top fairs in Ontario, including the CNE, but is 14th when it comes to gate receipts, according to the latest statistics.

The board also decided to advertise for the position of treasurer, a post which is now vacant due to the election of Robert Phillips, the past-treasurer, to the post of president. It is expected that the treasurer's post will be filled within the next two weeks.

The important task of selecting committee chairmen to associate directorates and appointing them to committees was achieved during the course of the evening. Committee chairmen included Carl Thompson (finance), Phil Hall (publicity), Fred Chamberlain (grandstand), Glen Daugherty (midway), Don Spencer (cattle), Jim Musgrove (poultry), Robert Mallory (sheep and swine), Sidney Hillman (fruits, vegetables and fruits), Ben Bleecker (grains and seeds) and Bob Barber (plants and flowers).

The new associate directors elected to date are August Kaiser, Harold Caldwell, Ernest Henderson, Gr. L. F. McCorquodale, Lyle Van Clief and Arthur Courfield.

Local Chapter Of Heart Group Is Organized

The Belleville Chapter of the Ontario Heart Foundation was formed recently, just in time to join in the observance of February as Heart Month.

The Canadian Heart Foundation is taking positive action to reduce heart casualties through a planned research program.

Heart disease is Canada's number one killer and each year more than 66,000 Canadians die as a result of heart and blood circulatory disorders.

Research has already provided the knowledge needed to reduce recurrences of heart attacks, prevent rheumatic fever, repair damaged heart valves, develop heart-lung machines and perfect drugs which retard blood clotting.

But more research is needed to find the answers to heart attack, stroke, heart failure, high blood pressure and other forms of heart disease. The Heart Foundation pledges to finance such research.

Officers of the newly formed Belleville chapter are: honorary president, Mayor A. M. Haig; president, P. S. McGuire; vice-president, E. S. Fairman; treasurer, N. Moore; secretary, Miss Sandra Wood; public relations, John G. Feashy; medical committee, Dr. J. S. Loynes and Dr. R. B. Crook

Fire Destroys 2-Storey Home In Deseronto

DESERONTO (Special) — A frozen hydrant frustrated firefighters this morning as they battled a blaze in the home of a former police chief.

Lost in the fire was the two-storey frame home of Herbert Claire, on the western outskirts of the town.

Mrs. Claire was in the kitchen at the time the blaze erupted in the upper storey of the house.

"She heard a bang, opened the kitchen door and saw the upstairs and stairs on fire," said Fire Chief James McVicker.

The town's volunteer fire department rushed a pumper to the scene. When its lanks were emptied firemen tried to hook their lines to a nearby hydrant, but found it frozen.

"We had 2,700 feet of line strung out before we could connect with another hydrant four feet down Highway 2," said the chief.

He believed the fire—of unknown origin—started in a bedroom.

Mrs. Claire was in Belleville at the time of the blaze. Total property loss was estimated at $10,000.

IN MEMORIAM

ABBELSTINE — In loving memory of our dear son, Kenneth, who passed away February 1st, 1961.

Today recalls the saddest day
Of a dear mother gone to rest,
The day I lost my darling son
And left me lonely.
Is the one who loved her best.
—Always remembered by son Charlie.

CARTER — In loving memory of Mrs. Hannah Carter, who passed away February 1, 1958.
No remembrance, dear mother, we need,
To turn
That I think of you.
Those left behind are very good,
But none replaced you.
Many a silent tear is shed,
When I am all alone.
The one I loved so very much,
The one I called mother.
—Sadly missed by loving wife Hannah.

HAMILTON — In loving memory of a dear husband, Thomas Bessie M., who passed away February 1st, 1958.
Peaceful be thy rest, dear mother,
Long and dearly loved and sadly missed,
As in life we loved you dearly,
So in death we do the same.
—Ever remembered by husband Tom, daughters Jean, Elaine and Bob and grandsons Roger and Richard.

Tax Payment Instalments Changed From Three to Five

Belleville ratepayers this year will have the opportunity of paying their taxes in five instalments instead of in the three payments which has been the practice in the past few years.

To make this possible city council has authorized the tax department to levy for an interim rate of 44 mills, payable in two instalments, the first on or before March 1st and the second on May 1st.

The idea of the change is to get more money into the city coffers earlier in the year, and thus cut down on the amount of bank interest.

City treasurer C. J. Bender estimates that with co-operation of the ratepayers the interim levy will provide the city with sufficient funds to reduce the interest paid on loans for current expenditures by approximately one-third of a mill.

Tentative dates for payment of the three "regular" tax bills are on June 20, August 30, and on October 31st. The "regular" tax bill will be mailed after the 1963 budget has been set, and will be computed on the 1963 mill rate less the rate of the interim bill.

A discount of one per cent will be allowed on the second instalment of the interim bill if paid with the first instalment on or before its due date, while the usual discounts on the second and third instalments of the "regular" tax bill will also be allowed if paid with the first instalment, on or before its due date.

Mr. Bender said the interim tax bill applies only to property taxes. Business taxes will be levied after the mill rate has been struck and will be payable in one instalment on June 20th.

January Just Average Month Figures Show

Weatherwise, the month of January was just about average.

That's the story today from the city water filtration plant, where statistics show the high temperature for the month was 37 degrees, the low 8 below zero and the mean reading for the month 17.4 degree.

There was .07 inch of rain, and 19.9 inches was the average for a total precipitation of 2.06 inches.

A year ago the high was 40 degrees, the low 12 below and the mean reading 18.1. There was 1.73 inch of rain and 12.4 inches of snow for a total precipitation of 2.58 inches.

The ten-year average for January shows a high temperature reading of 41, a low of 12.4, 72 inch of rain and 17.1 inches of snow with total precipitation averaging 2.44 inches.

January of 1948 will have to go down as "the year of the big snow" with 43 inches falling during the month.

And back in January, 1942, the thermometer at the west side pump house plummeted to a chilly 40 below zero.

No Major Changes Needed Says Report Given to Town By Management Consultants

TRENTON — Mayor James MacDonald has released the report of Woods, Gordon and Co., the firm of Toronto management consultants which last year carried out a general review of the organization and principal administrative procedures used by the general administrative staff and the public works department of the town of Trenton.

"In general," says the report, "we were impressed by the way in which the activities of the town were organized and the way in which they were carried out." There are some improvements that can be made in some staff procedures, it adds, but "we are not recommending any major changes in organization. Nor are we suggesting any methods changes that would require the purchase of expensive office equipment or that could not be implemented by your own staff with little, if any, help from us."

The report is divided into two sections — administration departments and public works department—and is mainly concerned with recommendations for simplifying the clerical work of the various departments. At the same time, it contains suggestions for improving control over certain municipal activities and the usefulness of the information provided by municipal records.

"However, we do not believe that any direct savings arising out of staff reductions can be expected as a result of our recommendations," the report adds.

NOT OVER-STAFFED

"The number of clerical staff employed by the town is not excessive," continues the report, "and any reductions in staff time arising out of the implementation of our recommendations can readily be absorbed in taking over some of the clerical work presently being performed by technical staff, whose time could be more usefully employed in other work.

"On the other hand, we believe there is considerable scope for savings over the long term through the more effective use of staff and the funds that are available for expenditure on municipal activities. To realize these savings it will be necessary to place more emphasis on the planning and control of such activities, as outlined in the main body of our report."

The report says that under normal circumstances and with the right type of individual available to fill the key position, the Clerk - Comptroller form of government is the most efficient and effective for a municipality such as Trenton. "The chief drawback to the plan, and the probable reason that more municipalities have not adopted this type of organization structure, is its dependence on finding the right man for the senior position," it adds.

PRAISES CLERK

"The Town of Trenton is fortunate in having in its Clerk-Comptroller someone who can meet the requirements of this type of position. We are not suggesting, therefore, any major change in the town's present plan of organization. We would like to comment very briefly, however, on one potential drawback to this plan, which, while not presenting a problem at the moment, could create a problem at some point in the future."

In this connection, the report said the success of the plan depends not only on finding the right man for the job, but also on having a strong staff under the Clerk-Comptroller. "Because of the responsibility given to an individual in this type of position," says the report, "there is neither the need for, nor the tendency to build up as strong a staff under him as would be the case if some of the staff had to act as department heads under the Council-Committee form of municipal government."

The report observes that it is often difficult under this system to develop potential replacements for the chief administrative officer, should the need for such a replacement arise. "For this reason," the report continues, "it is never too early for council to start thinking about how such a situation might be handled, both in terms of appraising the potential of the present staff and possibly how additional candidates might be introduced into the organization as the opportunity presents itself. The problem here, of course, is how to attract individuals with the qualities to fill the position of chief administrative officer, and to keep them interested until the position becomes vacant."

The report goes on to recommend changing the name of "Clerk-Comptroller" to Clerk-Administrator". In our opinion, this title (Clerk-Comptroller) implies that the incumbent is responsible primarily for the financial and "clerical" aspects of the town's civic administration. This is obviously not the case since both the Town Engineer and Fire Chief report to council through the Clerk-Comptroller."

The report recommends that the "meter maid" be responsible to the tax collector rather than the traffic committee. "This is the type of relationship found in most municipalities," says the report, "and it would mean that a designated individual was available to whom the meter maid could go with any administrative problem."

The report then goes on to explore more fully certain procedures in other departments which, it says, "unnecessarily complicate the work of the staff in other departments."

WORKS REPORT

In the public works department survey, Woods, Gordon notes that a common criticism of such departments in both small and medium size municipalities is the lack of planning of future construction work.

"In the case of Trenton, the Town Engineer has this matter under consideration and has developed some short range plans. However, there is little evidence of any formal long-range staff setting out priorities and estimates for several years in advance, which could be used to guide council in its decisions. Work should be planned in this manner for at least five years in advance and should be up-dated each year. Since construction forms the major portion of the capital budget, it is important that estimated costs be prepared with reasonable accuracy, with a clear description of how the town will benefit by the expenditure. Only by this means can the members of council make any rational decisions in their long-range planning.

"There is a large construction program contemplated for 1963," says the report, giving the following statistics:

Total construction work planned for this year, $650,000, compared with $332,000 of work in 1962 — an increase of $297,000.

"The plans for construction beyond 1963 are indefinite," says the report, "but indications are that the total value of new construction will be about $250,000 to $300,000 per year."

Work planned for 1963 represents a substantial increase in the work load of the department, says the report, "and we question whether or not it would be more prudent to delay a portion of this program until the following year — providing of course, that such a delay would be feasible in terms of the pressures with which the work needs to be carried out.

APPROVE METHOD

"The engineer is planning to assign $250,000 of construction work in 1963 to consulting engineering firms with this procedure as it will allow a temporary peak in construction to be passed without hiring additional staff. A consultant's staff is available on reasonably short notice and can provide design and supervision services through to completion of the project. Relatively little liaison with the Town Engineer will be required, provided the work assigned to the consultant is a reasonably self-contained part of the program. Work in the recently annexed areas would be the logical type of assignment to give to a consultant. The Ontario Department of Highways maintains a list of qualified consulting engineers for the guidance of municipalities.

"Apart from the work to be given to consultants, there still remains $400,000 of construction work to be completed in 1963; of this $300,000 will be designed and built by the Public Works Department, and $100,000 will be designed by the Department and built by contract. Of the $300,000 built by the Department, $245,000 will be for roads and curb construction. This is a big increase over the $90,000 of projects completed in 1962 and we question whether this is not too optimistic a figure to use; possibly some of this should also be let to contract. We say another $50,000 to $100,000 or some additional road work passed to the consultants. A more realistic breakdown in construction work for 1963 might be: 1. Designed and constructed by the Department $200,000; 2. Designed by the Public Works Department and let to contract $150,000; 3. Designed and supervised by consultants $300,000: Total $650,000.

"Such a breakdown would have the advantage of not only retaining the amount of construction under the direct supervision of the Department's staff closer to what could be expected as a normal level of construction in future years."

The report then goes on to outline in detail recommendations for changes in the scheduling of field operations and the clerical work of technical staff which, it says, would increase the efficiency of the department.

Town Brochures On Display At Boat Show

TRENTON — New Yorkers visiting the American Boat Show in their city in January, were handed out Town of Trenton, Ontario brochures. One Trentonian who caught the show reports that the booklets seemed to be in demand and that one of his American friends told him he intended to visit Trenton on the strength of the literature.

The brochures were mailed to Norman Bonter, director of information with the national citizens' committee, in New York and he arranged for their distribution at the boat show. Mr. Bonter is a former Trentonian.

Elmer Bonter, Trenton's public relations' officer, reports that several hundred brochures have been sen' to the Canadian Boat Show in Toronto, which opens today. Mr. Bonter designed the brochures last year, at the request of town council. They have been distributed by the town office and mailed out to points across Canada and in the U.S. by the Trenton Chamber of Commerce.

A further report from the American show says that the display of the American-made OMC 17 cruiser stole the show. OMC boats, made at Trenton, have been sent to the Canadian show for display.

Toronto Man Faces Charges In Kingston

TRENTON—Police here last night escorted 37-year-old Kenneth Brian Kennedy of Toronto to Kingston where he will face charges of false pretenses and possession of a stolen car.

Kennedy, arrested Thursday after detectives staked out a rented car outside a Belleville hotel, also faces a charge of leaving the scene of an accident in Kingston.

Belleville police revealed they found a large number of credit cards owned by a Toronto man in Kennedy's possession.

Belleville detectives say other charges are also pending against Kennedy in Quinte district.

Yesterday, he was questioned here at length before being turned over to Kingston police.

Mayor Speaks On Report of Wood-Gordon

TRENTON — Commenting on the Woods-Gordon report of ousting factors at the municipal office and in the public works department, released for publication today, Mayor James MacDonald had this to say:

"We have employed highly skilled and competent people to examine the operations of the two departments involved. The reports recommend a number of changes which will improve the internal operations of these departments. There are no serious criticisms of either department. Rather than be unhappy with the findings because they don't say what you wanted to hear, you should be pleased that the recommendations indicate that Trenton has good administration in these departments." (The last sentence is directed to those town citizens who read the report.)

"The reports should be reassuring to everyone," the mayor adds in his written comment. "The changes recommended do not reflect any gross inefficiency on the part of the staff."

Mayor MacDonald said today that a report on the cost of running the Trenton Police Department, prepared by a special O.P.P. investigator, would be released next week.

STILL A POSSIBILITY

LONDON (Reuters) — British officials said today no Anglo-American discussions are going on about any visit by President Kennedy to Britain in the near future. But they did not entirely rule out the possibility of a London visit by the president in the late spring when he comes to Europe for scheduled visits to Rome and Bonn.

New Napoleon?

The French coup de grace for the current British effort at entry to the European Common Market is an indication of two things.

First is General de Gaulle's fine appreciation of old comrades in arms, in fact comrades who once kept him in arms, when the shoe is on the other foot and his former comrades now need assistance which only he can render.

Second is the attempt to put an old motor into a new vehicle in the move to establish a Paris-Bonn axis around which will rotate the rest of the members of the European Common Market.

Of the two we would say the latter is the more dangerous of the two developments to the world at large and the protagonists in particular. There is no doubt that Great Britain can find a profitable place for herself in another economic union, say a revamped Commonwealth arrangement combined with a trans-Atlantic common market involving North America. Such is certainly not outside the realm of possibility when one takes into consideration the United States' recent decision to enter into economic unions and the Commonwealth countries' reluctance to sever old ties.

The European Common Market, however, was a most progressive step when initiated. There is still no reason why it cannot remain unique in its ultra-international aspects of different nations of different background, language and character combining to forget old antagonisms and differences to work for the common good.

General de Gaulle's current diplomatic, political and military actions, therefore, clearly indicate that he is attempting to prostitute the high ideals of the ECM to promote the ego-maniacal ulterior thoughts of either personal grandeur and pre-eminence or of making Western Europe a "tight little island" subject to French direction.

What Napoleon attempted to achieve militarily 150 years ago, General de Gaulle is trying to achieve diplomatically, or perhaps rather undiplomatically. If such were not the case there seems little real necessity for the recent Bonn-Paris agreement.

We doubt if Italy, The Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg will allow this infringement upon their political rights in the ECM, when a real project, it must be realized, is the eventual political union of its members with no one country or minor alliance ruling the roost.

New Housing Problem

Hon. Davie Fulton, recently appointed provincial leader of the Progressive Conservative party in British Columbia, has returned to Ottawa "to wrap up what he called an extensive revision of the National Housing Act, before he puts federal politics."

Mr. Fulton declined to give reporters details of the proposed amendments. However, it is understood, says a report from Ottawa, that the changes will not include a frequently-requested provision to make NHA loans available for the purchase of existing houses.

Of course not. Such an alteration might butter a few political parsnips, pleasing home owners who now find it difficult to get their investment back when they find it necessary to sell their homes. But it would almost inevitably reduce the demand for new homes and would thus reduce employment.

The National Housing Act at one time made financially possible what was then socially necessary —supplying new homes for a shelter-short nation at the conclusion of the Second Great War.

But that shortage has long since disappeared. The past few years the NHA has served as a tool, and a very useful one, in keeping unemployment as low as possible.

At the same time, it does not make economic sense to keep on building more houses than are actually needed. That stage, if not already reached, will soon be here. It is difficult to see how this can result in anything else but a sharp decline in the resale prices of homes. Supply and demand, in a free enterprise system, will eventually provide a remedy. But, because the housing business is now only partly free, with the government intervening to assist in the construction of new homes, this adjustment will be delayed. Therefore, when it comes, it will be sharper than would otherwise be the case. Some people are going to suffer.

It is doubtful whether the old adage that buying a home is one of the best possible investments still holds true.

Strictly Personal

World's Goods Not Enough For Artists

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A college student majoring in music asked me after a lecture not long ago, "What would you say is the chief difference between the artist and the layman?"

I gave him some long, clumsy and not quite satisfactory answer. The question rang a dim bell in my mind, however, and upon returning here, I hunted through my library and eventually found what I had been looking for.

It was a paragraph from the preface to a collection of short plays, "The Angel That Troubled the Waters," published by Thornton Wilder almost 40 years ago. In speaking of the anguish involved in the creative process, Wilder says:

"An artist is one who knows how life should be lived at its best and is always aware of how badly he is doing it. An artist is one who knows he is failing in living. He arranges by making something fair, and a layman is one who suspects he is failing in living but is consoled by his success in golf, in love, or in business.

It is the degree of talent, of course, that determines how much of an artist one may be. But it is the inability to be consoled by other forms of enjoyment than the play of distinguishes the artist from the layman. If he cannot be, he wants to make rather than to have.

Most of us fail at living, because most of us fail far short of being what we have ought to be. The artist not only knows this, but he refuses to accept substitutes in his background sessions; but they do not satisfy him. He cannot delude himself that they compensate for his failure at living or his failure in making "something fair."

A friend of mine, many years ago, showed great promise as a poet. But he turned to a siren song of Hollywood, and promoted there, soon acquiring a vast income from the appropriate swimming-pool, psychoanalyst and ex-wife-who-was-attached. Now he has a film he had written had just won an Academy Award.

But he was a misfit, because a book of poems he had just published had been panned in an obscure literary journal not read by more than a few thousand people. His commercial success might have consoled him for his failure in his personal life, but it could not console him for his deterioration as a poet, as a maker.

One reason that civilization has always valued the arts is this prickly conscience of the artist, which gives him no rest unless he is working, and working at his highest pitch, not to possess something but to distribute it, not to collect or amass but to scatter for all people and for all times. It pays with art for his deficiencies in life.

Made Mummy Look Nice

Hamilton Spectator

"One does like to make one's Mummy just as nice as possible," remarked the American painter, James McNeill Whistler, confided to a friend in London about 1870. He had just finished "Arrangement in Grey and Black No. 2," a mother's chair study which became famous, to the point of tedium, as "Whistler's Mother."

The truth is that while there was nothing tedious about the picture, "Whistler's Mother" suffered like many a movie star from over-exposure (figuratively, that is), particularly at the mouths of vaudevillians who pretended that the lady had plaen from her chair and was therefore "off her rocker" again. She has also appeared on a couple of hundred million postage stamps, which made matters worse. But immediately after she was painted, "Whistler's Mother" was so greatly admired that Thomas Carlyle, the historian, wanted his portrait painted much the same way, and this became known as "Arrangement in Grey and Black No. 3."

And now there's talk at the American Embassy in Paris that "Whistler's Mother" may follow Leonardo Da Vinci's "Mona Lisa" to the shipyards from the Louvre, transported overseas and sent on a tour of the U.S. But unlike the famous Italian lady, "Whistler's Mother" once was a young girl in Lowell, Mass. — so who knows, maybe the Americans will think it's time Mummy decided to come home and stay in her rocker like a good girl should.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 1st, 1943.

Miss Mary Jury, Miss Gwyneth Smith, Miss Jean Schneider, Miss Penelope Waldie and Miss Catherine Hogle have returned to McMaster University after spending a few days with Mrs. E. A. Hogle on Catherine Street.

Mrs. A. E. Boyd and Bobby spent the weekend in Toronto attending the christening of Peter and Paul, twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Ryan. Rev. D. Walters Christie, pastor of Rhodes Avenue United Church, officiated at the ceremony.

TV Has Only Front Page Detroit Free Press

Eric Sevareid, one of the greatest television newsmen, fingered a major limitation of his craft here the other night. Asked why TV news broadcasts "exaggerate" what they report Sevareid did not pettishly deny the charge.

Instead he told the Economic Club audience at the "CBS News Analysis" program sponsor: "We have only a front page".

Sevareid, whose syndicated column appears Saturdays in the Free Press, then put things in their proper perspective when either his own background in newspapering or any newsman's comment is under reference on the printed word.

Too many newsmen in both mediums unavoidably and sadly miss the value of the competitor. Newspapermen don't like to admit that electronic competitor's advantage with speed or the impact of moving pictures in news reporting.

The greater error, in our naturally limited point of view, is the idiotic contention of some TV-promoters that citizens can get "all the news they need" from the boob tube.

New York and Cleveland viewers of the newspaper strikes are proving for the umpteenth time, with eloquently bitter word-of-complaint that newspaper are fundamentals for the literate citizenry.

They are fundamental for everything from up - to - the - minute TV program listings themselves to a meaningfully balanced presentation of the news.

Even the "front page" which is all Sevareid said TV has, can't cover as many stories or any of them in the same detail as can the newspaper's front page.

The consumer can't shop around for stories that interest him. In a 15-minute newscast, the listener is forced-fed some items that don't interest him and unavoidably denied dozens of stories that would.

In both advertising and informational newspapers can offer the independent consumer a vastly wider array of material and include more than can be absorbed only by a reader. Telephone numbers, grocery prices and election statistics are largely lost on radio and TV audiences, for example.

Television will remain primarily an entertainment medium. Its limited forays into hard news are a wonderful supplement to newspapers, but that's as far as it can go.

In fact, if you happen to tune in a few minutes late, television won't go that far.

World Hunger Exaggerated

Oshawa Times

Canadians are constantly being told that they are "rich" people who could be and should be doing a lot more to make life more bearable for the needy people in other lands. A favorite statistic of the critics is the total number of hungry Asians (or Africans or South Americans) who would be happy to exist on just the food that we throw into our garbage cans. But perhaps we are not as heartless as the critics make out; and perhaps the hunger that we are told about is not, in fact, nearly so widespread as some agencies would have us believe.

What is really required, it seems, is a thorough study of the areas and extent of need, in order that our aid may be wisely given. And the study should be impartial, not carried out by an agency which has a vested interest in the building of a huge organization to administer the aid.

An Oxford professor — Professor Colin Clark, director of the Oxford Agricultural Economic Research Unit — has just told a United Nations students' conference that not only is that frequently-quoted statistic about the fact that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations is constantly having difficulties in giving away even the 10 million worth of surplus food.

"This figure that two-thirds of the world is starving," said Professor Clark, "is just an arithmetical error. It all traces down to an old estimate in 1950 by Lord Boyd Orr. In this case he was working on a table of 1934-38 which had been presented to him by the FAO. They were not very good figures, but he made things worse by making two columns in the table. The one column was a list of the minimum dietary requirements and the other the proposed daily intakes in terms.

"The figure for the number of people who did not have sufficient calories was then about 15 per cent of the world's population, about 450 million people. That is a very, very, very difficult to reach them."

Professor Clark did not belittle the problem of the fact that perhaps 15 per cent of the world's population is undernourished, but he and other speakers emphasized that in giving things away there were problems of transportation and distribution, of diplomacy, of knowing who was really in need, of unfamiliarity with what is offered, and even of national vanities. In India, for instance, food" supplies were always distributed so that the outcast, the very neediest, came last; it was India, too, that accused a French economist of advocating a form of colonialism when he suggested giving Europe's surplus steel to that country.

Fine Talk By Old Man

St. Thomas Times-Journal

John W. R. Scott, a British Journalist, founder and editor for many years of the Country-man died the other day at the age of 96. When he sent his Christmas cards for his many friends there was only a brief message to be printed on them.

"The longer I live," he said, "I find life more wonderful." His message ended:

"One of my greatest joys is to note the promise shown by the younger people of today and to mark the ever-widening opportunities open to these citizens of the future.

"The increasing self-reliance of the very young is a most failing delight."

We would like to hear an old man talk.

Diabetes In Childhood Is a Dangerous Disease

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can tension, as a result of seeing other children in the family eat candy have an effect on the blood sugar of a diabetic boy of six? — Mrs. R.B.

Yes. I shortened the above letter but it pointed out that the child's blood sugar repeatedly stayed normal while he was away from home on a visit, but rose after he returned — and into the atmosphere of being denied candy while his brothers and sisters ate it.

Sometimes this happens. Nervousness, tenseness, family discord can upset the smoothness of control of a diabetic.

If it's a six-year-old boy who can't really understand why the others have things that are denied him — well, that's enough to upset a little fellow's sense of justice.

Handling a diabetic child takes a lot of tact and diplomacy on the part of parents. And good judgment.

Diabetes in childhood is a dangerous disease and you can't take liberties with it. Cakes and candy are out. Or virtually so. Once in a blue moon, say for birthday, Christmas or perhaps one or two other occasions in a year, a sweet treat may be permitted, making allowance in the regular diet for the extra calories. But the treat shouldn't be too rich.

The rest of the time the youngster should be kept on a well-balanced, wholesome diet, but without sugar.

This isn't a deprivation. Candy is not essential in a child's diet. In fact, it can be overdone with any child, to the detriment of appetite, teeth and disposition.

If I had a diabetic child, along with several non-diabetics, I'd be sparing on candy or other sweets for all of them.

I'd also pay attention to something else that I've noticed. You can pet and pamper and spoil a diabetic child in other ways, but I'd try very hard not to. I'd try to treat the children the same, each with his fair share of love, praise and attention — and scolding when necessary. Try not to let any of them feel left out, or set aside, or given special favoritism.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am in my late teens and am no longer bothered with acne but my problem is scars and large pores. I have heard about a peeling called dermabrasion. Do you know the cost? This is important because I want to become a model. — Rth.

Dermabrasion or "skin planing" is quite effective in removing surface scars. (Deeper pits may remain but are less noticeable.) Many dermatologists (skin specialists) do this, as well as plastic surgeons, but to get a cost estimate you would have to let the doctor see how much needs to be done.

THE PACKSACK

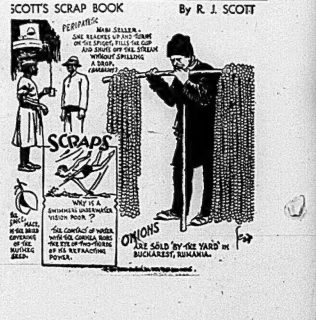
By GREGORY CLARK

When you got into the Senior Fourth Book, as grade eight used to be called, one of the things you were taught was how to write a letter applying for a job. I understand you don't write letter any more. You send for an application form, write it and that's the end of the hands of a personnel expert.

But a good letter still gets a good job. The general sales manager of a big manufacturing enterprise showed me the letter he himself wrote, fourteen years ago. He found it in the files of the company of which he is now a large shareholder.



"Dear Sir," it said. "I may not be as good as I think I am. But I have reached the point at which I am prepared to risk finding out."

The former general sales manager was so impressed with this approach that he hired my friend. And years afterward, the young man turned out to be as good as he thought he was.

Style is not a matter of mannerisms, when he showed me the letter.

International Red Cross Work Outlined by Speaker

Albert Batten, of the Canadian Red Cross headquarters in Toronto, addressed the annual meeting of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society, at the Thomas Parish House, in Belleville last night. He spoke generally of the international work of the Red Cross, and of his own work in Iran, after the earthquake last year.

He explained that the Canadian Red Cross maintains a staff of experienced workers on 24 hours calls at all times. In case of a disaster, the Society sends delegates to advise the local Red Cross Society, or sends a complement to join an international Red Cross unit assembled at the disaster area.

During the past few years, he said, the Canadian Red Cross has sent staff to Austria, Morocco, the Congo, Chile, British Honduras and Iran. Canadian Red Cross material aid was sent to 29 different countries during the first nine months of 1962.

The disastrous Iranian earthquake struck September 1, 1962, at 10.30 p.m., Mr. Batten said. During 30 seconds, it killed about 11,000 people, injured 5,000, and left about 75,000 homeless.

On September 2, the Canadian Red Cross was asked for help, and within 48 hours they had $22,000 worth of material assembled and loaded on a Yukon bound plane at an organizer, with a public relations man from the Society.

Mr. Batten described the disaster area as primitive. The people had been living in mud huts, which had collapsed during the earthquake, and the only communications were over footpaths. Some of the village struck were so isolated that they were unknown until the rescue units found them.

The relief operation was a joint effort by the Red Cross, the Red Crescent, and the Red Lion and Sun organizations. These, Mr. Batten said, are all branches of the Red Cross. Moslem countries usually use the Red Crescent as their symbol, refusing to accept the cross as a symbol of mercy, and the Iranian Society flies the Red Lion and Sun insignia.

The U.S. army assisted with a 100-bed field hospital and with five helicopters used to find and transport injured persons. A total of more than 15,000 tents were used to house the survivors of the disaster, Mr. Batten said.

The lecture was illustrated with slides, taken by the speaker in Iran. Mr. Batten was introduced to the branch by Don Stirling, and thanked by Miss Josephine Tickell.

Flattering Wool Dress

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

Here's a find—a daytime wool dress that is easy to wear and flattering to most figures.

The shallow scoop neck can take jewellry or not, as desired. Princess seaming resolves into lap-over slits near the hem and lend a little flare when the wearer is in motion.

The dress comes in black or bright jewel colors.

I.O.D.E. Holds "Spinsters Dance"

STIRLING — The annual spinsters' dance sponsored by the Hon. J. R. Cooke Chapter I.O.D.E. was held Friday evening in Stirling Community Hall with good attendance. Music for dancing was provided by Jack Keane's orchestra of Trenton. The members served delectable refreshments to the guests.

The hall was decorated to represent a winter scene with icebergs, penguins and other decor. The ceiling was covered with a motif in blue and the windows were lovely with various pastel shades to represent northern lights shining on icebergs.

O.S. School Students See Play

Two bus loads of grade 13 students from Quinte Secondary School travelled to Toronto last Saturday to see a matinee performance of George B. Shaw's play "Arms And The Man." Arrangements for the students to attend this successful Crest Theatre Foundation presentation were made by Trevor Dickinson, head of the English department of Quinte. The students were accompanied by Mrs. Joanne Claus and Mr. Douglas Trumble of the English department.

VISIT CAPITAL

The Student Parliament and the Eighty Percent Club of the Quinte Secondary School spent Monday in the nation's capital.

The morning was spent in a tour of the Royal Canadian Mint; a bus trip to the many points of interest within the city, and a visit to the Dominion Experimental Farm. The bus trip around the city included a visit to the RCMP headquarters at Rockliffe, and the National Research Council.

After a guided tour of the main barns and museum of the Experimental Farm, the students ate lunch in the Farm's cafeteria. All arrangements for the visits to the Mint and the Farm were made by Mr. Ken Grills, M.P. for Hastings South.

VIEW HOUSE SESSION

At 2.15, the students were met at the Parliament buildings by Mr. Grills who arranged that the students be taken to the Speaker's Gallery after the Speaker's Parade.

Following an hour of watching the House in session, the students were taken to a committee room where Hon. Howard Green, Minister of External Affairs, addressed the group and later answered many of their questions.

Mr. Grills also spent considerable time answering the many questions which were put to him by the students. A chance meeting with Mr. Real Caouette, a personal friend of Mr. Grills, and a chat with Senator White, Speaker of the Senate, brought a very rewarding day to a close.

The students were accompanied by Mr. W. Woolley and Mr. D. Trumble, staff advisors to Student Parliament.

FAITHFUL BIRDS

'Alaska', God's Country, Thrills Capacity Audience at BCI

The "Lumberjack's Alaskan Adventure," tenth annual World Travelogue Series presented last evening at the Collegiate auditorium under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, with Don Cooper, Lumberjack, author, photographer, and world traveller, as narrator, thrilled and delighted the capacity audience with its wonderful beauty, and dignity, accompanied by an uninhibited narration.

Mr. Cooper, son of the late George R. Cooper, State senator of Montana, fell under 'the spell of the North,' becoming a dred-in-the-wool lumberjack spending the past seven years in the 49th State. "Since he was first able to read, Alaska has been his favorite subject and he has 'armchair' travelled many miles through the north with James Oliver Curwood, (noted author, and Robert Service, poet), before he managed to save the price of a ticket for Juneau in the heart of Alaska's timber resources."

GOD'S COUNTRY

"Alaska," said Mr. Cooper, in beginning his beautiful and colorful travelogue, "is God's Country, and is not all ice and snow, as supposed; but abounding in wild berries, of which there are 23 kinds, only two of which are poisonous, while beautiful flowers flourish in lush meadows."

Originally, Alaska was a possession of Russia, who sold it to the United States for two cents per acre. The people are composed of native Indians of Canadian and Indians, the same as in Canada.

Speaking of the wild life, he said he had never seen a polar bear, but that there were seven species of black bears. One of his intriguing scenes showed a large, sad and perplexed looking bear, fishing for the salmon, which abound in the north, for her four little cubs, while the 'head' of the family, snoozed nearby, now and then awakened by a salmon that got by and flung a cursory look in the direction of his family, went back to sleep again.

FAUNA

Other scenes showed the red fox; the Rocky Mountain goats; one outstanding picture was of a large snow-white goat high up on the tip of a rocky peak, overlooking a large herd of the heights, which he was while another picture was of a large herd of goats, the mother and the little kids. In winter they are covered by a heavy wool growth, which is shed as the warmer season approaches.

Seals were noted swimming in the icy waters; a school of whales, spouting water; huge fish salmon, so numerous the waters were almost black; halibut fishing; the gathering of octopus for sale; and the building of igloos.

Among the birds were the large flocks of snow-white gulls as they wheeled for the shining little fish which come in schools; a lordly grouse was shown beating his wings, "drumming," a call of love call which can be heard for long distances; the colorful kingfisher.

BEAUTIFUL WATERFALLS

There were beautiful waterfalls sig-nagging down from dizzy heights; a fresh water lake above a glacier; little villages near the shore line; tall gleaming walls of ice, awe-inspiring beside which Mr. Cooper and his "Buddy" passed in their outboard motor through the ice clogged river; the thrilling and beautiful "Hidden Valley" which was reached through a natural tunnel in the rock; and scenes of the main cities, Anchorage, with a population of 100,000; Fairbanks, with 35,000; Sitka, the old Russian capital and Juneau, the capital, so named from a gold miner, Juneau.

Among the wild flowers, which were many, a picture of a wild rose, deep pink in color, measured approximately seven inches across. Other flowers were in ball-shape and in shades of blue and mauve.

MIGHTY TREES

The mighty trees, many of which towered 250 feet, were topped by means of dynamite, electrically exploded, making a clean topping with less danger to the toppers, and canoes made from hollowed out tree trunks, expertly shaped, a time-honored profession.

Mr. Cooper who was introduced by Dr. R. R. Brain, closed his talk by a quotation from Robert Service: "Its beauty fills me with wonder, and its silence with peace."

QUEEN BESS'S WIGS

As Elizabeth Ist's red hair faded, she had scores of wigs made in orange, yellow and auburn.

Congregational Meeting

TABERNACLE UNITED CHURCH

On Tuesday evening the congregational meeting of Tabernacle United Church was held in the church hall. The large number attending enjoyed a bounteous pot-luck supper arranged by the U.C.W. of the church.

Following the evening meal, the Rev. Morgan G. McFarlane, led the congregation in a hymn-sing. Mrs. Douglas Shaw favored the group with the singing of two vocal numbers, "I Believe" and "The Valley of Laughter". Miss Jane McFarlane gave a lovely violin solo — the three movements of "The Bell Boy Suite" by Helms. Mr. Clifford Templer, church music director, acted as accompanist.

PANEL

The members and adherents of the church joined in a "Time of Remembrance" for the many members of the congregation who had died during the past year. Following the presentation of the minutes of the 1961 annual meeting, Mr. McFarlane expressed his thanks for the encouragement and support given by leaders and the congregation. "These last two and a half years have been pleasant years," he said both for himself and his family as they have shared the goodly fellowship of the people of this church.

Mr. McFarlane honored Mr. Clifford Templer, the music director of the church who by his great ability and faithful and dedication has been able to make the new organ sound so beautiful and for directing the choir so capably in the Service of Praise. He commended the work of Mrs. Douglas Shaw as she directs the junior choir.

Mr. McFarlane expressed his pleasure in seeing the Sunday Church School grow, breaking records of a good number of years. The Hi-C, the Teen-age group, has shown growth and strength under the leadership of Corporal Harold Howling. The United Church Women, the organization of the church, has had a successful beginning. The Men's Club is enjoying good fellowship and doing great service, and the Couples' Club continues with its great fellowship and interesting programs.

On behalf of the congregation, Mr. Clifford Templer moved a vote of appreciation to the minister and officers of the church for their leadership and they had given in the past year.

Mr. Douglas Simpson, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the proposed slate of officers to fill the vacancies arising this year. Newly-elected Elders are: Messrs Larry Thompson, Harold Jones, Dale Martin, Carl O'Hara, O. J. Riddell and Vernon Wilson. Re-elected Elders are: Messrs. A. D. Archibald, Harry Bailey, Roy Brickman, Frank Douglas, Clayton Faul, Ted Fennell, Gerry Ivey, Robert Knox, John Lyon, C. H. McBride and T. L. Wambolds.

Following the business part of the meeting Mr. Harvey Putman gave an illustrated address on "Cross Roads—Africa." Mr. Putman visited Africa with a group of people from Canada to the white man a realization of the "great commission" that Jesus gave "go into all the world and preach the gospel."

Mr. Putman challenged his listeners to educate themselves of today to prepare themselves for great endeavors that could be accomplished soon.

Mr. & Mrs. Whitfield Mark 45th Anniversary

Over 20 friends and relatives were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Whitfield, R.R. 5, Belleville, on Wednesday evening to celebrate the Whitfields' 45th wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Whitfield, the former Jennie Laughlin, welcomed the guests into the same home over which threshold she was carried as a bride 45 years ago, when they had their dinner and later play cards.

Among those present were Mrs. Whitfield's sister, Mrs. Ethel Carr, and her friend, Mrs. J. Poste, of Toronto. Of the couple's six children, only two were present, Mrs. D. (Mary) Andrews, and Mrs. D. (Bessie) Wellbanks, both of Belleville, while Mrs. J. (Margaret) Harner is with her husband who is stationed with the RCAF in France; Mrs. A. D. (Ruth) Pierson, of Ottawa, and son, Herbert at Sudbury and John, of Toronto, were unable to attend.

There are 13 grandchildren.

"It was just a case of falling for the milkman," Mr. Whitfield explained when asked how he met his wife. "I brought the milk to the house were Jennie was boarding."

He has continued to farm the land he purchased two years before his marriage.

The Experts Say

Every Child Can Be Taught Music to Certain Degree

By PATRICIA BUSAK

TORONTO (CP) — "Every child can be taught music to a certain degree and many more children can become interested in music than people think," says Walter Susskind, conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

He adds, however, that a little force or "friendly persuasion" is needed to develop a child's appreciation of music and musical education, at some stage, has to be forced.

When children are about seven they should be sent for music lessons and should continue with them until 12 or 13 at which time they should be allowed to decide for themselves whether to continue.

"But music is much too complex for even a gifted child much under the age of seven.

It's important to make children aware that in learning music they will enrich their lives, says Mr Susskind, adding that they must be helped to see what is beautiful in music in order that lessons and practice will become enjoyable.

SCALES ARE BORING

Modern teaching methods make the whole field more exciting for youngsters, he says. For example, in piano — the branch in which Mr. Susskind specialized before becoming a conductor — scales and other boring finger exercises have almost been eliminated.

"Every piece contains enough exercises to bring about a fine technique eventually."

Mr. Susskind takes issue with those who give lack of rhythm or tone deafness for not encouraging their children in music.

"Anyone who can walk has rhythm . . . and the statement 'no rhythm' usually means no developed sense of rhythm."

Real tone deafness is rare, he says, although a child who is tone deaf should not be forced to continue studying music because, to him, musical sounds are often unpleasant.

The conductor recommends that children be treated as adults if they are to become interested—"like all people, they want to think they are older than they really are."

This applies to the choice of music for the child to play. "Many, in an effort to choose pieces" often make children dislike music.

"These are fine in the very early lessons but any child past the age of 10 or 12 should rather play a piece called Sonatina than one called The Jolly Miller."

To stimulate interest in good music, Mr. Susskind suggests taking children to symphony concerts where there is lots of color and sound. But don't subject them to chamber music concerts which are less attractive to children because the music is pure and only one or two elements of color.

Mr. Susskind personally finds he should be taught to like all music, both classical and jazz.

He's convinced that the atmosphere in the home is important. If there is a normal, healthy interest in music, the child is likely to become interested. "But in a home where Beethoven is never mentioned the children probably won't ask about him."

SANDWICH UNION

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Tupah Mark Silver Anniversary

On January 12th, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Tuepah were pleasantly surprised when their family, relatives, friends and neighbors gathered at the Neighbors' Aid hall, 2nd Thurlow, to honor them on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary.

Previous to their arrival at the hall they had been entertained at a dinner party at the home of the bride's sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fobert, and upon arrival at the hall they were given seats of honor, when W. J. Tuepah, father of the bridegroom performed duties as chairman.

Mrs. Fred Johnston and Mary Alice Tuepah presented them with corsages.

The evening was spent in progressive euchre; prizes were won by Messrs. Gerald Johnston and Fred Johnston, and ladies, by Mrs. Anna Golden and Mrs. Genevieve Thompson.

Mr. W. J. Tuepah gave a recitation, suitable for the occasion.

Bernard Tuepah read an address in which he expressed good wishes and extended hearty congratulations to the honored couple.

The presentation of a platform rocker was made by Vincent, Eugene and Mary Alice Tuepah.

The bride and bridegroom of 25 years also received many other useful gifts, money and cards, for which they voiced their warmest thanks and appreciation for both parts and gifts and invited all to visit them at their home.

The hostess and her assistants served refreshments.

The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing and a social time together.

All departed wishing the couple many more years of health and happiness together.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Tuepah are pictured cutting their anniversary cake on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary.

Christian Dior Revives Bosom, Retains Knee

PARIS (Reuters) — Christian Dior's new "tapered silhouette" revives the bosom, relaxes the waistline and retains the knee-cap hemline.

But designer Marc Bohan has made no attempt to revolutionize fashion.

After two seasons of tricky skirts, Bohan turns towards ultra simplicity.

The tapered silhouette shown today is wide at the top with prominent rounded sleeves fitted in close to the neckline. Rooms are emphasized by darts and the new sleeve cuts.

The new look for 1963 is young, up to date, and will look as well on Main Street as on the stylish Avenue Montaigne in Paris.

Question: Have you directions for making sugariess orange marmalade? I have used your other jams for many years and find them all superior to the commercial products . . C.N.A.

Answer: Thank you ma'am.

SUGARLESS ORANGE MARMALADE

(Repeated from April 24/52.)

Three large navel oranges are washed, then cut in halves crosswise, squeezed on an orange squeezer to remove the juice, which is reserved in a covered jar. The white pulp and membrane are scraped from the inside of the skins with a strong spoon. The rinds are sliced as wafer thin as possible with a sharp knife. To the scraped-out pulp in a bowl add 1 cup cold water, and let this soak overnight, covered. To the sliced rind in a bowl add 1 cup cold water and let stand overnight, covered. Store in two covered orange juice in refrigerator overnight. In the morning strain the water from the white pulp into the rinds, pressing it firmly through sieve. Discard white pulp. Simmer rinds in water, covered, for 1 hour. To the squeezed-out orange juice add 1½ tablespoons best quality gelatine and let it soak while rinds are cooking. When rinds have cooked 1 hour add to them the orange juice containing the gelatine and add 2 tablespoons pure vanilla, 10 or 12 sugary tablets and the water. Stir over low heat until sugaryl tablets are dissolved and mixture boils all over for 1 minute. Remove from heat and pour into sterile small glasses and seal at once with hot wax. Variation: adding a second hot coating when the first is cold. Cover with clean linen and think that you should expect this to keep at room temperature, for it is chancy business trying for a perfect seal with paraffin, but I know it will keep for at least a month when stored in the refrigerator. The reducers can go to town on this too.

Letter: Cold, nasty weather always inspires me to make homemade soup, as this morning's blizzard, combined with your account of Scotch broth in yesterday's paper is the reason why I have soup bones from my deep freeze simmering on the stove. I make mine with just about everything in it but the kitchen sink, and you were quite right about the shopping: I see if there was enough for next day — somehow it always turns out. This morning I used up shredded potatoes, carrot, turnip, onions, celery, rice and barley that was in the bottom of pieces. All these plus 2 cans tomato soup (add ed during last boiling) and seasoned with salt and pepper to taste to make a meal in itself . . . Joyce M.

Answer: Thank you, Joyce. You made me hungry for a taste of your brew. To unanimated soup makers I should add 2 quarts water, 1 cup each of the vegetables and 2 tablespoons rice and ½ cup of tomato juice and sugar for 40 days. It has never happened since.

6. When the peacock loudly bawls. Soon we'll have both rain and squalls.

7. Birds seem to sing most before a storm, perhaps because of a drop in atmospheric pressure.

7. A cat washing itself in the window forecasts rain.

False. Many cats sit in many windows — and this has nothing to do with the coming of rain.

Weather Predictions — True or False

By ZENA CHERRY

The weather is always with us and many are the superstitions about it. Which are true or false?

1. Tomorrow is Candlemas Day, and we all know that is the day when the groundhog comes out of hibernation; if he does not see his shadow, winter is over — if he does see it; back he goes into his hole because there will be another six weeks of cold weather.

False. No two groundhogs behave the same — some stay out, some in, no one can foretcast when winter will end.

2. Clear moon, frost soon.

True. The absence of humidity indicates cold air and a drop in temperature.

3. The sharper the blast, the sooner it's past.

True. High winds usually mean a storm is blowing over.

4. Ringing in the ear indicates a change of wind.

True, in part. A sudden rise in the barometer can cause a ringing in the ears.

5. For July 15, there is this ditty;

St. Swithin's day if thou dost rain

For forty days it will remain;

St. Swithin's Day, if thou be fair,

For forty days 'twill rain nae mair.

False. Against his wishes, Swithin, Bishop of Winchester was enthroned from a grave "where rain could fall," and buried in his church. A storm broke out and raged for 40 days. It has never happened since.

Church Choir Honored at Special Event

BONARLAW — The members of Springbrook United Church congregation held a most successful pot-luck supper in the church dining hall in honor of their church choir.

The honored guests, numbering 22, were seated at a head table along with the organist, Mrs. John McKeown.

Following the supper, Mr. Harold Pillen called the gathering to order and paid tribute to the choir for its faithful and valued service with a special thanks to Mrs. McKeown and Orrie Barton, the eldest members of the choir.

Miss Muriel Mumby, on behalf of the choir, presented Mrs. McKeown with a corsage and Mr. Barton with a boutonniere. Mr. Emerson Reid presented suitable engraved hymnaries to each choir member in respect and recognition of faithful and valued services rendered by the senior church choir over a period of years.

Each acknowledged hearty thanks and Mr. Barton said he had been a member of Springbrook choir since 1906, Mrs. McKeown recalled having played the organ for Sunday School when she was 14 years of age.

A number of pictures were taken and a social hour spent.

Mrs. McKeown's daughter, Mrs. G. Mcikeljohn, Marmora, was present.

Congregational Meetings

CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY

On Tuesday evening the annual congregational business meeting of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church, in Bellleville was held in the upper auditorium of the church with a good representation of members and adherents present. The pastor, the Reverend Sackville Palmer, presided and opened the meeting with the hymn, "Great is Thy Faithfulness," and the reading of 1 Corinthians 13:1-13, in which the apostle Paul exhorts the Corinthian Christians to be one in heart and mind; that there be no dissension among them; that they be of one mind and judgment, and reminding them of God's faithfulness.

Following the prayer, and the dispension of the minutes of the last annual meeting, the reports from the various departments of the church, were read, each department showing a very successful year. These included the Women's Missionary Fellowship; the Men's Fellowship; the School; The Benevolent report; reports of the Pioneer Girls; the Colonials, the Trail Rangers, Explorers; the Alliance Youth Fellowship; the Prayer Bridge; the Missionary treasurer's, showing that $7,039.50 had been given during the year for foreign missions and forwarded to the New York headquarters, and $1,000 for home missions, forwarded to the Toronto headquarters, making the highest amount ever designated work in the history of the Belleville Church.

PASTOR'S REPORT

In his report, Mr. Palmer began with quotations from the Psalms of David: "What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward me" and, "truly He has done great things for us, where of we are glad." Mr. Palmer urged the members to press on toward newer horizons of faith and victory; giving the requirements of what an ideal church should be: a praying church; a Spirit-filled church; a witnessing church; a working church, and a triumphant church, "for whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world, even our faith."

He rejoiced in the steady increase in the Sunday School with its attendance for 1962 of 172, and commended the Sunday School officers for their diligence, extending appreciation to those using their cars to transport the children to and from Sunday School and church, a ministry which is often underestimated.

Mr. Palmer also mentioned the improvements to the church building and the surrounding grounds: the providing of extra classrooms by movable partitions in the school auditorium; the new chairs purchased for the Sunday School; as well as a typewriter and the donation of a refrigerator for the church kitchen.

He was pleased with the fine response of the Alliance Youth Fellowship to their own meetings and rallies, especially the blessing they received at the Life Investment Conference in Chicago last August.

Other items included: the splendid response to Alliance Witness subscription campaign of 219; of new members receiving into fellowship; dedication of infants; baptismal rites performed; marriages solemnized, and the decision to purchase a new Hammond organ for the church.

He extended thanks to the Official Board; the Sunday School staff; the Christian Service Brigade and the personnel of the Pioneer Girls; to the organists, and the pianists; to the choir members, and to all those having a part and share in making 1962 a most wonderful and successful year, so that it can be said, "We are laborers together with God."

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Members of the executive committee for 1963 include: William Rodberz, recording secretary; treasurer, Mrs. M. Baragar; financial secretary, Paul Masse; missionary treasurer, Alf Rodgers.

Extra executive members: Cliff Ackerman, Frank Allan, Daniel Bracken, Fred Fraser and William Sills.

S.S. superintendent, Lawrence Dent; assistant, Mrs. Fred Fraser; W.M.F. leader, Mrs. Sackville Palmer; A.Y.F. president, Judson Rae; benevolent convener, Mrs. John Weese and communion stewardess, Mrs. Daniel Benn.

Organist and choir director, W. Leonard; assistant, Mrs. E. Pickard; pianists, Miss Fern Millard; assistant, Miss D. Alyea; song leader, James MacKay; assistant, Judson Rae; Pioneer Girls, Mrs. Sackville Palmer; Service Brigade, Frank Allan.

After the conclusion of the business, a social time of fellowship was enjoyed in the lower auditorium when a buffet repast was served by the women of the church.

FRANKFORD — Mrs. Clarence Forbes was hostess to a number of ladies at her home on Tuesday evening, January 29th in honor of Mrs. Bill Carter (nee Doreen Alyea) at a baby shower.

A few games were enjoyed. Doreen was called upon to open her gifts for which she thanked her friends.

Cape May Bird Migration Film Shown Q. F. Naturalists

The Quinte Field Naturalists held their first meeting of 1963 at the Entomology Laboratory on Monday evening.

Mr. I. W. Knight opened the meeting and welcomed a large crowd of members and visitors.

The business of 1962 was dealt with, after which Mr. Knight turned the meeting over to the incoming president, Miss J. Nichols, who carried on the new business including plans for a dinner meeting in February at which the speaker will be Mr. Mike Chubb.

Mr. Knight introduced Mr. James Bayly, of Brockville, a prominent nature photographer, who showed 16mm movies of a trip he took to Cape May, New Jersey, during the spring bird migration.

He explained that Cape May is an ideal place to find migrating birds of many different species because of marshes, sea shore and other habitats being located so close together. He mentioned one particular Wildlife Reserve of 21 acres which is located in the middle of a "fashionable" summer colony.

The film showed many of the wild life refuges and their occupants including Snowy American and cattle egrets; glossy ibis; little blue herons; black crowned night herons, and ospreys.

The beaches were the favorite place for willet; semipalmated sand pipers; ruddy turnstones and knots.

One bird, the black skimmer, demonstrated a fantastic method of feeding. It skimmed low over the water using its lower mandible as a scoop to lift its food from the water as it flew.

Many other interesting species were shown and Mr. Bayly urged the audience to consider this area as a wonderful place to holiday and see birds not normally seen in other local areas.

After the excellent showing, coffee cookies were served and everyone had a chance to ask Mr. Bayly questions before the meeting adjourned.

Young Couple Honored With Fine Gifts

THOMASBURG — On the evening of January 23th, a large number of residents of the district gathered in the IOOF Hall in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Garfield Williams, the former Gwendolyn Kellar, who were recently married in St. John's United Church, Tweed.

They were presented with several articles of furniture, including a coffee table, two end tables, a chair and several lamps, with the best wishes of the community.

The happy couple are residing at R.R. 1, Tweed.

The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. Refreshments were served by the ladies.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

ON CHILDREN'S MANNERS

There are many ways of looking at children's manners.

Some people look at them — and collapse. Others look at them and are amused. Others look and adopt a safe and sane viewpoint.

The latter position was taken by a famed pedistrician who then noted that "good manners come naturally. Far be it from me to pick a bone with anyone. But I must admit that his arguments leave me a little thoughtful.

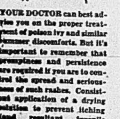
The most important thing, he says, is to have the child like people. Then, one must assume, the rest will follow, as the night the day!

But isn't it a little unrealistic to expect the child to like people, just in general? A little couple? Most grown-ups I know simply don't like everybody, any more than most children do. Still, unless we are complete bores, we manage to extend a courteous paw, murmur the proper pleasantries, attempt a smile, and take advantage of our good manners to conceal our real feelings.

It seems to me that the good doctor is putting the heart before the course. Me, I believe in that course in good manners. Let the likes and dislikes fall where they may. How many people do we really, actively like on first meeting?

Nobody, I'm sure, will dispute the fact that it's desirable for a child not to be self-conscious with strangers. It gives one a start to enter a house where the children hang back, stare at you and make an animal grunt or two instead of advancing with outstretched hand and the customary "How do you do?" They are infinitely more self-conscious than the children who have been taught the conventions and given some social armour.

The good doctor approves of letting a child of three or four stand back for a few minutes and take time to size up a stranger.



As he puts it, "A child of three or four is likely to watch a stranger talking to his mother for a few minutes and then suddenly break into the conversation with a remark like, 'The water came out of the toilet all over the floor.' This isn't Lord Chesterfield's kind of manners, but it does show a desire because he feels like sharing a fascinating experience."

This may not be Lord Chesterfield's idea of manners, and it isn't mine either!

To be perfectly fair, he does go on to say that the child, if he keeps up a friendly spirit toward strangers, will learn soon enough how to be friendly in a more conventional way. And he does affirm that a child absorbs the kindliness and politeness he sees at home.

Ideally, manners and feelings should go hand in hand. How marvelous if we were all so warm and spontaneous. Meanwhile, life being what it is, I still think that the basic conventions have to be taught. After that, the rest comes naturally.

Oldest Valentine Card Rests in British Museum

By JACK HUTTON

How many Canadian teen-agers will soon find in their mailbox a sentimental card that says something like this?

"Do I want you for my Valentine Certainly Not." Or this sentiment: "I think of you often — every time I pass a horse."

Manufacturers report the practice of sending "sick" Valentine cards is still with us. If anything, it may be more popular when Thursday, Feb. 14, rolls around.

Thousands of young Canadians will be told they should live alone in a dark cave, try a charm course, or just try and forget the whole mess.

SICK CENTURY

What makes this fad seem strange is that the origin of Valentine cards goes back to the third century. It wasn't until the end of the last century that "sick" cards started to be popular.

Historians still argue about how St. Valentine's Day started, but many believe it dates to the second half of the third century when Bishop Valentine was beaten with clubs and beheaded on the orders of the Roman emperor.

In 496 AD the Pope dedicated Feb. 14 to St. Valentine and made him patron saint of true lovers, (If you find buying a present and card a bit expensive today this was when your problem started.)

The oldest Valentine card in existence rests in the British Museum—it was designed by the Duke of Orleans in 1450 — and started a love-writing competition that still hasn't stopped.

By 1700 the cards had acquired the flowers and ribbons that many still have. And they are taken seriously. Many prospective fathers-in-law used to judge their daughters' prospects on the quality of their Valentine verses.

BOOK AIDS

Young fellows who knew they might be outclassed by another suitor could cheat by buying a widely-used book entitled The Young Man's Valentine Writer — unless of course, the father had read it, too.

A fellow had to be sharp to keep ahead of the field. Evidence of this was the card which the poor girl had to prop up on an easel before she could read it. At least it impressed her father.

It's still possible, by the way, to buy another gift which was popular in those days. A suitor who wanted to show that he was really serious would buy a pair of gloves for his girl.

The girl may have thought he wanted to hide her dishpan hands. But fathers generally figured the young chap must have money if he could afford to give the lass something so expensive.

In case you're practising your Valentine technique, here was a verse which stirred the girls in the days of Queen Victoria.

"Sweet is thy voice to me as is the wandering breeze, which whispers summer melody among the leafy trees, fair is thy face to me as flowers in bonny May, as therefore do I offer thee a little love gift today".

Bit mushy, eh? Here was one from a chap who must also have been a bit of a braggart: "Of all the flowers the spring hath met, and I have met with many, thou art to me the fairest yet, and loveliest of any".

The end of the last century saw what were known as Vinegar Valentines. Having just read a few, it seems unbelievable to me that the sender and receiver could ever speak to each other again.

NO SPARK

One, for example, blasted a lady for being an unthoughtful and tasteful shopper. Not only that, but she was unspeakably rude to clerks. The punch line said she had not the smallest spark of decency in her.

So you may receive a card soon that asks on the outside: "Whose cute little Valentine are you?" and replies on the inside page, "Who would want you?"

But just remember that our cards at least aren't as syrupy as they were 200 years ago — and nowhere near as cruel as they were 50 years ago.

INSTANT WIT

The rapid-fire patter of TV entertainers must be having some impact on us. I recently overheard a girl about 12 years old at a party say to a boy:

"I don't feel myself today".

The other girl shifted her schoolbag in her arms, and replied, "I already noticed the improvement".

What a long way from the question-answer of my day: "Do you live on Maple Road? Then get right off because there's a car coming".

Gad, I'm feeling old again.

MUSICAL CHAIRS

Last week I mentioned a pocketbook called The Magic House of Numbers, written by Irving Adler and published by Signet.

One of the mysteries it unfolds is the number 142,857— an amazing number which actually plays "ring-around-a-rosy". Why not confound the family by asking them to multiply it by 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6?

The answer to the first is yet another 142,857. Multiply by three and you'll get 428571. Now try four and you'll get 571428. The numbers are reversing; like musical chairs.

This series will follow through like clockwork, multiplying by 5, 285714; by 6, 714285 and 6. But a very significant thing happens when you multiply by seven — you get 7.

If you've followed some of our discussion on the number 7 you'll realize what a significant thing is happening when 142,857 is multiplied by 7. Or, to find out more about it try finding Adler's book. It costs 60 cents.

WIND

If you're a stamp collector, watch for the 1944 U.S. stamp which marked the 25th anniversary of the first trans-continental railway.

The stamp is a beautiful one at first glance. It shows the last golden spike being driven at Promontory, Utah, and is was adapted from a mural.

The only problem is that the smoke from the locomotive is being blown in one direction while a flag at the site is flapping in the opposite direction.

Thief Steals Police Radar In Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—Police radar apparently is no defence against a fleet-footed —or maybe just sneaky — thief.

The wily thief stole the remote box of a police radar unit Thursday while it was being used to check traffic speeds on a north-west Toronto street.

The policeman operating the radar trap learned of the theft when the recording unit he was watching stopped.

the food which was to have gone aboard the jet here. Included was a shipment of fresh strawberries flown in from Mexico.

The Britannia, with a fresh crew for the trip aboard, flew to Edmonton.

The jet, with 47 passengers and crew of 12, landed in Edmonton at 12:54 p.m. MST (2:54 p.m. EST). Takeoff was delayed due to starter trouble on one engine and it was 5:37 p.m. EST when the plane took off again. The royal couple remained inside the plane the entire time it was in Edmonton, making only one brief appearance.

Loaded with 17,720 gallons of fuel, the jet was scheduled to refuel at Honolulu before proceeding to Fiji.

When it passed over Vancouver heading southwest, it was 4,700 miles from its point of origin in London.

It was 8 p.m. PST when Capt. J. T. Perry radioed he was turning the aircraft around 900 miles out to sea and heading back for Vancouver.

WINDS WERE HIGH

Ron Evans, BOAC district sales manager, said the crew reported winds "so bad" in Hawaii "they reached 65 to 75 miles an hour and they had to evacuate the airport tower."

Airport officials here had from 8 p.m. to 9:55 p.m. PST, touchdown time in Vancouver, to prepare for the unexpected arrival.

A Trans - Canada Air Lines four-engined viscount was borrowed and a crew told to stand by in case the royal party wanted to be flown to Victoria to stay at government house.

And Hotel Vancouver was instructed to make ready the royal suite and as much other room as possible.

Just before the jet arrived here, the word became official that the Queen was planning to stay in the hotel.

After the mink - clad Queen and Prince Philip, wearing a rain topcoat, entered the car for the slow procession 10 miles to the hotel, crowds gathered on corners and waved and cheered as they passed.

The Queen and Prince Philip waved back.

East

He climbed a pylon supporting power cables slung 40 feet above East Berlin wire barricades and the Teltow Canal in West Berlin.

From the pylon he jumped on to the big white porcelain insulators. Then he eased himself onto the cable.

In a sitting position he slid along the cable to the next pylon, 70 yards away. He clambered on to the insulators, then leaped to the pylon.

Below, two border guards patrolled the East German barricades. He was unseen above the searchlights and began to work.

HAULS HIMSELF ALONG

He slid another 20 yards toward the next pilon. Past knees pylon, he hooked his knees over the cable and hauled himself along by his hands.

He had a rope round his chest. He uncoiled it and threw it across the cable.

But he failed to catch the end of the rope in his frozen hands and plunged to the canal towpath in the West—only a few feet from bushes marking the border.

He came to three hours later and shouted for help.

A woman called West police. A fire brigade hauled him across the canal by rubber boat.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Nan S. — She has her nerve asking me to be maid-of-honor at her wedding!

Claire W. — Since she liked us both I was sure she'd be pleased to be asked.

Nan S. — You'd think that when a girl steals your boy-friend away she'd have enough delicacy not to rub salt into the wound. But Claire wants to gloat over her victory and watch me suffer.

I was going steady with Tony. Claire stopped over in New York last summer on her way to Maine where she had a camp job. Naturally I introduced Tony to her. By the very next day she was crowded out. It seems they had known each other as children and had lost track.

The decent thing for Claire to do would have been to drum up her own date in New York. Instead she calmly accepted Tony's invitation, while he fixed me up with his cousin. And now, the clincher! She invites me to be maid-of-honor at the wedding. I won't even go.

Claire W. — Nan just isn't thinking straight. I wish she'd get over the shell-shock she seems to have. Let's face it, Nan, Tony was a fellow she had made her big go-between for Tony and me.

He and I grew up on Governors Island in the New York City Harbor. Our fathers were stationed there on Army duty. We used to travel the ferry to mainland to get to school. Then my Dad was transferred to Texas. So I hadn't seen Tony since I was 10 and he was 16. Meeting like that in New York just bowled us over. And he wasn't engaged to Nan. We had a right to each other.

I thought Nan would take it in the right way. She has other friends. Tony's cousin likes her a lot and he's going to be best man. I hope she reconsiders.

The Council: We can't decide whether to get out the crying towel for Nan or sing her a lullaban of the torch-songs written about her problem. To get into the mood, Nan, run through a few choruses of "I'm dancing with tears in my eyes," or "There he goes, my best pal," there he goes, my best pal, and here am I, broken-hearted." Or words to that effect. Then, having aroused it all out, wrung your feelings dry, you should be able to view what happened to the tune of "La Vie en Rose." Is the sun really shines bright!

Tony may have been her boy friend but he wasn't "stolen" away. He simply experienced a new emotion when he re-encountered Claire, a sensation he knew was different from his earlier feelings for Nan. The latter will understand this better when it happens to her. There's no comparison between the pleasant and polite relationship of "going-with" and the peaceful and positive emotion of "this-is-it" — the real thing!

We second Claire's pitch in behalf of Fate. Right now Nan's wound is still raw, but it's her own salt tears that are keeping it fresh. It's not sour grapes to say it's all for the best. It's sweet reason. Tony didn't feel La Grande Passion for her. He felt it for Claire. Isn't it lucky to have found that out now, instead of after one of those "compromise" (because no one better has turned up!) marriages?

We hope Nan attends the wedding like a good friend and a good sport. As to whether to be maid-of-honor, that's a subdivision of the main problem which she can decide for herself, once she accepts the fact that Tony was never for her. He was for Claire.

By the way, Nan, what good is a fellow is Tony's cousin? Any chance that he'll be best man for you too?

Want to Use Arms Savings For Houses

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A committee of experts on housing and planning, representing 21 countries, adopted seven resolutions Thursday aimed at expanding United Nations influence in those fields. One put in an early bid for use of savings released if and when disarmament program is agreed on.

The resolutions will go to the UN Economic and Social Council, meeting here in April, for formal action.

The committee did its work under the chairmanship of Stewart Bates, president of Ottawa's Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Canada was one sponsor of a resolution calling for the UN to survey existing programs in housing and to determine how resources for international action could be used.

Opposition

to appeal the ruling, Speaker Lambert held that it was not subject to appeal. This in turn set off a long procedural discussion, with Mr. Martin, member for Essex East, appealing against the ruling that there could be no appeal.

Only the Conservatives stood behind Mr. Diefenbaker in the ensuing vote, with the Liberals, Social Credit and New Democratic parties arrayed against him. The count was 122 to 104 against the Speaker's ruling.

The debate itself then began.

It took place against a background of mounting speculation on whether Mr. Diefenbaker would dissolve Parliament for a general election on the nuclear arms issue.

The speculation reached its height during the support adjournment, fed by reports that Mr. Diefenbaker had indicated he would view a vote against the Speaker as a vote of no-confidence in the government.

Mr. Diefenbaker was an attentive listener at the night sitting, but those who anticipated a dissolution announcement were disappointed. He made no statement.

FALLS IN LINE

Mr. Harkness at the outset of his speech fell in line behind the prime minister's attack on U.S. state department release "an unwarranted interference in our national affairs."

It could only cause a "needless obstacle to our efforts to reach an agreement on matters vital to the national security of both our countries."

Mr. Harkness insisted that Canada's decision to give the U.S. the right to arm nuclear warheads, though apparently there was no written undertaking.

ASKS FOR ELECTION

New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas challenged the government to dissolve Parliament and call an election on the issue.

Referring to the state department's rejection of Mr. Diefenbaker's contention that the Anglo-American pact of Nassau had cast doubt on the nuclear strike role of the RCAF's CF-104 aircraft, Mr. Harkness said: "This is a matter of opinion."

"It is a question of what the prime minister believes is the situation and what the authors of this particular statement apparently believe is the situation."

MENTIONS SEVIGNY

Mr. Martin, in his reply, said Associate Defence Minister Sevigny apparently does not agree with Mr. Harkness, and that Mr. Sevigny should declare his views in the Commons.

Mr. Sevigny said he had never complained to anyone about the statement issued by his colleague.

Mr. Diefenbaker interjected that Mr. Martin was basing his argument on the statement "made by those people in the United States."

"I am sure that the prime minister will, on reflection . . . regret his reference to those people.'" Mr. Martin replied. "We do not have to agree with all United States policies but remember we are joined with them in bonds of unity, seeking to preserve our way of life."

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson described it as a clarification of the government's defence policy.

"It was necessary to "take this thing out of the political muck" and deal with it on the basis of principle.

Canada had a moral commitment to arm the Bomarc anti-aircraft missiles with nuclear warheads, though apparently there was no written undertaking.

ASKS FOR ELECTION

New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas challenged the government to dissolve Parliament and call an election on the issue.

"No talk of dissolution will intimidate us from trying to find out what Canada's defence commitments are," he declared.

Mr. Douglas said the Liberals want to enter the nuclear club through the front door and beguitals their way on the back door—an apparent reference to Mr. Pearson's position that Canada should honor its nuclear commitments pending renegotiation of its role in the Western alliance.

The Conservatives, on the other hand, aimed to enter the nuclear club through the back door under cover of darkness, said Mr. Douglas.

The storm over the U.S. statement broke shortly after the Commons assembled at 2:30 p.m. EST. Mr. Diefenbaker delivered the opening volley.

"Quite apart from the terms of the statement, this action by the department of state of the United States is unprecedented. I weigh my words when I say that it constitutes an unwarranted intrusion in Canadian affairs," he told the House.

Canada will, "as always," honor its obligations, he said. WON'T BE PUSHED

"But it will not be pushed around or accept external domination or interference in the making of its decisions. Canada is determined to remain a firm and free nation that means that she should be a satellite."

Mr. Diefenbaker said the U.S. statement "bears a striking resemblance" to past statements by Mr. Pearson.

He said the "insinuation" that his earlier defence statement was worked out after consultation with the U.S. was "cheap and false."

As Mr. Pearson rose to speak a number of government benches called out: "Go ahead, Yankee!"

The opposition leader said he would not deman himself by recognizing "these insulting observations."

If you purchase a new Case 430 or 530 farm tractor* between January 15 and Feb. 28, 1963, we'll send you our check for $135 payable in cash. How much No. 2 diesel fuel can you buy locally for $135? Figuring a national tank wagon average price per gallon of 15.9c, that's 850 gallons.

In a Case Dynaclonic diesel, that's much more diesel fuel than you'll likely use in a year's work — with a healthy amount left over for next year!

Here's why we're so sure: in Dynaclonic design, each fuel charge is packed into a swirling tornado. It achieves the "maximum turbulence" engineers seek — the complete blending of fuel and air essential to complete combustion.

Results: more pounds of thrust—up to 13,700 pounds behind every piston stroke! More work-power from every ounce of fuel.

Team this combustion efficiency with Dynaclonic's long-stroke, high-torque design, and you'll see where its extra power comes from—why it can pull through where high speed automotive type engines begin to labor and stall.

Get the details— and a demonstration — from your Case dealer. And do it soon. Remember, the free fuel offer is good only through Feb. 28.

*PREFER GASOLINE TO DIESEL?

The same $135 cash bonus applies. Gasoline or diesel, you get fuel at your convenience and from the local supplier of your choice.

Problems and Powers

By ROY L. SMITH

Much attention is given, in modern preaching, to the teachings of Jesus, and for this there is good precedent. The Gospel of Matthew, for example, is believed to have been composed by an early Christian teacher who wanted to preserve the record of his Master's teachings. Jesus' comments on life, God, faith, and righteousness predominate therefore in the First Gospel.

The Gospel of Mark, on the other hand, recites at length the actions, and words, of Jesus. The various stories serve a variety of purposes, but basically they undertake to present a single, central fact—that Jesus made use of an unusual power.

Bishop Arthur Moore of The Methodist Church is fond of saying that when the first century Christians came together, they talked about their powers, but when modern Christians come together they talk about their problems.

GOSPEL IS GOOD NEWS

There is a marked disposition on the part of modern preachers to stand in their pulpits and describe to men what they can do for themselves. And, it must be confessed, there is great need for preaching on that subject.

But too many of us would far rather have something done for us, than to bestir ourselves to do something for ourselves.

But he will a man that there is something he can do for himself is not to "preach the Gospel." It may be good advice, and it may be advice that is badly needed.

The essentially good news of the Gospel is the announcement that God stands ready to do something for men, even for the man most in need! It is the assurance that God stands ready to do something for a man which he cannot do for himself.

WHERE'S HIS FAITH

A more or less famous preacher friend of mine who had been wrestling with a series of disappointments and frustrations, finally surrendered to his fears and went into what was popularly called a "nervous collapse."

A young woman who was suffering agonies as a result of the collapse of her life, in the face of great difficulties, was discussing the case of her pastor with a close personal friend. "Our preacher's break-down," she said "has me worried. He has been urging me to have faith, and here he is flat on his back, and under the care of a psychiatrist. I wonder where his faith has been?"

Let's give both of them all the credit that is their due. The burdens of life sometimes become terrifying, but a faith that will not work in the preacher's case, will not work in the parishioner's case. And if the Gospel is good news, is it not good news for both of them?

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for February 3: Mighty Deeds of Jesus," Mark 4:35 through 5:43.

One of the most convincing arguments in behalf of religion I have ever heard came from a doctor who said, "I have discovered that the people who take their religion into the hospital with them, always start home a little ahead of the others."

THEORY DOESN'T WORK

There is an old theory concerning life which has been completely disproved It is expressed in a popular expression—"Be good and you'll be happy,"—by which is meant that if you are "good" you will have no troubles.

But that is not true. Good people do have troubles. They suffer illness, betrayals, disappointments, and defeats just as the rest of us do. But their religion gives them an inner source of power the wicked never have.

The proof of good religion is not the fact that it insulates us against the hard blows, but that it provides us with inner resources in the time of disaster.

The righteous man is often imposed upon, sometimes lied about, and frequently defeated. But something within him holds him to the path of righteousness. And in the face of his defeats he gets to his feet again like a champion.

In the heart of the Gospel when he prayed, "O Lord, help me to remember that nothin's goin' to happen to me today that you and me together caint handle," If good religion saves us from our fears, it has provided us with all the salvation a red-blooded man or woman needs.

And those inner resources, of which we have been speaking, are a divine gift. They represent an importation.

Great Imposter Facing Charge

BOSTON (AP) — Ferdinand Demara, known as the Great Imposter because of his many occupations under various names, was indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

The jury charges that in July, 1958, Demara used the fictitious name Jefferson Baird Thorne and supplied false records to obtain a teaching post at Winchendon, Mass., High School.

Conviction could mean maximum penalties of a $1,000 fine, five years in prison, or both.

Demara, formerly of Lawrence, Mass., is believed by federal authorities to be in California.

Demara once posed as a Royal Canadian Navy doctor and performed surgery in Korea. The man who taught at Winchendon under the name of Thorne resigned by telephone after another teacher saw Demara's picture in a magazine and showed it to his superiors.

The high school principal expressed the opinion Thorne Demara was a genius and could teach anything.

Demara now works for the Union Rescue Mission in Los Angeles. The mission cares for and rehabilitates down-and-outers. Demara, informed of the charges, declined comment.

Politician Prisoner Given Parole

CHESTER, Ill. (AP) — Manard Penitentiary lost its most prominent prisoner yesterday, former Illinois auditor Orville Hodge, who in 1956 pleaded guilty to looting the state treasury of $600,000.

Hodge, a Republican auditor, turned his back on the ancient prison 6½ years after he entered it, paroled by Governor Otto Kerner, a Democrat.

The 58-year-old onetime politician told The Associated Press Wednesday that probably his hardest trial is yet to come: Facing his neighbors in his home town of Granite City, Ill.

"I know when I get back," he said, "there will be people who are against me. I'll have to prove myself just as much as I did here."

Hodge, once the epitome of a back-slapping, drink-buying jovial politician, became a useful prisoner, say prison authorities.

CHANGED COMPLETELY

Warden Ross Randolph said Hodge has undergone nearly a complete change of character in prison. The warden called Hodge: "An exceptional inmate. In a way I hate to lose him. Where else could I get an intelligent, dedicated man who is glad to work 15 hours a day, seven days a week?"

Hodge was an instructor in the prison's educational system, known as one of the best among United States penal institutions, and he ran the prison radio system from 6 a.m. to 10:30 p.m.

Before Hodge entered prison, he was a florid - faced, robust 205-pounder, a fast - talking, quick-to-laugh type. He was a sobbing wreck the night he walked into Menard.

RISE IN TRADE

He has lost 30 pounds, down to 175, because of stomach ulcers. He speaks quietly but firmly and smiles infrequently.

His 12- to 15-year sentence was reduced by Governor Kerner because of Hodge's poor health.

International House Gives Foreign Students Chance to Meet on Social Level

By JACK BEST

OTTAWA (CP) — "With the best of memories about a place where one is away from home, feels at home."

The message was penned to a card just received by J. Alex Edmison, president of the Overseas Friendship Society of Ottawa, from a young African who formerly attended university here.

The "place" is International House, recreation headquarters for the growing number of foreign students studying in Ottawa, and operated by the Friendship Society.

Mr. Edmison, a member of the national parole board, treasures the card enough to carry it around with him. To him, it's evidence that International House is moving on the right track.

Its basic purpose is to give foreign students the chance to meet Canadians and each other—on a social level.

FEEL AT HOME

"Our idea is to make the students feel at home during their stay in Canada," says Mr. Edmison. But he hastens to add that it is "very definitely not a reception treatment." Canadians learn from the foreign students, who in turn learn about Canada.

There is also an element of what has been called enlightened self-interest.

Mr. Edmison recalls that in a survey published last year in the United States it was estimated by one educational authority that nearly half the 50,000 foreign students then studying in the U.S. would "go home mad" — largely because they found few opportunities for social contact with Americans.

"We don't want that to be said of people who go back to their homes after periods in Canada," said Mr. Edmison as he conducted a reporter around International House's spacious new quarters in a three-storey house in midtown Ottawa.

The quarters were formally opened a few weeks ago by External Affairs Minister Green after being transferred from a building about a mile away where they had occupied two draughty upstairs floors.

GOVERNMENT LEASE

The gabled house has been leased for five years for the society by the Canadian government.

For its size, Ottawa is believed to have more students from more foreign lands than any Canadian city. An estimated 400 attend the University of Ottawa and Carleton University, most under some form of government auspices. They come mainly from Asia, Africa and the Caribbean.

At the formal opening, students from 31 foreign countries were counted.

In addition, there are a number of fellowship holders and technical trainees attached to various government departments under the Colombo plan and similar arrangements.

All these are automatically entitled to use International House facilities, and do. A Saturday night program may draw 350 to 400 persons. Events—no less than 41 major ones are scheduled for the period Jan. 5 to May 25—range from square dances to lectures.

EMBASSIES HELP

Ottawa's International House is in a fortunate position compared with similar ventures elsewhere in that its work is heavily assisted by various foreign embassies. They are especially active in planning and supervising so-called "national nights"—always well attended —featuring the songs, dances and costumes of individual countries.

There also are many outside activities, including excursions of different kinds, picnics and sleigh rides. A hard-working team of hostesses is on hand for special occasions to serve refreshments.

Home entertaining is co-ordinated through the House. A particular student is "adopted" by a family, who thereafter invite him to their home regularly and do what they can to assure that he has an adequate social life.

Last Christmas, there were more bids for students to take Christmas dinner at private homes than there were students to go around.

Operating costs of International House, about $8,000 in the present school year, are met from contributions and through fees paid by Canadian members. At last count there were about 400 paid-up members. Basic fee is $5 but offerings ranged up to $250 and, Mr. Edmison estimates, averaged about $10.

Among those who provided a contribution was External Affairs Minister Green—he sent a cheque for $25.

Thomasburg

THOMASBURG — The members of Thomasburg United Church Women served a hot dinner January 23, in the vestry of the church to the pupils and teacher of the junior room of the school. Those in charge of the dinner were Mrs. H. R. Morton, Mrs. H. Vance and Mrs. E. Prindle. The regular meeting of the association followed the dinner.

Several members of Thomasburg LOOF Lodge visited Stirling lodge on the night of January 23.

The annual Official Board meeting of the Thomasburg-West Huntingdon charge of the United Church of Canada took place in Moira United Church on the evening of January 24. A number of the church officials from Thomasburg appointment attended the meeting.

Miss Marion Phillips, who is attending the Kemptville Agricultural College, spent the weekend at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Phillips.

Philips conquers high voltage burnout with Monitron Television to bring you Canada's first 2-year picture tube guarantee!

The picture tube is the hardest working part of your television set. And it is the most expensive. Many picture tubes burn out prematurely, weakened by high voltage surges caused when household current fluctuates.

Now Philips engineers have found a way to stop excess voltage reaching the picture tube. They have developed a tiny electronic "brain" called Monitron which controls the voltage reaching the picture tube and keeps it at a safe level.

Philips new Monitron circuit offers such exceptional protection that the picture tube is now guaranteed for 2 full years.

The idea for Monitron came from the giant Thyrite Arrestors that protect expensive powerline transformers against lightning. Working with new materials, Philips engineers developed a tiny device about the size of a headache capsule. Monitron senses voltage changes and acts immediately to protect the picture tube.

Monitron TV means greater viewing pleasure, longer picture tube life, a steadier picture and greater dependability. By keeping voltage constant, Monitron eliminates "Picture Squeeze"—the shrinking picture that results when voltage drops.

See your Philips Franchised dealer soon. We picked him for his courtesy, his integrity, his ability and his willingness to provide you with responsible follow through service. Ask him to show you the new Monitron TV with the 2-year picture tube guarantee.

Canadian Papers Comment On Defence Policy Crisis And Intervention by U. S.

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Following are excerpts from editorial in representative Canadian newspapers on Thursday's debate in the House of Commons and the U.S. state department's statements on Canadian defence policy. Except as noted, all newspapers quoted describe themselves as politically independent.

Ottawa Citizen (Ind. Lib.): The history of the United States statement on Canadian-U.S. defence negotiations is that Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Harkness have either intentionally misled the Canadian public, or have completely misunderstood the nature of these negotiations. Either way—whether the government has been deceitful, or deceived—it has been incompetent—it can no longer be considered fit to govern.

Chalottetown Guardian: It is well to be clear on what Washington's complaint consists of, and what it doesn't. It doesn't allege that Canada has not honored a "commitment" of any kind with respect to nuclear arms bilder; the issue is about Canada refusing to be bulldozed into making such a commitment without further discussion and negotiation . . .

Washington has taken the extreme course of openly blasting the Canadian government on this score. In doing so it has committed another of its many diplomatic blunders, for it is not likely that it will rally political support in Canada on an issue of this kind.

Toronto Star (Lib.): . . . Indignation over American high - handedness should not blind us to the fact that the quarrel is very largely the fault of the Diefenbaker government . . . The Diefenbaker government decided—apparently for reasons of domestic politics—to adopt a policy of evasion and delay. It agreed to accept weapon carriers such as the Bomarc and Voodoo interceptor—and then made difficulties about acquiring the nuclear warheads for them. This game of shilly-shallying has been carried on for four years . . .

To maintain good relations with the United States, while protecting Canada's national interests and honor, is one of the essential duties of any Canadian government. The Diefenbaker cabinet has failed in this duty—not through incompetence alone but through sheer irresponsibility.

Toronto Telegram: . . . The worst that can result from it is that it will be used by some to try to lay the blame for all anti-Americanism by suggesting that the U.S. is interfering in Canadian affairs. To try to obscure the main issues involved by flying flags and inventing anti-Americanism would be childish and disruptive. The defence of North America is not a Canadian affair—it is a joint U.S.-Canada affair . . . what is a Canadian affair is Canada's role within the partnership. . . If we want to change our role the Americans should be told so should the Canadians.

Toronto Globe and Mail: The statement . . . is a most unfortunate intrusion into Canadian affairs . . . whatever the merits of the statement itself, whatever truths it may contain, Canada will not be told what to do by a foreign power. It is true that Prime Minister John Diefenbaker has approached the whole question of nuclear arms for Canadian forces in a dilatory and indecisive fashion. It is true that Washington is entitled to feel exasperation. But that fact cannot be taken as an excuse for what President John F. Kennedy has now done.

. . . By behaving into our affairs, Mr. Kennedy . . . has merely made it more difficult for us to approach intelligently what is already a disruptive issue . . .

Red Deer Advocate: The exasperation of the United States over its handling of Cuba and the will o' the wisp Progressive Conservative government on a nuclear defence is understandable, though the blatant interference in what should be strictly a Canadian policy matter is unforgiveable. Perhaps Mr. Diefenbaker can now cut out the diplomatic double talk and make it clear to the Americans as well as to Canadians exactly what his intentions are on this subject. . . . If Mr. Diefenbaker cannot do that, then he should step down and make way for someone who is capable of clarity of thought and speech who can give direction to the nation.

Montreal Gazette (Ind. Conn.): It is in every way deplorable that a question of common defence against a common enemy should turn into a general feeling of ill - will between two friends . . . Prime Minister Diefenbaker is right when he says that this abrupt interference of the United States in a matter for Canadian decision is an unwarranted intrusion. . . . It must be fairly admitted that Canadian policy on defence has long been incoherent. And while it may be admitted that the decisions have been hard to make, there have been signs that indecision has itself been raised into a policy.

Both nations have been wrong. But by working together as real and reasonable allies, they may yet both be right.

Saint John Telegraph-Journal: It is understandable if many Canadians feel disturbed over the undiplomatic method which the United States government has employed in revealing its pent-up exasperation with this country's nuclear defence policy. But all of that should not obscure the salient, basic point: That Canada can no longer postpone indefinitely its decision on whether or not to accept nuclear warheads.

Fort William Times-Press: The difficulty is that there are differences between us and our allies through NORAD and NATO. Let us start again. The United States should not help itself by behaving as it has. It is a reminder of the danger of political domination we face though too close relationship with our powerful neighbor. The same facts cited by the state department would be just as well interpreted otherwise, and lead to the same conclusion the prime minister has reached.

Montreal Le Devoir: The statement published Wednesday by the state department in Washington about Canada's attitude toward nuclear warheads is astonishing, for its arrogant tone is of a kind that would not be Canadian at all. It is a reminder of the danger of political domination we face though too close relationship with our powerful neighbor. The same facts cited by the state department would be just as well interpreted otherwise, and lead to the same conclusion the prime minister has reached.

Courageous Harkness Gets Warm Applause in House

OTTAWA (CP) — Thunderous applause rattled through the Commons Thursday night when Defence Minister Harkness rose to take part in an emergency debate on nuclear weapons policy.

Fellow MPs sensed the strain he had been under in recent days and the applause was a tribute to his courage in facing the House.

The view of the Canadian military in Canada required to defensive nuclear weapons for military reasons.

The government has purchased $700,000,000 worth of nuclear weapons delivery but has not announced acceptance or rejection of the nuclear warheads itself.

As minister of national defence, Mr. Harkness, 59, has been caught squarely in the middle.

Last week, Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced a policy which he discussed the pros and cons of the nuclear issue.

BIGGEST HE RESIGN

Mr. Harkness felt some newspaper reports wrongly emphasized the unfavorable parts of Mr. Diefenbaker's speech and on Monday he put out a press statement stressing the pro-nu clear points.

This statement appeared to go farther down the nuclear road than the prime minister had and the Liberals immediately jumped in with suggestions that Mr. Harkness resign.

Wednesday night which took in many points made by Mr. Diefenbaker and, by implication took sides with Mr. Harkness.

The defence minister obviously couldn't support the statement, condemned by Mr. Diefenbaker and the three opposition leaders as an unprecedented intrusion into Canadian domestic affairs. Neither could he renounce the position of his own department.

It was in these politically cruel circumstances that Mr. Harkness took the floor Thursday night.

The minister is no orator. He finds speaking difficult at the best of times and his voice nearly cracked several times.

He referred to the "terrific flood of rumors" that he was prepared to resign and scorned one report that he was "close to tears."

It was simply not true he had contradicted the prime minister. He had not said anything not contained in Mr. Diefenbaker's outline of defence policy. Liberal allegations to the contrary were "completely false."

He was laughed at by the opposition—and by some in the packed public galleries—when he said the government has "followed a clear and responsible policy for the last five years."

It is possible Thursday night's experience for him was more harrowing.

But, in the end, it turned out that Mr. Harkness had not disavowed his Monday statement and that he had not denied the assertion of Liberal Paul Martin that he had threatened during last weekend to resign.

Will Mr. Harkness continue the battle within the cabinet for nuclear weapons?

The guessing here is: Yes.

Increased Government Aid For C Fairs Is Sought By Central Ontario Group

The near-hundred delegates to the annual meeting of the Central Ontario Fairs Association at the Kiwanis Centre yesterday supported a resolution requesting the provincial government to increase its financial support to Class "C" fairs from 25 per cent up to 35 per cent of approved expenditures. It was also felt that this resolution should be circulated amongst the other fairs associations prior to the annual meeting of the Ontario fairs association later this month.

The motion was one which climaxed a lively discussion of what can be done to improve the lot of the community fairs and to expand their activity.

Fairs usually failed, advised Floyd A. Lashley of the provincial Department of Agriculture, because they didn't change their officers, failed to get in new blood in their membership, failed to ask the people of the community for their support or a combination of these factors.

In 1903 there were 488 fairs in Ontario; today there are 241 fairs, he said. He suggested that these 241 remaining fairs existed because they had become established as community affairs and projects rather than strictly as "farmers' fairs."

Various methods of raising funds for prize money were considered during discussion centred mostly on how the class "C" fairs could advance to become class "B" fairs. Sixteen of the 19 fairs in the Central Ontario Fairs Association are currently class "C" fairs. The Belleville, Picton and Kingston fairs are class "B" fairs.

It was generally felt that a greater effort might be made by some of the class "C" fairs to improve themselves to the point where they would be eligible for rating as class "B" and could receive larger grants.

BELLEVILLE CLASS A?

Mr. Lashley strongly recommended that the Belleville Fair make application to become a Class "A" fair. This is the leading classification of fairs and includes such events as the Canadian National Exhibition, Ottawa, the Western Fair in London and the Canadian National Exhibition.

The suggestion was made that a planned program, to be circulated to members in advance of the next annual meeting of the association, be adopted for future use. A motion to this effect was passed and the new executive was empowered to arrange a meeting with the ladies' division at which such a program would be organized.

A suggestion that all fair reports be submitted in writing for distribution at the meeting, in order to allow more time for discussion of problems also found favor amongst the delegates, a number of whom criticized the verbal reports of the delegates as being needlessly repetitious and offering little real value to those delegates who were seeking solutions to problems which their fairs encountered.

HORSE PRIZES TOO BIG

During a brief address to the delegates, Mr. Lashley reviewed some of the changes which had occurred and are being considered in Ontario's fairs. He noted that there was some criticism of the large amounts of prize money being paid out for horses on the grounds that they were existing as a farm work animal.

He suggested that it would be worthwhile for fair boards to keep their prize lists up to date, and to make changes to suit local conditions and crops.

He reminded those present that they were essentially "showmen," since the midway and the entertainment were the main fair attractions to many people.

Elected to the new executive were Clarence Fitchett of Stirling, as district director, Carl Heath of Marmora as associate district director and C. W. Varcoe of Roseneath as secretary-treasurer. Elected to the ladies' division were Mrs. Addie Wilks of Denbigh as district director, Mrs. Percy Ultimate of Stirling and Mrs. Fred Bailey of Cooper as first and second vice presidents respectively and Mrs. W. A. Hume, Campbellford, as secretary-treasurer.

Side-Conferences Puzzle Reporters Covering Crisis

OTTAWA (CP) — Nuclear Thursday dawned bright and cold in the snowy capital. It was also a day of mystery and cameramen. He was unusually uncommunicative, brushing most questions aside.

About noon, Mr. Harkness and four colleagues filed out, followed by the reporters, they walked to the main block of the Parliament Building and into the defence minister's office.

Speculation rose to new heights. Mr. Harkness would resign, it went. He was being backed by his companions—Finance Minister Nowlan, Secretary Halpenny, Revenue Minister Hugh John Flemming and Senator Wallace McCutcheon, minister without portfolio

But soon the talk took a new line. It was a peace-making session of five ministers while their colleagues continued the regular cabinet meeting. Mr Harkness was being persuaded to drop his resignation or to get stronger line from the prime minister on acquisition of nuclear warheads.

MINISTERS LEAVE

Another trickle of ministers issued from the cabinet chamber by leaving. Mr. Diefenbaker conferring inside, with External Affairs Minister Green—rated a strong anti-nuclear man—and his two House of Commons generals — Veterans Minister Churchill, government leader in the House, and Works Minister Fulton, who usually carries the ball on procedural matters.

They, too, emerged about 1 p.m. for lunch. Still unexplained was possible resolution of Parliament to let the public decide whether the nation was moving into the nuclear camp, reporters trailed Mr. Diefenbaker's blue car to his home in the east end.

He lunched, without stopping to talk to reporters, and Government House to ask Governor-General Vanier for a dissolution of Parliament, then reviewed to Parliament Hill.

There crowds lined the main halls waiting for seats in the jammed public and official galleries to hear the anticipated debate. Throughout the afternoon and evening the press of people increased.

The debate moved on until 10 p.m. The still-expectant public filed out of the galleries into the frosty night, several thousand words wider on what they'd known all along — the government and the opposition just don't see eye to eye on most things.

WITHDRAW CHARGES

TORONTO (CP) — Charges against 44 strikers of watching and besetting during the A. R. Clarke and Company Limited tannery strike last summer were withdrawn Thursday in magistrate's court. The strikers were charged after employees of the tannery claimed they were being intimidated. The five-month strike ended in November.

Diefenbaker Dangles Bait But Like Practised Angler Lets Election Fish 'Run'

OTTAWA (CP)—The Diefenbaker minority government appears to be playing the part of the practised angler in its decision on when to call a new election.

The bait was dangling attractively for all comers Thursday, but apparently Prime Minister Diefenbaker—who counts sports fishing among his favorite pastimes—wasn't quite ready to pull in the catch.

Talk of an immediate dissolution of the 25th Parliament, elected last June 18, stemmed from the controversial intervention of the United States government in Canada's current debate over acquisition of nuclear warheads.

Almost all observers said the government had been given a good issue on which to seek re-election—forthright rejection of U.S. government influence in Canadian affairs.

REPORT MIGHT QUIT

Speculation with it was the widely reported intention of Defence Minister Harkness to quit politics, possibly taking with some other ministers with him in protest over the government's so-called feeble and fluid attitude towards nuclear arms.

The latter issue seemed, however, to dissolve when Mr. Harkness rose in the Commons to declare there was no fundamental division between him and Prime Minister Diefenbaker. It was only a choice of different words, he said.

Two points were prominent in the minds of veteran political observers which they think contributed to the bait which was given the present Parliament.

One, from a practical political point of view, is that the present Parliament still has not acted upon the whole of the 1962-63 spending program and has no considered in Ontario's fairs. He noted that there was some criticism of the large amounts of prize money being paid out for horses on the grounds that they were existing as a farm work animal.

He suggested that it would be worthwhile for fair boards to keep their prize lists up to date, and to make changes to suit local conditions and crops.

He reminded those present that they were essentially "showmen," since the midway and the entertainment were the main fair attractions to many people.

Ripples From U.S. Comment On Canada's Nuclear Arms Policies May Spread Far

By JIM PEACOCK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

As with a pebble thrown into a lake, the ripples from the U.S. state department's comments on Canada's nuclear-arms policies may reach far-away shores.

The immediate result of Wednesday's statement, in which the state department criticized Canadian government defence policy regarding nuclear warheads for Canadian troops in Canada and abroad, was a storm in political circles in Canada.

Opposition parties, which have criticized Prime Minister Diefenbaker for not making public the government's position in this issue, have found ammunition to criticize the United States for interfering in Canadian affairs.

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson called the state department's action "blatant unjustifiable interference" in Canada's business.

CALLED INTRUSION

Even Prime Minister Diefenbaker said the statement was an unwarranted intrusion into Canadian affairs.

Some U.S. congressmen soon took the same tack, saying they were saddened by what they called the deterioration in Canada-U.S. relations.

Observers in Ottawa said the state department action is likely to become a major issue during the Canadian election campaign, with the Progressive Conservatives pointing it up as evidence of the government's advocacy of the need for made-in-Canada policies.

It is not inconceivable that the action could have at least some similar "boomerang" effects in other nations which have a fear of domination by the U.S.

The state-department incident may be no more than a pebble on the broad international waters. But it comes at a time when more than a little significance may be attached to it in nations besides Canada.

It follows the failure of Britain to win membership in the European Common Market, a failure blamed on President de Gaulle of France, who after the Macmillan - Kennedy Nassau agreement on nuclear missiles took an outright stand against British ECM membership.

FEAR U.S. DOMINATION

It is well known that de Gaulle does not want U.S. domination in Europe—there have been reports that the recent move in the ECM soon to try to limit the U.S. investment within in the bloc—in the trading group.

De Gaulle is said to have feared that the Nassau agreement, to put Britain's nuclear missiles into Europe's NATO force along with those of the U.S. and others, and British ECM membership, would be a step which would lead to Europe being absorbed by an Atlantic community dominated by the U.S.

Prime Minister Macmillan agreed with President Kennedy at Nassau to a modified agreement of the bomber-borne Skybolt nuclear missile, which Britain was to develop into a U.K. version for the Polaris submarine-missile. When Britain's Polaris fleet is ready it will become part of the Atlantic nuclear force.

Opposition spokesmen in Britain have accused Macmillan of bowing to U.S. pressure and relinquishing British sovereignty in the Nassau agreement — a contention he has denied.

It seems possible that the state department - Canada incident, however, minor though it seem in the over - all international scene, could add strength to de Gaulle's arguments about U.S. domination of Europe and coals to the fires of Macmillan's critics.

It would appear equally possible that smaller nations may note the incident and brace themselves against any dictation from the U.S.

No Pressure-Yet

Howe Near Rocket Record

NEW YORK (AP)—The pressure hasn't yet started to bother Gordie Howe even though the great winger for Detroit Red Wings has come within 10 goals of breaking Maurice (Rocket) Richard's career record—the most coveted in the National Hockey League.

"I guess the pressure will increase as I get closer," the 34-year-old Howe says. "But so far the only pressure has been from an eight-year-old, my son Marty. He asks me every day when I'm going to break the record."

Howe has 22 goals this season and 528 during a brilliant 17 year career.

Which among Gordie's goals have given him the most satisfaction?

"I don't remember too many of them," he admitted. "But the one that stands out the most was the first one I scored in my first game in the NHL back in 1946. I picked up a rebound and got it past Turk Broda of Toronto."

Although Howe shows no signs of slowing down, the Detroit management is planning his future well in advance.

"Gordie will become a defenceman in a few years and I'm sure he'll be a good one," said Sid Abel, the Wings' general manager and coach.

"I hope that abilting back to defence is a long ways off," Howe chipped in. "But when the time comes I guess I'll be the last to realize that I've slowed down."

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football League refuses to yield to heavy pressure for a quick announcement on the pro football gambling investigation and maintains he must wait until all available facts have been assembled.

The NFL's annual winter meetings ended Thursday but there still was no indication when Rozelle would feel free to make a report.

Given Top Weight in National

LONDON (AP)—Frenchman's Cove, one of Britain's smartest steeplechasers, has been given top weight of 168 pounds for the Grand National Steeplechase to be decided at Aintree March 30.

Dan Sheppard, the man responsible for allocating the weights, had one of the toughest assignments of his career Thursday. There has been no racing in England for about six weeks and steeplechase events that should have provided Sheppard with a guide to form were cancelled.

Seventy-three horses were listed in the weights for the National—rated the world's championship for steeplechasers and one on which the Irish Sweepstakes was based.

Two previous winners of the race — Kilmore and Nicolaus Silver—were given 154 pounds and Mr. What, winner in 1958, was assigned 148 pounds.

Lefty owned by Queen Mother Elizabeth, will carry 152 pounds over the four-mile, 856-yard course. The horses have to negotiate 30 difficult obstacles.

The number of horses will be cut between now and post time to about 30.

Rematch May Be Put Back

By BRUCE STOVEL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The heavyweight boxing championship rematch between champion Sonny Liston and Floyd Patterson, now scheduled for April 4 at Miami Beach's Convention Hall, may be pushed back to a later date.

Claude Ritter, Convention Hall manager, said Thursday that "hold orders" for both April 10 and 11 had been asked by the promoters, Championship Sports, Incorporated.

Critics of the April 4 date said it was too late to capitalize on the big Florida winter tourist season, which is ending by that time. But Easter Sunday is April 14 and many vacationers come to the area during the preceding week. Also, a Jewish religious holiday, which will be celebrated April 8-9, brings many to south Florida.

Player Next; Palmer 8 Behind

Nicklaus Tops Field In Classic

By JIM BACON

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player, with hot putters, were running gone-two today as the $50,000 Palm Springs golf classic went into its third round.

Arnold Palmer, the other member of golf's big three, was eight strokes behind and feeling mighty low about the whole thing.

Nicklaus, youngest United States Open champion since Bobby Jones, fashioned seven birdies—five of them on the back nine—for a 35-31 on the tough, par-72 Tamarisk course, one of four layouts in the 90-hole event. He also carded a 67 Thursday, paired with an opening-round 69, made him the leader with 133.

Player, with 67-69, was one stroke behind, as was young Bob Shave Jr. of Willoughby, Ohio.

Palmer, still playing well off the tee but scrambling on the greens, shot a par 72 at Tamarisk. That, with his opening 71, put him in a horde of 143 shooters.

PUTTING HURTS

"My putting is awful, just awful," moaned Palmer, a two-time winner of the classic.

Harold Keezee, first-round co-leader, shot a 71 Thursday to go with his opening 66 to tie for third place with 137. Johnny Pott and Tommy Aaron were in the same bracket.

The only Canadian in contention was Vancouver's solid old pro, Stan Leonard. Leonard carded a 70 Thursday after an opening-round 73 to move into Palmer's 12-man group at 143.

Kingston Juniors Play Tonight

Kingstons high-flying Frontenacs will tangle with the Belleville Junior "B's" for the final time during scheduled play here tonight in an OHA Eastern Junior League tilt at nine o'clock.

And very likely the Belleville players will be glad to see the last of the Frontenacs, at least until the playoffs. Kingston has won 17 of 18 games this year and Belleville has been their favorite victim.

Scores of the games between these two clubs to date read 7-0, 7-1, 10-0, 9-0 and 7-0, in that order, and all in favor of the loop-leaders.

However, with a round-robin playoff coming up among these two clubs and Peterborough, Belleville coach Don Barclay hopes to get his team in the habit of winning over the Fronts tonight.

"We are going to have to beat them in the playoffs so we might just as well start tonight," is the way the fiery coach puts it.

There's usually plenty of action when Belleville and Kingston clash, one way or another, and tonight will likely be an exception. The Frontenacs are tough to beat at any time and the locals' only chance of doing so is by staying on the ice and not in the penalty box.

Belleville held the powerful Fronts to a 2-0 score after two heats in Kingston Wednesday night but five goals in the third left no doubt as to the outcome. Seventeen of the game's 29 penalties failed to help the Belleville cause.

Read Fine Print, Refused Contract

Cepeda's Eyes Now O.K.

NEW YORK (AP) — First baseman Orlando Cepeda and the 1962 National League pennant winners, the San Francisco Giants, are not seeing eye to eye.

The big slugger thought he had eye trouble a few months ago after he failed a driver's test. But a specialist examined him and said Cepeda had 20-20 vision after he wore eyeglasses to help correct an astigmatism, won't talk about terms.

Cepeda joins a growing list of discontented Giants. Pitchers Jack Sanford and Juan Marichal and outfielder Felipe Alou have rejected their first contract offers, despite reported boosts for all three.

The announcement that centrefielder Willie Mays has signed appeared imminent. The Say-hey Kid's contract is said to call for $100,000.

Rematch May Be Put Back

By BRUCE STOVEL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Chicago's Bobby Hull and Montreal's Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion were two players who have scored more goals in one season than anyone else playing in the National Hockey League, returned from injuries Thursday night.

The results were spectacular.

Hull scored three goals and assisted on two others as the league - leading Black Hawks drubbed last - place Boston Bruins 9-2. The blond ace didn't appear much troubled by his thigh injury suffered last Saturday, when he crashed into a goal post while scoring.

Czech-born centre Stan Mikita also scored three goals for the Hawks.

Toronto centre Red Kelly also fired three in the night's other game, a 6-3 win by Leafs over Montreal Canadiens.

There had only been four three-goal scorers this season in the league before Thursday night.

BOOMER, BREWER BUMP

In the hotly - contested Toronto - Montreal game, Geoffrion had barely stepped on the ice after a 12-game absence when he and Carl Brewer, the Leafs hardrock defenceman, attempted to square off in front of the Toronto net.

The world - be combatants, hurling insults and clawing at referee Eddie Powers and the linesmen, forgot to go to it with each other near the penalty box.

Powers then cracked down. He added a misconduct to each player's minor, and tacked a game misconduct on Geoffrion for his unruliness. This automatically levies a $75 fine on the fiery right winger, com pared with $25 for Brewer.

Toronto's win enabled Leafs to take over sole possession of second place, two points behind Hawks and two points ahead of Canadiens. Detroit is three points behind Montreal. The Wings have a fat 16-point edge over the fifth-place Rangers.

Kelly scored the first two leaf goals, after Canadiens had taken a 2-0 lead in midway through the first period on goals by Gilles Tremblay and Dickie Moore.

SCORES PENALTY GOAL

Kelly's third goal was scored late in the third period on a penalty shot after a successful penalty shot of the season.

But it was the playing MP's second goal that turned the 15,334 fans, largest Montreal crowd of the season, against Powers. When he left, Powers was given showers of abuse by the crowd.

Kelly flicked in a rebound of a close-in shot by linemate Bob Nevin at 10:20 of the second period. Canadiens claimed Nevin was illegally in the goal crease.

Leafs scored four straight goals in the third period to take a 6-2 edge before Bobby Rousseau scored Montreal's third goal with little more than a minute left.

BIG M ADVANCES

Kelly, linemate Frank Mahovlich, captain George Armstrong and Dick Duff scored the third-period Toronto goals. Mahovlich's goal was his 27th of the season, tops in the league. The Big M also picked up the assists to boost his league-leading points total to 53.

Ted Lindsay's only shot goal came at 12:31, when Powers ruled Montreal defenceman Gay Talbot hindered Kelly's clear scoring chance by jumping the Leaf centre from behind at the Montreal blue line.

Kelly, a 35-year-old veteran, drilled the puck low into a corner from about 15 feet out. Plante was beaten cleanly on the play.

In Boston, the Hawks' nine goals matched the previous high for a team. The Rangers beat the same Bruins 9-3 last month.

Bill (Red) Hay, centre on the "million - dollar" line between Hull and Murray Balfour, scored a goal and added four assists. Ron Murphy and defenceman Pierre Pilote scored the other Chicago goals.

LED 5-0

Hawks jumped into a 5-0 lead in the first period with Hull and Mikita each scoring twice. Jean-Guy Gendron and rookie centre Bob Leiter scored Bruins' goals in the second period, but Chicago came back with four more in the final frame.

Hull was a doubtful starter before the game. His high-speed collision with a goal post in Detroit Saturday was at first thought to have fractured his leg, but later the injury turned out to be a severe bruise.

In weekend games, Chicago is at Montreal, New York at Toronto and Detroit at Boston Saturday. Sunday, the Canadiens are at Detroit, the Leafs at Chicago and Boston at New York.

International Bonspiel

Kirkland Lake Undefeated

By GEORGE FRAJKOR

QUEBEC (CP)—Two rinks from the Northern Ontario town of Kirkland Lake were in position today to accomplish the unprecedented—the domination of the Quebec International Bonspiel by one centre.

Frank Rainford and Orval Archer ran undefeated through their eight games of the 50th International Bonspiel and they can, in theory:

1. Each win one of the bonspiel's top trophies, and

2. Meet each other in the finals of the bonspiel's championship event.

Rainford ripped off a 9-6 victory over Colin Caswell of Sudbury Thursday night to enter the finals of the Chateau Trophy event against Ron Kemp of Hamilton.

Archer easily won 11-7 over Don Clark of Port Arthur, to make the finals of the Omega Trophy event, going against Hugh Little of Halifax.

ONTARIO RINKS ON TOP.

They completed what amounts to an almost total sweep by Ontario rinks of the bonspiel's top prizes.

In the Francois Jobin Trophy competition, the third major prize, Fredericton's Dr. Robert H. Chalmers meets Paul Murphy, of Midland, Ont.

The only Hartlimer left besides Chalmers, in the running for the three trophies is Little also a contender for the bonspiel playoffs.

A dark horse in the whole competition is Harold Frye of St. Thomas, Ont., out of the running for the three major trophies but very much alive in the playoffs and giving every indication of getting stronger.

Frye was beaten by Sam Weinmaster of Gravenhurst, Ont. in the quarter-finals of the Francois Jobin event 8-7, but in the playoff competition for the Lieutenant - Governor's Trophy he turned around and edged Weinmaster 9-8.

IN OMEGA FINAL

Little put the finishing touches to Weinmaster's hopes of winning one of the top prizes by crushing the Gravenhurst rink 13-5 in the battle for a final spot in the Omega.

However, Little is out of the playoff running since he was beaten 8-8 in a bitter fight by Rainford, whose Kirkland Lake curlers took like the strongest rink in the bonspiel.

Dr. Chalmers pounded Mel Stonehouse of Ottawa 9-6 while Murphy downed Jake Creighton of Dartmouth, N.S., 11-10.

Kemp's victory in the Chateau semi-finals was at the expense of another of the strong Kirkland Lake squads. He defeated Bob Ash 9-8 and put Ash out of the running for any of the big prizes. Ash was beaten 11-10 on the last rock of an extra end by Little in the first round of the Lieutenant - Governor's playoffs.

The bonspiel divides its entries into two events—the Chateau and the Omega Losers of the first round in these enter the Francois Jobin event, and all rinks making it as far as the quarter-finals of these three qualify to enter the playoffs for the bonspiel championship.

They also qualify for the grand aggregate trophy, which goes to the rink winning most games.

Said Willing To Switch

MONTREAL (CP) — Trimble is willing

That was the word from Burlington, Ont., Thursday as speculation mounted about who would succeed Perry Moss with the Montreal Alouettes.

Jim Trimble, a six-year man with Hamilton Tiger-Cats and the most successful coach in the Eastern Football Conference, said he is "interested" in the job.

He said he will probably meet today with Hamilton's general manager Jake Gaudaur to discuss the matter.

His contract with the Ticats—he's led them to five Grey Cup appearances in the six years—has another season to run.

"But I don't think Jake would stand in the way of any possibility of my advancement," said Trimble. "I want to stay in Canada and the Montreal job looks very interesting."

He said that if he doesn't hear from Montreal's owner M. R. (Ted) Workman in a couple of days "I will approach him."

MAY NOT WORK OUT

But Workman had something specific in mind and it might not work out.

Trimble m de it clear that he would only be interested in succeeding Moss if it was all the way—both as coach and general manager.

Workman said meanwhile that he planned on getting a coach separately and he said he "certainly wouldn't be enthusiastic" if Trimble was thinking of combining both posts.

In firing Moss Thursday, Perry was with the Als at $30,000 a season for three years. workman said simply it was the result of a policy clash.

But insiders say it was because Moss refused to be stripped of the coaching job to remain with the club only as general manager and it was put to Perry as an ultimatum.

Workman also said Thursday that he isn't interested in selling the team.

DENIES ANY SALE .

Commenting on a report of an offer by a seven-man Montreal syndicate willing to put up $300,000 he said:

"I'm just not interested—that's all there is to it."

So far, he said, at least three men have applied for the coaching job. But he didn't name them.

Indian Jack Jacobs, who quit the Als as a Moss assistant at the end of lost season, is said to be interested.

So is Leo Cahill, another assistant coach, recommended by Moss as a successor.

Meanwhile, it was reported Thursday in Corvallis, Ore., that second - string Montreal quarterback Joe Francis won't be back next year. Francis, a Hawaiian from Oregon State, was named assistant coach at his alma mater.

Bay of Quinte Bonspiel

Surprises, Upsets Feature Opening Play

There were a number of surprises and upsets in the opening day of the Bay of Quinte bonspiel but the curlers enjoyed perfect ice topped by the banquet held at the RCAF mess tion in the evening. The host to the curlers were the members of the RCAF with Air Commodore, J. F. Lane extending a welcome. Excellent entertainment was provided with Doug Bannion as master of ceremonies.

The main event of the spiel, the Corby trophy is down to the 32 while the Bata trophy second event is in the same stage. The men will be separated from the boys on Friday's draws in these events as both will be down to the eights. The other events will start early Friday with losers in the first two events forming the draws.

The dinner served by the Air Station for the curlers was excellent. Decorations featuring the spiel were works of art. Turkey, duck and capon were greatly enjoyed and those responsible are to be highly complimented. A piper, LAC J. C. McCurdy played the players to their seats with familiar Scottish airs. # Picton Defeats Petes

PICTON (Special) — Picton Merchants, completely outplaying the opposition over the first two periods, handed the slumping Peterborough Monsens an 8-5 defeat here last night.

It was the second straight loss for the Monsens at the hands of a junior "C" team, Napanee turning the trick earlier this week, and Picton had only 11 players dressed for the game at that.

Merchants took a 2-0 lead in the first frame, made it 7-1 after forty minutes and were in front 8-2 before Peterborough took advantage of penalties to score three goals in a row just over two minutes midway through the third frame. Picton outshot the visitors 36-35 and had 20 of their shots in the middle period.

The Haennel-Pero-Haddock line had another big scoring night for the winners, accounting for 13 scoring points, Harold Haddock collected two goals and four assists, Gary Haennel had two and one and Larry Pero got a goal and three assists. Carl Stacey picked up a goal and assist while Bob Brown and Bob Guernsey also scored.

Pete Shearer fired two Peterborough goals with Mike Self, Paul LeBarr and Norm Bean sharing the others. Billy Armour and Wayne Milburn drew two assists each, Winslow and LeBarr one.

Peterborough picked up nine of the game's 16 penalties, including a misconduct to Bob Walsh in the last minute of the second period. Four of Picton's seven minor penalties cost them as many goals in the final frame, three of them coming at 11.17, 12.09 and 13.28.

North Shore Hockey League

The race for first place in the Prince Edward North Shore Hockey League will go right down to the wire when the schedule winds up next Thursday night.

Belch Construction moved into first place, one point ahead of Hibbard-Callow, by downing Rossmore Merchants 8-2 last night while Stinson Construction whipped SACO 10-5 to climb into third spot, also by one point.

Hibbard-Callow and Belch's meet next Thursday and the winner of that game will take first place. Stinson and Rossmore also play each other with the third and fourth positions up for grabs. Playoffs will commence the following week.

Belch's led 4-1 and 7-1 by periods over Rossmore with Ralph Plane sparking the attack. Plane padded his league scoring lead with four goals and one assist. Larry Rowbotham earned two goals and three helpers while Ron Davis and Doug Hallam also scored. Bernie Boulter got both Rossmore goals.

Stinson's were ahead of SACO all the way, 3-2 after one and 6-2 after two heats. Harry Genereaux paced the winners with three goals and as many assists while Don Adams aided with two and two. Billy Genereaux had two and one. Larry Potter and Larry Hull one and one each and Everett Doxtator one goal.

Art Deline sparked SACO with two goals and two assists while Barry Porteous bagged two and one and Bill McCaffrey one goal. . .

Kidd Debuts In Mile Tonight

NEW YORK (CP)—Who will run Canada's first sub-four-minute mile?

The candidates are Bruce Kidd and Bill Crothers of Toronto, Jim Irons of Brampton, Ont., and Vic Reeves of Burnaby, B.C.

Kidd, on the strength of his 4:01.4 record run at Toronto last summer, is favored. But don't count the others out.

Crothers, Kidd's running partner from the University of Toronto, steps into the serious role of a miler tonight in the famed Wanamaker Mile at the Millrose Games here.

Crothers' best time for the mile is 4:07.3.

Tonight he's up against three men who have already bettered four minutes—Gary Weisiger of Quanico, Va., Bill Dotson of Lawrence, Kan., and Bobby Seaman of Los Angeles.

The games, one of the premier meets of the United States indoor season, have attracted some performers in many events.

Valery Brumel, the Soviet Union's world record-holder in the high jump, will try to maintain his perfect record against former world champion John Thomas. Brumel, who has whipped Thomas in all six of their meetings, has a world record of seven feet, 3¼ inches pending.

Kidd, Toronto's 19-year-old phenomenon, is the class of the two-mile field.

Stanley Matthews Still Playing, Starring

Soccer's 'Big M' Is 48 Today

By JOHN FARROW

LONDON (AP)—Stanley Matthews celebrates his 48th birthday today—still playing soccer, still starring and still winning the headlines.

Matthews of the soft - shoe shuffle, bewildering body swerve, fantastic spurt over about 10 yards and a capacity to pull any team up by its boots reckons he's got much more good soccer in him.

"I feel fine," he said. "Another birthday means just a change of figures.

"People have been talking about my retiring for years. But I'll know when the time comes to hang up my boots. Once I lose my enthusiasm for the game then I won't hesitate. I'll give up."

Matthews, star of England in nearly 80 matches and a name known, wherever soccer is talked about, appeared on his way out in 1961.

EVERYTHING CHANGED

Suddenly everything changed. Stoke City manager Tony Waddington got Matthews back to the club where he started his fabulous career.

Waddington paid Blackpool an estimated $2,500 ($7,500) for Matthews' signature.

The signing was made when Stoke faced relegation to the English League's Third Division and had debts reported to be about £50,000.

Then came Matthews back home.

The first match in which Matthews played attracted 40,000. Previous average had been 9,000.

The bank overdraft now has almost disappeared. Stoke has spent money on stars like Dennis Viollet from Manchester United, Eddie Stuart from Wolverhampton and Eddie Clamp from Arsenal, and Stoke is fighting for a place in the First Division.

"Stan helped us to come back fighting," Stoke manager Waddington said. "He's a great morale booster. He's done wonders for the other players."

Asks $5,000 For Boxers

MONTREAL (CP)—The boxing committee of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada has asked the National Fitness Council for $5,000 to cover part of the expenses to send a Canadian team to Dublin and Belfast for a series of exhibition bouts.

Al Decarie of Montreal, chairman of the committee, said Thursday night the team was invited by Paddy Carroll of Dublin, president of the Irish Amateur Boxing Association.

It was tentatively planned to send a team of 10 plus two coaches to Ireland.

"It might be more or less," said Decarie. "We'll try for 10 of our best from across Canada but if we don't have that many top-calibre fighters we'll go with less."

Thinks 'Horse' Helped Hull Score Goals

BOSTON (AP) — "Now I know what's been wrong with Bobby Hull—he's been skating too fast," said Chicago coach Rudy Pilous with a chuckle.

"Hull has slowed down because of the charley horse and look what happened," Pilous added, after his blond ace scored three goals and added an assist in a 9-2 National Hockey League victory over the last - place Boston Bruins Thursday night.

Skating at top speed for 47 games, Hull had been a slight disappointment as the defending co-champion scorer. He had 16 goals and 39 points to show for his efforts before he smashed his leg against goal post last Saturday. At first it was feared he had a broken leg but it turned out to be a severe bruise.

"I feel great," a beaming Hull said after his spectacular assist on the Maple Leafs' downed Montreal 5-3.

Brothers Brawl, Get Gate

Plagers Stage Own Feud

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

One thing about the Plager brothers from Kirkland Lake—they don't take guff from anybody.

Not even each other.

Bob Plager is with Guelph Royals in the Ontario Hockey Association provincial Junior A group. Younger brother Bill is with Peterborough Petes.

Their teams met Thursday night at Peterborough with the Petes scoring a decisive 8-2 win, and the Plagers got sore at each other.

Something happened in the third period which caused both to forget all that stuff about brotherly love. Sticks swung, there were harsh words and both went off to the penalty box.

Bob received a minor penalty for slashing. Bill, younger and less experienced, received two penalties—one for charging and one for slashing.

It was a bad night for Bob, in addition to his family squabble, he found himself in the embarrassing position of watching four Peterborough goals from the penalty box.

Three times the Petes scored power-play goals with Bob off the ice and scored another while Bob and brother Bill were cooling off together.

In another one-sided game, Hamilton Red Wings scored an 8-1 home-ice victory over St. Catharines Black Hawks.

Keith Wright, Bob Jamieson and Jim Paterson scored two goals apiece for Peterborough and Bryan Watson and Don Herriman one each. Billy Taylor and Bob Leiter were the Guelph marksmen.

Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stan Mikita, the scrappy Chicago centre who hadn't put the puck in the net in his last three games, had no trouble finding the range against Boston goaltender Ted Johnston Thursday night.

He scored three times as the Hawks overpowered the Bruins 9-2 and moved up into the fifth position among the National Hockey League's scoring leaders. Mikita now has 47 points on 20 goals and 27 assists.

Big Frank Mahovlich of Toronto, who leads the league in both goals and total points, increased both margins as the Leafs downed Montreal 5-3.

Neither Gordie Howe of Detroit, who holds third spot with 39, nor Andy Bathgate of New York, fourth with 48, played Thursday.

Tied with Boston's Murray Oliver for sixth place are two Montrealers — Henri Richard and Jean Beliveau — with 43 points. Beliveau leads the NHL in assists with 37.

Jelineks To Go on 'Their Own'

WINNIPEG (CP)—After more than 200 professional performances, Steve and Otto Jelinek of Bronte, Ont., world champion pairs figure skaters, have decided it's time they began preparing for and executing one world championship performance.

But, after leaving Ice Capades, the professional troupe they've been with for three months, they will not go out on their own through late March and April.

The pair, who are not listed with Ice Capades but appear nightly as unprogrammed guests," have wide contracts to make guest appearances, at $1,000 a performance, at local and club skating reviews in British Columbia and Ontario.

Their first show was out once where he and Maria, 20, would appear, because one of their brothers was ill.

"But, we might come back with the show for one more night," he said. "That would be all. I want to go into the business and Maria intends to go to Europe to study her languages."

Terriers Defeat Tigers 3-2

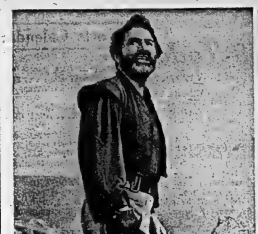
By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Galt Terriers are still giving Kitchener-Waterloo Tigers anxious moments in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series.

The pesky Terriers, involved in a fight with the Tigers for the fourth and last playoff spot, clipped the Tigers 3-2 Thursday night on an overtime goal by Bobby Mader.

The win boosted the last-place Terriers to within two points of the fourth-place Tigers.

Despite the keen rivalry between the clubs, and the importance of the game, only 504 fans turned out at Kitchener to see Mader apply the finishing touch.



It came at 3:22 of a 10-minute overtime period. Mader swept in on a rebound left by Kitchener-Waterloo goaltender Gary Hurley, who had just made a stop on Galt's Ricky Hay.

Hay scored the other goal for Galt and the Tiger marksmen were Mac Dubois and Don Duke.

Ski Coach Gets Gate

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP)—Tony Spiss, 31-year-old former Austrian world champion, has been dismissed as skiing director of nearby Devil's Glen ski area after less than four months on the job.

Michael Gee, vice-president of the resort, said Thursday the "straw that broke the camel's back" was Spiss' failure to appear as promised at Wednesday night's sports celebrities dinner in Toronto.

Gee said Spiss had signed last October for a guarantee of at least $4,300 to operate the ski school and equipment shop and for advance publicity work. The contract stipulated that Spiss would race only in the eastern United States, but he had broken his Toronto engagement to rate in Wisconsin.

Hollywood Gives Itself Face-Lifting Treatment

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Much has been said lately about Hollywood lifting itself by its bootstraps—not the movie industry, but Hollywood proper. The boulevard, the gay white way, that geographical curiosity from which sprang a world of glamor.

It had been a decade or more since I had taken a walk along the mile of Hollywood heartland. My impression then had been of a cluster of hock shops, juice stands, close-out sales and curiosities, in shops and walking along the sidewalk. Ugh.

The place has changed. If you're looking up, the best vantage point is at Vine Street, which shows signs of reaching for the sky. North of the boulevard is the circular capitol tower, which looks like a stack of records looking for a juke box.

At Sunset and Vine they're building a 22 - storey office tower which will be the tallest thing around.

Here the changes are more noticeable. A new bronze sidewalk stretches the length of the boulevard, studded with brass stars bearing the names of 1,7000 personalities. The merchants still haven't seen fit to include Charlie Chaplin, ostracized for his leftish views.

Did the shopkeepers outsmart themselves with the expensive sidewalk? The tendency is for tourists to stare down at the names instead of looking at the goodies in the store windows.

I fought that tendency in order to inspect the boulevard's other changes. What did I see? A cleaner, neater, fresher aspect to the street. Most of the 10 theatres along the stretch have glittering new fronts. Stores have been remodelled, painted attractive pastels, given new signs.

Nearly all the tourist traps have been obliterated.

TV Programming Planned Like Military Campaign

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Television programming, which progressively becomes more calculating, is planned as a military campaign. To the victor belongs the mass audience.

During the next month or so, the most important part of the planning for next season's skirmishes will go on. Network joint chiefs of staff will draw blueprints, plan strategy and select weapons. Prime targets are the most popular shows of the season—CBS' powerful Monday night comedy lineup and Beverly Hillbillies, NBC's Bonanza and ABC's Ben Casey.

CBS has chosen its anti-Bonanza weapon—that million dollar land show. Other networks have signed some shows and now are in the process of spotting them where — hopefully — they will strengthen weak spots or weaken the rivals' strong spots.

The manoeuvring contains some aspects of a giant chess games, except that the number of dollars and hundreds of careers and jobs are involved. It is a serious, delicate and deadly business.

Marilyn Maxwell, out of action since last summer when she underwent major surgery, returns to television next month on a Red Skelton show. . . . Zina Bethune, who takes daily ballet lessons and has danced professionally, gives viewers a sample of her talent in the Feb. 21 episode of The Nurses . . . Gary Lockwood, who had the No. 3 lead in last season's Follow the Sun, comes up the star of The Lieutenant, a series about the Marines for which MGM has made a pilot show.

Recommended viewing: Tonight: Arthur Godfrey and the Sounds of New York, special, CBS, 8.30-9.30 EST. Sunday: The Rise of Khrushchev, NBC, 10-11.

DOCTORS STRIKE

ROME (AP)—A country-wide strike of indefinite duration began today as 83,000 staff doctors left hospitals throughout Italy with only emergency service. They struck a protest a government plan for reorganization of Italian hospitals. The plan is before Parliament.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21) Get down-to-earth where ambitions are concerned. Be practical. But don't try to hurry wonderful Cancer sensitivity. Finish projects. Form opinion for future action.

Leo (July 21 to Aug. 21): Let Leo personality shine through today. Be sparkling, dynamic. Express views clearly. But be willing to listen to "other side" of story. Emphasis on performance, not promises.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Good lunar aspect means your first impressions apt to be correct. Later, tendency may be restricted where intuitive flow is needed. Expression of love could come from "special" person.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Light touch wins day. Heavy-handed methods cause loss, irritation. Your sense of future probabilities very strong. You seem able to tell whether there is real promise--or merely talk.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Temptation today is to "promise anything." You must restrain this temptation, otherwise, difficulties loom. Be practical, yet imaginative. Give of yourself, but not more than you can afford!

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Good lunar aspect early. Do creative work during morning hours. Practice moderation tonight. Avoid extremes. One close to you may appear impulsive, but needs your steady, reassuring hand.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Push through to completion of home projects. Only way to relax tonight is to get details out of way early. Live up to promises, responsibilities, especially with family members.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Respected member of community may ask for your assistance, ideas. Be co-operative. Don't scatter forces. Finish one thing at a time. Maintain civic pride.

If today is your birthday . . . You have pleasing personality and charm of manner. Domestic tranquility is indicated in your chart.

General Tendencies: Cycle up for Taurus, Gemini, Cancer. Special word to Sagittarius: Saying things merely to make others happy could lead to labyrinth-like road of confusion.

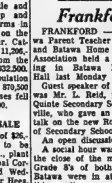
Most of Homes Purchased As Status Symbols

HALIFAX (CP) — Delegates representing most of Canada's house builders were advised Wednesday by an American to construct houses with appeal for prestige buyers.



More than 400 contractors and tradesmen at the National House Builders Association annual convention heard William A. Molster of Washington, marketing services director for the national association of home builders of the United States advise them to build for the biggest market.

Mr. Molster said biggest buyers are those who purchase prestige homes to impress their friends. He said these people buy about 65 per cent of the new homes sold each year.

"Minimum shelter buyers" who purchase houses to provide space for an increasing family are only about five per cent of the houses.

Mr. Molster suggested builders should gear planning and construction with wage scales and the growth of their communities.

Bell Phone Gives 2-Hour Course in Winter Driving

WINTER DRIVING COURSE — Bell Telephone safety instructor Jack Faulkner (second from right, explains how to steer into a skid or spin to Fireman Irvine Browning (at wheel) as Fireman Al Ryan (right) and instructor Bruce Mason (passenger in truck) hearken to his words. About 175 people took this special course during the past 10 days.

Actually it looks quite easy. There you are driving along at 20 miles an hour in your vehicle, approaching a stop sign about 120 feet away and the fellow beside you tells you to start braking for the stop.

You do this and find that you have become the potential killer of someone's favorite Aunt Agatha and a brood of small ones as your vehicle gently slips and slides its way across the intersection, making undulations like a South American dancer and gently buries its prow in a snow bank on the opposite side of the intersection.

What happened? Well to start off with you were on an icy slightly downhill road and the temperature hovered about 25 degrees above zero. Next you forgot to pump your brakes until, in a frenzy panic, you realized that by gosh, you were not going to be able to stop in time.

Fortunately no one was maimed or injured and nothing suffered more damage, except, perhaps, your aplomb, because these were a part of a special winter driving instruction course set up by the Bell Telephone people behind their Wilson Street garage.

The fellow with you was Bruce Mason of Madoc, who, together with Jack Faulkner of Kingston, has spent the last week giving safe winter driving to 131 district Bell drivers and about 40 local public works department drivers and Ontario Provincial Police officers.

Two-Hour Session

These fellows have reduced winter driving down to a simple science and have been imparting this knowledge to drivers in a series of two-hour courses. Each consists of classroom and an hour's class time to explain the theory and hazards of winter driving and a practical course.

Drivers should winterize their driving habits as well as their vehicles, advise Messrs. Faulkner and Mason. There are a number of problems which are encountered in winter driving.

The problems or potential dangers are: reduced visibility, lessened traction, expanded and greatly varying stopping distances, rough and icy roads, sudden changing road surfaces and unusual weather conditions.

These situations can be met by defensive driving, recognizing when the possibility of potential dangers exist and constantly checking road conditions en route.

For instance, to ensure maximum possible visibility make sure your wiper blades are in good condition, that your defrosters are working properly and clean off your windows and make sure they are free of snow, ice and condensation before starting down the road.

When you start off do it smoothly and gradually. Do not gun your engine or let up the clutch suddenly. Gradual application of the accelerator and easing in the clutch will result in getting underway without much difficulty.

TEMPERATURE A FACTOR

When preparing to brake remember that on glare ice it takes you 114 feet to stop from a speed of 20 miles an hour — if the temperature is around the zero mark. At 10 degrees above zero you need 155 feet to stop from the same speed. At 20 degrees make sure you have 195 feet and at just below freezing you will require 235 feet to come to a halt.

When braking use a pumping action but avoid doing it in an abrupt or jerky manner, especially if your vehicle is equipped with power brakes or a vacuum booster system.

If you drive such a vehicle use a slow pumping action in order to allow the brake shoes time to release before the next application of the brake pedal.

From this it should be obvious that there is one other thing to keep in the back of one's mind at all times — keep your speeds down when on ice or potentially slippery surfaces.

For those who are in the habit of gunning their motor and stopping their automatic transmission into a lower range to assist in braking their vehicle it is advisable to use discretion. Such action can cause a tail-spin on slippery surfaces, especially with automatic transmissions.

The Bell instructors advise that gearing down should only be done for going up or down hills and should be done by coming to a stop first if one needs a lower gear to descend a hill.

When proceeding up a hill do not accelerate any more than is necessary to maintain the speed of your vehicle at a moderate rate.

If your vehicle should start to slide or spin shove in your clutch and steer into the direction of the slide. Once you again have your vehicle under control ease in the clutch and proceed (unless, of course, you find yourself in a snow bank or ditch). Do not use the brakes.

CHAINS A HAZARD

A warning concerning the use of chains is given by the course instructors. These items should not be used on ice but only in unusual circumstances where deep snow is encountered in back country roads. They are dangerous on ice because once a car begins to spin or slide sideways the chains turn into runners and reduce traction.

Unusual and potentially dangerous conditions are also reviewed in the course. Winter drivers should watch out for ice ruts on roads. If you find yourself in a set of ice ruts do not attempt to get out of them by "gunning" the engine. This could cause the car to jump out and go off the road.

Also be on the watch for ice on bridges and in shaded areas, especially rock cuts, when the rest of the road is wet. In these areas the ice rarely gets any thicker to melt unless the temperature has been above freezing for a long time. These conditions are especially predominant in the early spring time.

Be careful when driving or parking on plowed country roads. Often the plowed area extends over the edge of the ditch. If you do run off the road, do not attempt to try and get back on by wrenching the steering wheel. Either stop and try to back out or try to pull out gradually as you continue forward.

Parking can also be a problem. Beware of locations where there is a mound of ice or a grade. A vehicle can easily slide out of its position whilst left unattended.

In blinding snow storms the best thing is to get off the road as far as possible. If you cannot get off the road completely leave your outside turn light flashing so that the next person can tell how far on the road your vehicle is. It is also a good thing to leave on the car headlights.

PASSING PLOWS

Meeting and passing snow plows also require care and an intelligent technique. If you meet a snow plow on a road pull over as far as possible and come to a stop if necessary. Plenty of room is necessary as sometimes the plow blade will strike a snow-covered obstruction and cause it to bounce into the centre of the road.

Do not attempt to overtake a snow plow if you cannot see past it. Usually it is sufficient to let the plow driver know you are behind and he will allow you to pass at his first opportunity, to pull over.

Another danger to watch for is children playing. Messrs. Mason and Faulkner stressed that children often forget about safety when they are playing.

Another word of caution is sued by the instructors was not to drive emotionally no matter how much provocation might exist. Proper driving is a challenge to the individual to make full use of his knowledge, skills and techniques — especially in the winter time.

Safety belts also came in for comment. Have them installed in your car and use them. They are the most effective traffic safety device available to date in the event of an accident. It was pointed out that the chances of death are five times greater if you are thrown from your car and there is also an appreciable decrease in the chance of lesser injury if belts are worn.

ACCIDENT PROCEDURE

If, in spite of all this information, you do become involved in an accident there a few facts of procedure to keep in mind. First, keep calm. Then render first aid if able and if required. Next call the police. If a doctor or an ambulance is required, call them and explain that it is an emergency call — otherwise you might be stuck for the bill.

If you are directly involved make no admissions or take any blame for the accident, even if you feel you may be wrong. Above all do not give money or hoping to settle things on the spot in hope of avoiding an insurance claim. This is considered to be an admission of guilt and you are left liable to suit by the other party.

Remember to get the names and addresses of witnesses and also have your proof of insurance with you. The latter is now required by law.

Incidentally, Mr. Faulkner advises that experience shows most people will only absorb about 10 percent of this information. You are therefore at liberty to read this nine more times if you so desire.

If such is not your desire, then at least remember the following. If you get into a skid do not use your brakes, depress your clutch and steer your front wheels into the direction of the skid. Practice defensive driving and be sure of the control of your car at all times. Test out your brakes and get an idea of what the road surface is like before you have to stop, not afterwards.

Safe motoring.

Boy Friend Can't Stand Children

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—My boy friend and I are both 20. There is only one thing about him that really bothers me and that is that he feels when a woman is pregnant she should lock herself in the house and not let anyone see her. He doesn't understand much about pregnancy, only that a woman becomes ugly.

We watched a TV show once on a woman having natural childbirth and he said he thought it was stupid and that she should go to sleep at the beginning and wake up when it was all over.

Also, he can't stand children when they are small, especially when they have no hair. He likes them more when they are about a year and a half as they are more fun to play with and are less bother.

I would like about three children myself.

Is this just a stage he is going through? In every other way he would be a wonderful husband.—CONFUSED.

DEAR CONFUSED—Boys who grow up without younger sisters or brothers often have half-baked ideas about babies and pregnancy!

I can't see too much glamor in the shape of a pregnant woman myself—but the complete picture is far from ugly. Just wait till he is looking forward to the delivery of his own offspring and you'll find a new kind of admiration and concern in his care of you.

He shows how little he knows when he thinks a girl can have a baby in her sleep. If ever novels bite, that's from having too-reticent parents. Even that will change as he matures.

Your task is to present a picture of attractive, lighthearted femininity. The rest will come.

DEAR DORIS—I am very much in love and it is a feeling my boy friend returns emotionally. We are anxious to start life together but there is one drawback—my career.

If I marry now, my career might not be fulfilled. Do you think I should wait and see if there is a chance to keep him while I am achieving my goal?—TWENTY AND IN LOVE.

DEAR TWENTY—Just yesterday I heard of a woman of 58 whose husband died two years ago. She was left without support so decided to try teaching again.

Letters flew back and forth to the distant spot where she had graduated and taught. She got the papers she needed and was accepted by the local board of education. is now teaching again and independent.

If she hadn't finished training 35 years ago, she would have been stumped now. And this is one example of many I could describe.

Finish your education by all means and have a special skill at your fingertips. If your boy friend loves you, he won't leave you.

CONFIDENTIAL TO DOT—Don't give up now. Nobody who can go back and get grade 12 at 43 has my admiration. With a deserting husband, growing children and a crotchety old father to complicate things. The teacher's certificate will equip you for independence, so stay with it.

Insist on your father living in his own little house so that the boy at home can board with the friendly neighbor and concentrate on school work. We don't want your son sacrificed to the cause.

(Is it a point of etiquette that's bothering you? Ask Doris for how it's being done in Canada.)

PM Still Mum On Possibility Of Dissolution

Clearly Enjoys Keeping Everybody in Suspense

OTTAWA (CP)—Will he on Monday or won't he?

The "he" is Prime Minister Diefenbaker. The big question involves dissolution of Parliament for a new election.

He seemed to come close Thursday. He seemed still closer Friday after a 40-minute call on Governor-General Vanier, the required prelude to dissolution of Parliament.

At no time would he say he won't ask for dissolution. But he extended the two-day cliff hanger by side-stepping every opportunity to say he would.

Clearly enjoying the persistent attention of reporters, he left them with a final enigmatic remark: The cabinet "might as well" meet today since all the ministers will be in town for the annual Parliamentary Press Gallery dinner. The time was unspecified.

U.S. ACTION A FACTOR

Basic elements of the current political crisis are these:

1. The refusal of the United States state department Wednesday in issuing a statement criticizing Canada's government policy on acquisition of nuclear arms for Canadian forces.

2. Repetition of these criticisms by the state secretary Dean Rusk Thursday despite unanimous attacks by the four Canadian political parties in Parliament on American entry into a domestic political issue.

3. The possibility that the three opposition parties—Liberals, Social Credit and New Democrats—may combine their strength in a vote of non-confidence Tuesday night. Together they outnumber the Progressive Conservative government forces 148 to 115.

4. The expectation of a further series of non-confidence motions if the government survives Tuesday, or the possibility the government will be unable to get supply through Parliament to pay its bills beyond Feb. 13.

NATION DEFENCE DEBATE

The crisis has boiled up and simmered down periodically since a week ago Thursday when the Commons wound up a defence debate in which the three opposition parties attacked the government and Prime Minister Diefenbaker spoke in reply.

Wednesday the state department, without mentioning Mr.

$195 Million Shelter Project Sought in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kennedy administration proposed to Congress today a $195,000,000 fallout protection program which would stress shelters in the suburbs.

Defence Secretary McNamara sent the plan to the House of Representatives and Senate—coupling it with a recommendation that the Pentagon civil defence program be broadened to cover natural disaster relief.

McNamara said the defence department's national shelter survey has located spaces that would provide fallout protection for more than 100,000,000 Americans.

He said many of the spaces located so far are in urban areas. "There is need for new shelter space better located in relations to homes," he said.

McNamara proposed a $175,000,000 incentive program, offering federal aid of up to $2.50 a square foot for civic and non-profit institutions which provide acceptable shelter spaces.

Death Toll Officially Put at 78 In 'Two Hours of Hell' at Ankara

ANKARA, Turkey (Reuters)—The death toll today officially rose to 78 in Ankaras "two hours of hell" in which a Viscount airliner and a Turkish DC-3 crashed into the heart of the city.

Eleven gravely injured persons died in hospital during the night.

Fifteen of the dead—including five Americans — were aboard the Middle East Airlines Viscount from Beirut, Lebanon, and three were in the Turkish Air Force cargo DC-3 which was flying "blind" on instruments at the time of the collision.

The two aircraft broke in two and scattered ruined "like Dresden" on nearly a square mile in the crowded business heart of the city. Seven persons died and 32 were reported injured among the blazing banks, stores and cars.

Ankara radio said 50 buildings were devastated in "two hours of hell" when part of the Viscount crashed into buildings bordering the main city square and another part flattened lunchtime crowds, cars and trees as it slashed across the square.

The radio operator of the DC-3 was killed when his plane crashed, bailed out too late from only 100 feet and was killed when he entered a joint inquiry into house killing a family of four.

In a statement issued in Bolrut the airline said pilot Capt. Maurice Silwedi, 29, a Southern Rhodesian, and his crew of two

HOUSE ROUTINE RESUMED AFTER HECTIC DEBATE

Discuss Pollution And Unemployment

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons pursued a business-as-usual routine Friday, discussing unemployment and water pollution.

But the calm of a normal Friday debate amid depleted benches contrasted with rumors of parliamentary disturbance swirling outside the chamber and with the heat of Thursday's emergency debate on United States intervention in the no clear arms controversy.

As Speaker Marcel Lambert declared the sitting ended, there was a burst of laughter from all corners and an unusually large press corps trooped out of the reporters' gallery.

Earlier in the day the Commons resumed scrutiny of the labor department's spending estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31.

DEBATE POLLUTION BILL

It also debated—without the matter coming to a vote—the perennial anti - pollution bill sponsored by W. Ross Thatcher (NDP—Kootenay West) which duplicates one sponsored some months ago by Mr. Diefenbaker when he was an opposition member.

The bill would make certain water pollution misdemeanors subject to Criminal Code prosecution.

Monday the Commons begins a two-day supply debate on any subject matter. Liberal Leader Lesage will lead Opposition choosers, capped by a Tuesday night non-confidence vote.

On Friday opposition speakers keyed an understanding of the Catholic position, said it strongly opposed extension of the separate school system.

The brief contained 11 recommendations and claimed five of them supported the principle of

Bone-Rattling Cold Wave Sweeps East From Prairies

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

A massive blast of arctic air swept over the Prairie provinces and into Eastern Canada today, leaving bone-rattling cold in its wake.

The storm struck the Prairies Friday with snow and strong winds that closed highways and schools, grounded planes, created miserable driving conditions and sent the mercury skidding.

It began its journey over Northern Ontario during the night and is expected to cover most of the province by Sunday, then swing into Quebec.

Ontario emerged from one of the coldest Januarys in years to be greeted by a fine February day Friday. But none of the balmy nice weather was expected today. Either snow, rain or freezing rain is in store for the pro-

Protestant Group Requests Separate Schools Review

TORONTO (CP)—An investigation of Ontario's separate school system with a view to clarifying relevant legislation has been urged in a brief to provincial legislature.

Presented Friday by a delegation from the Inter-church committee of Protestant-Roman Catholic relations, a Protestant group, the brief said the Roman Catholic brief urging expansion of the separate school system.

Presented by Ontario bishops last fall, the Roman Catholic brief requested additional provincial aid for separate elementary schools and establishment of separate secondary schools and teachers' colleges.

The inter-church brief, governing understanding of the Catholic position, said it strongly opposed extension of the separate school system.

The brief contained 11 recommendations and claimed five of them supported the principle of

Police Constable Forced To Drive Gunman Around

ESPANOLA, Ont. (CP)—A police constable was forced at gunpoint to drive around Espanola for 30 minutes by a man who kept the muzzle of a revolver against the back of his neck.

Earlier Friday, the man had held an Espanola provincial police constable at gunpoint.

Const. Tony Germaine of the force is said to have received a call shortly after midnight to settle a family dispute at a house in Espanola later another call came in saying there was a man with a loaded .22-calibre rifle at the house.

Const. Germaine said that by the time he arrived at the house the man had left in a taxi. He was checking the taxi stand when he was joined by Const. Ted Giannini of the provincial force.

"We hadn't been there a minute when we got a call that the man we were looking for had returned to the house and was standing out in the road holding Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bois prisoner," Const. Germaine said.

The two officers separated and entered the street from opposite ends.

"Giannini had already arrived when I got there and was being held at gunpoint by the man along with the Boises," said Const. Germaine.

The severity of the arctic air mass can best be told in these predicted temperatures for Ontario areas:

Toronto was in for 30 degrees above zero today, but the mercury is expected to plunge to 20 below tonight. Sault Ste. Marie expected a high of 32 above today and 20 below tonight.

Other cities: London and Kitchener, 38 above today, zero tonight; Peterborough, 38 above today; five below tonight; Toronto, 40 above today, five above tonight.

Intermittent snow or freezing rain in some parts of Quebec is expected to give way to cold temperatures Sunday.

Snow and rain are forecast for much of the Maritimes.

FIJI WARRIORS ESCORT QUEEN FROM AIRPORT

Royal Couple Board Yacht Britannia

LAUTOKA, Fiji (Reuters)—Ten tall Fijian warriors in traditional sulus (Skirts) and carrying bamboo torches escorted the royal car as Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip arrived here tonight.

Fiji warriors wearing tunics bright with medals of the Pacific war lined parts of the 15-mile route from Nadi Airport where the royal plane landed at sunset.

A massed choir chanted a song of welcome as the Queen received a bouquet from an eight-year-old Indian girl, Satish Kaur, and met leaders of the three communities—Fijian, Indian and European—in Lautoka.

Approaching the Britannia, the procession was greeted by leveller songs to the accompaniment of guitars and drums from small groups on the road.

HOLD BACK CROWDS

Police in specially massed ranks were held back by scores of warriors with blackened faces, wearing long clothes interwoven with fronds of leaves.

The Britannia will take the royal party to Suva, on the southern side of Viti Levu Island where a colorful official welcome is planned for Sunday.

After a five-hour visit to Suva, the Queen and Philip will leave on the Britannia for the voyage to New Zealand.

At Nadi Airport, 15 miles from here, the Queen and Philip received the traditional kava welcome when they arrived from Honolulu and Vancouver for a 24-hour visit.

Despite heavy rain earlier in the day the sky was almost cloudless with the temperature in the 80s when the Queen's Boeing 707 jet airliner landed.

Cheers resounded over nearby sugar cane fields and rice paddies, but these came mostly from European visitors.

Hundreds of Fijians and Indians mostly observed the local custom of a silent welcome, while showing affection impartially by waving and smiling happily.

Auditor's Right To Examine Tax Forms Debated

OTTAWA (CP)—What type of income tax files should be available to the auditor-general to enable him to do his job as watchdog of the federal treasury?

This question was discussed in the House of Commons public accounts committee with divergent views being expressed by former revenue minister Nowlan and Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson.

Mr. Nowlan, now finance minister, said he is firmly convinced that the auditor-general should be provided only with the collection file of a taxpayer whose files relate to his revenue department's attempts to collect back taxes.

He said the auditor-general should not have access to a taxpayers assessment file because this file refers to a person's personal financial situation. Such files should be kept confidential and were not required by the auditor-general to carry out most of the investigations he makes.

However, Mr. Henderson said he requires access to both types of files to do "a proper job."

He said that prior to the case of three income tax files that Mr. Nowlan kept from him (there had been no similar refusals since 1947.

winds, said the weather bureau, will bring bitterly cold weather to Northern Ontario this afternoon and to the remainder of the province by Sunday morning.

Predicted temperature variations today and overnight were as much as 60 degrees. Here are a few: Hamilton and Trenton, 40 above and zero; Peterborough 38 above and 5 below; Sudbury 32 above and 20 below; Timmins 30 above and 36 below.

Doukhobors Try to Present Letter to Queen

VANCOUVER (CP)Sons of Freedom Doukhobors Friday broke rank with the main body Queen Elizabeth with a letter recalling that Queen Victoria helped the sect escape Russian persecution and appealing for the Queen's intervention in their present "plight."

The radical Freedomites sent a delegation early Friday to Hotel Vancouver where the Queen stayed overnight after leaving Victoria and her flight to the South Pacific.

Mrs. Fanny Storgoff, unofficial leader of the Freedomites, was held back by a police cordon and dense crowds when she tried to present the letter as the monarch walked to her car.

The Sons of Freedom then sent the letter by Lieutenant-in Vancouver for two weeks Governor Pearkes, asking it be presented to the Queen in the interior of the province after a trek from their homes in the interior of the province to protest against the imprisonment of some of their members for acts of terrorism.

FIRST Canadian Map Defence of Case For Senate Probe

Mystery Surrounds Receipt of Message

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. diplomats awaited word from Ottawa today whether a public apology had been accepted by the Canadian government while American officials mapped out a defence of their case in preparation for a Senate investigation Monday.

There were some reports that heads may roll or transfers take place in the state department because of unprofessional handling of the nuclear controversy. Informants said a lot may depend on the findings of Monday's Senate foreign relations committee hearing.

Senator George Aiken, Vermont Republican who will preside at the closed-door investigation, has received distinction with the department's public airing of the nuclear issue. He said he will keep an open mind until the investigation is over.

Main witness will be George McGhee, 50-year-old undersecretary who participated in deliberations, who will be accompanied to the hearing room by other officials who participated in development of the department's policy. McGhee is a former Texas oilman and a Rhodes scholar.

MAY BE BUNGLE

An indication that the department already has concluded it has somehow bungled a bit was the unusual decision of State Secretary Dean Rusk himself to express his regrets if his department by Wednesday of state ment had offended Canadians by its words or its tone.

Rusk told a press conference Friday he realizes nuclear weapons is a sensitive political issue in Canada and that decisions about nuclear defence "are particularly testing and painful."

Rusk maintained the Wednesday statement, which Prime Minister Diefenbaker described as an unwarranted intrusion in Canadian affairs, set out the facts "as we understood them and may have been wrong."

Diefenbaker had complained the statement — which contradicted his own version of Canada-U.S. negotiations on nuclear warheads—had been handed to Canadian officials just 30 minutes before it was released to the public.

Without naming the prime

State Dept. Criticism of Canada Was Work of Several Hands

WASHINGTON (CP)—Whose heavy hand created the U.S. state department's public criticism of Canadian nuclear policy?

Authorities say no one man was involved—that the Wednesday statement, finally modified by State Secretary Dean Rusk's apology, was the product of a number of men in a number of state department divisions.

It had passed, they said, out of a staff study prepared by the department's Canadian section and cleared by the assistant secretary for European affairs, the U.S. embassy at Ottawa.

Heads of the department's Canadian - European division huddled over the staff study as it related to Prime Minister Diefenbaker's remarks in the Canadian Commons last May. Conferring with them were other officials who dest with Canadian policy.

Among those officials was Willis Armstrong, 50, a director of the department's Common wealth and European division and another former high-ranking official of the U.S. embassy at Ottawa.

The statement in its draft form climbed the department's echelons and was reported to have reached Rusk himself. Rusk apparently gave his ap-

OTTAWA (CP)—Among the most interesting questions left unanswered in the wake of Friday's developments in the nuclear controversy is this one:

Whatever happened to the expression of "regret" the United States was supposed to convey for the harsh way it criticized the Canadian government?

State Secretary Dean Rusk told a press conference in Washington Friday: "I wish to say to all Canadians that we regret it if any words of ours have been so phrased as to give offence, but the need to make some clarifying statement arose from a situation not of our making."

He was referring to the U.S. press release Wednesday night which blistered Canada's position on nuclear defence and directly contradicted statements of Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

SENT TO OTTAWA

Mr. Rusk, asked at the press conference whether this expression of regret was the "tone" of the state department release was being conveyed to the Canadian government, replied:

"It is being conveyed to the Canadian government."

There was confusion here Friday night as to whether this had been done, and how.

The external affairs department said yes—the expression of regret had been sent to the government through the U.S. embassy here. It declined to give details.

Other government officials either refused to comment on the message, or said they were not aware it had been conveyed.

The U.S. embassy said the message had been conveyed to Ottawa through the Canadian embassy in Washington and that the American embassy here was not involved. However, it did distribute transcripts of the press conference containing the full text of Mr. Rusk's remarks.

In Washington a Canadian embassy official said Mr. Rusk's remarks had been received there and transmitted to Ottawa.

A possibility remained that Charles S. A. Ritchie, Canadian ambassador to Washington, brought the message with him when he came here Friday for consultations. Mr. Ritchie could not be reached for comment on the question.

Mild Surprise London Reaction To Nuclear Tiff

By ALAN HARVEY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canada's argument with the United States over nuclear defence is being watched in London with polite interest and a certain mild surprise.

"Not often Canada gets on the front pages," said one British observer. "You're usually so genteel. And what happened to all those speeches about the longest undefended frontier?"

Asked for less lighthearted comments, spokesmen for the Commonwealth relations office and the foreign office recoiled. "Not normally our practice to comment on this sort of thing," one source said grimly.

One unofficial reaction to the Canadian-U.S. tiff is that the Western alliance is in "enough trouble" already after this week's developments in Brussels, with France shutting Britain out of the Common Market and commentators talking sombrely of "the funeral of Europe."

Articles have already been written about the decline of NATO. Canadian displeasure with the U.S. state department, if still evident at the NATO meeting in Ottawa next May, will hardly provide the harmonious atmosphere conducive to easing strains in the alliance.

U.S. CALLED CLUMSY

First official comment on the dispute appears in a late afternoon edition of The Evening Standard, which says the U.S. has laid itself open to "harsh criticism" in attempts to impose nuclear weapons on Ottawa.

"Their handling of the situation has been anything as well as clumsy," says the newspaper.

Friday morning newspapers made the story a front-page item, but comment was confined to edited editorials in the stories.

The Manchester Guardian, in a Washington dispatch by Hella Pick, said Washington is "certainly wondering whether its threaten Canada with a withdrawal of some of the important defence contracts" placed in Canada by the U.S.

The Times, in a news dispatch from Ottawa, described Prime Minister Diefenbaker's denunciation of U.S. "intrusion" as one of the strongest statements ever made here against a friendly nation."

Police Cruiser In Fatal Crash

HAMILTON (CP)—Police said a Hamilton policeman, whose cruiser was involved in a fatal collision early Friday, was on his way to answer a burglar alarm at a drive-in restaurant when the accident occurred.

Const. Ronald Cruse's vehicle was in collision with a small car driven by Douglas Drysdale, 35, of Hamilton. Mr. Drysdale, father of three children, was killed when the car was thrown through his car windshield. The policeman was not injured.

Norris Studies SIU Request He Disqualify Self

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP)—Mr. Justice T. G. Norris is thinking over a plea by the Seafarers' International Union (Ind.) that he step down as one-man federal investigator of labor strife on the Great Lakes.

The SIU of Canada declared Friday—the 31st session of the public inquiry—that the 69-year-old jurist should disqualify himself. Yesterday, Mr. Justice Norris said he would render his decision next week.

The SIU request is based on the technical ground that the judge acted 10 years ago as a lawyer for the SIU on the west coast. Of Ottawa argued that this presented a "reasonable apprehension" of bias—although he declared that he was not alleging bias in fact.

"It may well be that the public would conclude that by reason of someone having acted at one time for one of the parties, he is incapable of acting thereafter to be fair, and bending over backwards would mean that he would lean over to someone," said Mr. Henderson.

JUSTICE SEEMS AMUSED

The SIU move was bitterly opposed by the Canadian Labor Congress, the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority and Upper Lakes Shipping Limited.

"This application is not made in good faith and should be dismissed," snapped Maurice W. Wright, lawyer for the 1,050,000-member CLC.

J. A. Geller, lawyer for the Upper Lakes line which is locked in a bitter struggle with the SIU, termed the SIU action ridiculous, frivolous and an attempt to delay the inquiry.

The argument lasted more than three hours and brought SIU questioning of CLC President Claude Jodoin.

Mr. Justice Norris said that unless he decides to accede to the SIU's demand he plans to hear testimony from some of Canada's top shipowners next week, starting with Howard Hindman of Hindman Transportation Company.

Claims Russia Threatens Mao With Boycott

LONDON (Reuters) — The Daily Telegraph says the Soviet Union threatened to stop all economic contact with Communist China if the Chinese do not "end their disruptive activities inside the Communist camp."

A front-page article by the newspaper's special correspondent on Communist affairs, David Floyd, says the threat was made in a Russian reply to a letter from the Chinese Communist party.

The Russian statement, dated Jan. 27, was received in the Communist capitals of Eastern Europe early this week and a summary was brought to London by a high Communist official, Floyd adds.

Groundhog Harbinger Of Spring?

Don't get your bathing suit out right away but the traditional mid-winter weather prognosticator today is supposed to be predicting that spring is not far away.

Today is February, 2nd (Candlemas Day) and according to tradition the groundhog makes his appearance from his hole to take a peek at the weather.

If the sun is shinging he goes back to his hole for another six weeks of winter. Conversely, if the sun is hidden by cloud, the back of the winter is supposed to be broken.

Well, today the sun was hidden with sullen clouds and an intermittent drizzle turned streets and sidewalks slippery and made things generally disagreeable out of doors.

So, unless the groundhog and tradition, are completely wrong, we've already had the major part of winter and spring is not far away.

Road Hazards Said Grim For Weekend

Join the Quinte district's traffic patrol tonight - - - by keeping your fingers crossed.

A combination of thaw, freezing rain, mushy highways and a below-zero temperature prediction after the sun goes down has the district's highways with its greatest hazard of the winter.

Provincial police in the area this morning, followed later by wet snow, that placed caution at a maximum for drivers. Up to noon no serious accidents were reported - - - but driving would be treacherous.

In Prince Edward County traffic was reported slowed this morning due to the hillington area by icy highways early this morning.

Board conditions were wet and slippery later in the morning as temperatures warmed up. But then came the weather man's prediction for the district that threatens to turn roads to glaciers later tonight.

The forecast is for three below in the Belleville-Trenton area. If that happens, say police, it might well be the worst weekend for driving so far this winter.

Only one traffic accident was reported in the immediate Belleville area this noon.

On Highway 401 west of the Wallbridge Road overpass, a small Volkswagen car rolled over in the median.

Children Run In Paths Of Automobiles

Two separate accidents involving youngsters were caused by similar incidents in Belleville Friday. Both children ran into the paths of passing automobiles, say traffic police.

At Church Street and Victoria Avenue, nine - year - old Peter Farrell, 183 Church Street, suffered leg injuries when he dashed into the path of a car driven by Donald Thoms, 138 Stanley Street.

On Bridge Street West six-year-old Deborah Foster, 94 Charlotte Street, escaped injury when she was hit by a car driven by Enos David, 7 Eastwood Park.

Broadcast Body Rules Against Color TV Plan

OTTAWA (CP)—The Board of Broadcast Governors said Friday it considers that color television should not be introduced into Canada at this time.

Subject to federal government approval, it also recommended that the publicly-owned CBC be permitted to establish a second French-language television station at Quebec City.

A further announcement listing the board's recommendations on other applications will be issued later. Not included Friday was a decision on a French-language TV station at Timmins.

The board's statement said the board members reviewed evidence presented at Jan. 22 hearing on color TV and came to the conclusion tha the time had not yet arrived when the BG could recommend that color TV begin in Canada.

At the hearing, the Electronics Industries Association representing most manufacturers and a few private stations advocated lifting of restrict ons on color TV. The Canadian Television CTV Television Network Limited favored a "go slow" attitude and supported establishment of an industry-wide committee to study the question.

WILL WATCH CAREFULLY

The BBG said Friday it has active committees with public and private broadcasters, with advertisers and advertising agencies and with the transport departments of the Commonwealth to keep in touch with the manufacturers as well.

"The board looks forward to the time when color may be introduced to Canadian TV but it wants the first public distribution to be favorable to reasonable success."

At last June the BBG reserved decision on the CBC's initial request that it be allowed to begin color TV broadcasting. This was followed by the resignation of board members Andrew Stewart and J. Alphonse Ouimet.

The BBG again rejected an application to set up a second French network — a television station at Quebec by a group headed by Jacques La Roche.

The board recommended permitting separate FM programming for radio station CJBQ-FM Belleville, but it suspended the licence be given for a one-year period. The BBG said it is contemplating revising the AM-FM regulations in 1963 and wishes to provide a period for licensees to examine with licensees the effect of these regulations after their examination of the increase was recommended for CJBQ-FM Belleville to 17,400 watts from 3,400 watts.

PM Has Right To Vacillate If He Desires

LONDON (Reuters) — The Manchester Guardian says in an editorial Canada's defence policy is a matter for Canada to decide.

The newspaper comments on the exchanges between Ottawa and Washington over the nuclear fence which have led to Canadian charges of interference by the United States.

The Guardian says:

"Whatever may be thought of the vacillations which have marked Mr. Diefenbaker's policy in this field, he has every right to vacillate if he wants to.

"At best the state department was guilty of a foolish piece of bamfoolishness; at worst it may also have been guilty of an attempt to interfere in the domestic politics of another country."

The Times says:

"The root of the present struggle between Washington and Ottawa is that the United States administration knows precisely what it wants while the Canadian government, anxious of a divided country, can not make up its mind.

SHOULD BE AWARE

"United States impatience is in the circumstances understandable. The only question is whether, by pressing her case in public, she may not have increased the political temperature in Canada to a point where the arguments become more obscured than ever. Americans should now be aware of the danger of seeming to interfere in other countries' elections."

The Daily Express says:

"The Canadian decision is neither unduly touchy nor excessively submissive. Canada is one of the great powers of the world.

"They have the same stubborn spirit as the British and the Americans, the same insistence on equal consultation. And when the day dawns ken the same unflinching loyalty to an ally."

TO STAY AT HIGH LEVEL — The Canadian Good Roads Association forecasts that road construction in 1963 will continue at a high level and remain stable for the next three years.

Total expenditures this year by all governments—federal, provincial and municipal—totalled $1,000,000,000, an increase of $62,000,000 over 1961.

Happy People Best Judges Of Other Folks' Character

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Those who are happy themselves, psychologists have found, are best at judging correctly the qualities of others. . . . The unhappy man tends to see his own faults in the other fellow.

Women, generally, are also better than men at sizing up other people. . . . Exception: Dumb blonde females to what's wrong in their own husbands.

Nightmare warning: Many doctors now agree that the first signs of an approaching illness often show up in dreams. Long before the actual physical symptoms appear.

Life balances up: A survey by the Esquire shoe polish men found that more women than ever now shine their own shoes. . . On the other hand, about one-fifth of all meals eaten at home now are prepared by male members of the family.

Odd legislation: An old ruling in Washington, D.C., made it illegal for a guy to marry either his grandmother or his mother-in-law. (What'll law makers think up to be against next?)

Quotable notables: "The more a man knows, and the farther he travels, the more likely he is to marry a country girl." — George Bernard Shaw.

Life in bygone times: During the 18th century, homes of the European wealthy often had two tubs in a bathroom—one for washing with soap, the other for rinsing it off.

Health hint: Fewer than 10 per cent of those who diet to lose weight manage to keep it off. . . . The secret seems to keep your weight constant is to cut down the amount of food you eat one per cent each year after the age of 25.

An item I doubt myself: The average U.S. family spends only $2.56 a week in night clubs.

Good news for single men: The Journal of the American Medical Association says that "scientists now tell us there are 1,600 things a married man can worry about; a bachelor has only 1,100 things to worry about."

Inflationary note: Hungary once optimistically printed a banknote valued at 100 million million million pengos. . . . If final price on the world market was—half a cent.

Goldwater Blames Row On U.S. Policy

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—Senator Barry Goldwater (Rep. Ariz.) blames U.S. policy for the Canada-U.S. hassle over nuclear weapons.

Speaking at a Syracuse Press Club dinner, he said Friday night that Canada was influenced by such U.S. policy decisions as the scrapping of the Skybolt air-to-ground missile. The Skybolt was to have gone to British and Prime Minister Macmillan and President Kennedy agreed to supply Britain with the submarine Polaris missile after the United States scrapped Skybolt because of high development costs.

Canada was right in feeling it has should provide nuclear defence for the United States when she won't provide some for herself," Goldwater said.

Goldwater also said the American people are willing to go to war to establish the Communist regime in Cuba and the Kennedy administration should take forceful measures.

Goldwater predicted that, if the Cuban issue were put to a vote, the unanimous mandate to the president would be:

"Do anything that needs to be done to get rid of that cancer. If it means war, let it mean war."

Says Formidable Russian Base Exists in Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Strom Thurmond (Dem., S.C.) has charged that "behind the brush curtain in Cuba" lies a formidable Soviet military base with ballistic missiles and 20,000 to 40,000 troops.

He said in a newsletter to constituents Friday—that the information came from reliable sources. A Pentagon spokesman disputed the report, telling reporters:

"The information contained in Senator Thurmond's weekly newsletter is at wide variance with carefully evaluated data collected by U.S. intelligence from continued surveillance and other sources."

The spokesman for the Pentagon—which is in session as the week has been contradicting "informed sources" claims of Cuban troops in power on Cuba—asked the Senator to back up his charges.

"If Senator Thurmond has proof of any kind to support the information he has released, which differs from official intelligence information, the department of defence would like to receive the evidence," the spokesman said.

'Y' Basketball

In the other tilt of the evening's doubleheader the Steelers tripped up the Globetrotters 44-40.

Top dog for the Satellites was Ron Walsh with 38 points. Dave Hurst hooped 31 points for the losers.

John McKibbon's 19 points was tops for the Steelers. Next in line was Gary Schwindt for the winners with 10 points. Rick Graham counted for 18 points for the "Trotters". Jack Jury scored 13 points for the losers.

MR. GEORGE C. METCALFE

Loblaw Head Appointed N.C.A. Director

The appointment of Mr. George C. Metcalfe, president of Loblaw Groceterias Co. Ltd., as director of the National Centennial Administration has been announced by Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

Commissioner for the National Centennial Administration which is planning the world's fair for Montreal in 1967 is John Fisher, for many years known as "Mr. Canada".

Mr. Fisher was recommended as Centennial commissioner by Mr. Metcalfe in his Loblaw's annual shareholders' message back in September, 1960.

As early as 1958 Mr. Metcalfe said that plans should be underway for Canada's centennial and urged that the country's progress be used as the goal for a tremendous burst of enthusiasm, which would help sell Canada to the world.

Diefenbaker by name, contradicted many statements he made in his speech.

Thursday the state department came under fire from all four parties. But the three opposition groups also renewed their attacks on the government, based their criticisms on a statement issued by Defence Minister Harkness giving the minister's view of what Mr. Diefenbaker's Jan. 25 speech meant.

Against the express wish of the government, the three opposition groups combined their votes to force an emergency Commons debate on defence. This was done while Social Credit MPs—whose votes in the past have kept the government from defeat — were under the impression the government might dissolve Parliament if Social Credit backed the Liberals and New Democrats.

LULL ON FRIDAY

A lull followed Friday until Mr. Rusk gave a press conference which, in effect, reiterated the criticisms of his department's Wednesday statement.

Mr. Diefenbaker commented tartly that he had given the same picture on the nuclear arms question a week ago, and called his cabinet into session.

From this meeting, he headed to Government House but, finding his move anticipated by reporters, described the visit as one of his "regular" ones to Governor-General Vanier.

Returning to House of Commons which expected dissolution, he maintained silence. But word soon circulated to expect dissolution Monday.

Cobourg May Pay to Keep 'Head' off Water

COBOURG (Special) — This town may ponder ways to prevent its water some day looking like beer.

It won't taste like it, but it's feared a glass of municipal water may take on the unhealthy appearance of a good wheaty draught.

The problem is posed by algae.

Preliminary studies have shown it may cost Cobourg up to $100,000 to keep algae out of its water.

W. L. Andrews, a chemical engineer and member of the local public utilities commission, said tap water in some lakeshore towns develops a head like a glass of beer when it comes from the faucet — all because of algae. So far, Cobourg has not had this problem but its utilities commission is seeking to prevent it before it happens.

Mr. Andrews blames detergent for providing the phosphorous - nitrogen growth on which algae thrives.

Cobourg gets its municipal water supply from Lake Ontario.

It urged, however, that consideration be given an inquiry into wider use of legislation permitting the education minister to enter into agreements with universities and colleges concerning creation of teachers' colleges.

It recommended repeal of legislation which limits separate school support to a radius of three miles from the school and urged that all ratepayers have a voice in selection of school boards to administer secondary schools and that separate schools teach only Grades 1 to 8 if they are in a secondary school district. Some separate schools now teach Grades 9 and 10.

Picton Jury Awards Carrying Place Man $3,004

PICTON — In a civil action for damages heard in Supreme Court at Picton, a jury awarded the sum of $3,004.10 to Edward B. Young, 45, of Carrying Place. He sustained injuries in an automobile accident in November, 1960, on Highway 33, near Bloomfield. The defendant in the action was C. F. McGuire, driver for Agricultural Chemicals Ltd.

Evidence revealed that Mr. Young was a passenger in another car at the time. He was away from work for 17 days as a metal fitter at the RCAF base at Trenton as a result of injuries. He suffered severe lacerations to his face which required 45 stitches, injury to the left eye and knees.

As a result of his injuries, Mr. Young could no longer do the work he was doing before the accident, and he had trouble sleeping, R. E. Nourse, counsel for the plaintiff said.

An out-of-pocket expense bill amounting to $1,006.10 was produced by Mr. Nourse. This was reduced to $804.10 by the six-man jury which awarded $2,100 general damages.

Hon. Mr. Justic Smily presided and court will continue next week.

Heart Research Group Ho'ds Trenton Meet

TRENTON — Officials of the Ontario Heart Foundation attended a banquet for the Trenton chapter at the Skyline Restaurant in Trenton Thursday night.

Guest speaker Alec Baran of the Ontario body told about 30 persons present that the aim of the foundation was research, not charity. The reasons for this, he said, was that wherever the Foundation had approached the United Appeal with a view to joining the charitable organization, medical research had suffered.

Murray Robertson, executive director of the Ontario Heart Foundation, congratulated the Trenton committee on what he called a "good example of what can be done in only a few weeks with a small but enthusiastic group of workers."

Yesterday was the start of National Heart Fund Month and door-to-door canvasses will be made at various times with the help of canvassers from the Trenton chapter. Volunteer canvassers are also needed and they are asked to contact R. Douglas Rushnell, president of the Trenton committee, at EX 2-8505.

TRENTON — Forty-two air cadets from the Batawa squadron were told by S/L L. J. Hubbard of the RCAF's Golden Hawks Wednesday night that if any of them had an ambition to become Hawks, they must realize that a vast amount of training went into the job.

S/L Hubbard praised the work of the technicians and ground crew who service the jets flown by the Hawks. Since 1959 no aircraft has failed to take part in a show because of a mechanical defect.

Flt. Lt. Al Young, also a member of the aerobatic team, accompanied S/L Hubbard on the Batawa visit.

Real Caouette, Social Credit's deputy leader, said he has been receiving more complaints lately about the labor department from his constituents in the Quebec riding of Villeneuve.

Lt. Deschatelets (L—Montreal Maisonneuve - Rosemont) said Labor Minister Starr is hiding figures on the numbers of persons receiving unemployment insurance benefits.

Reid Scott (NDP — Toronto Danforth) said the minister has a smug and self-satisfied attitude about unemployment.

James E. Walker (L—York Centre) said it is becoming more obvious that the government isn't prepared to take measures strong enough to handle unemployment.

Wants Action If Prisoners Denied Counsel

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A Toronto lawyer urges more legal action against policemen who deny prisoners access to counsel.

Speaking Friday at the civil liberties panel of the annual meeting of the Ontario branch of the Canadian Bar Association, Austin Cooper said lawsuits would "straighten them up and make them realize that a client's right to have access to counsel must not be denied."

Joseph Pomerant of Toronto, involved in the Rabbi Norbert Leiner case, said the problem was largely theoretical. Prisoners have the right to counsel, but "the question is, how do you get from a cell to a telephone?"

Mr. Pomerant is counsel for Rabbi Leiner whose treatment by police during an arrest a year ago resulted in a judicial inquiry which reported this week that he was brutally treated by police. Mr. Pomerant has launched civil proceedings against 18 policemen.

The right of access to counsel, to be effective, needed to be linked with a practical methods of implementing it, Mr. Pomerant said.

The panel was discussing the rights of an individual under arrest. Other panels debated insurance law, tax law, government problems a nd problems within the profession.

Mr. Pomerant said a mother being questioned by police about the activities of her son should not give them damaging information.

"To have a mother squeal on her son is immoral—an act that balances off her legal obligation to help police in the execution of their duties," he said.

Commendable Action

The action of the Belleville Committee of Adjustment in turning down the Wm. Mayer application for relief from parking regulations at the YMCA site deserves commendation. The by-law which states a multiple dwelling shall provide one parking space for each two dwelling units proved its worth in this instance.

This is especially so when the Committee pointed out that the "Y" building occupied approximately 92 per cent of the total lot area and there was not sufficient area to provide one parking space. This being so, downtown business men might ask why Mr. Mayer was not told to plan for an apartment house was not practical without sufficient parking space on the property.

In view of the fact that the City Council last July approved, in principle, the plan of the Parking Authority to expropriate or acquire four properties, one of which was the "Y" building, there is a moral obligation to purchase the YMCA property, and soon we might add. This would complete the second step in the over-all plan for parking in this area. Announcement of this intention would do much to restore confidence of the downtown business community which has been shaken by the Mayer application.

Hospital Planning Poor

It is disturbing to find an interim committee of the medical staff of the Belleville General Hospital advocating the erection of temporary buildings, so that the bed capacity of the hospital can be increased 20 per cent.

We suggest that it is obvious that a resort to temporary structures is an expensive way to meet the demand for increased hospital accommodation.

It is preferable to permitting sick people to suffer from lack of proper accommodations. But that such a large increase as a fifth of the present number of beds should be so urgently needed as to warrant a resort to the expensive procedure of erecting buildings which will later be discarded suggests, at first thought, that the Board of Governors has been dilatory in not anticipating this need earlier.

This would be the only possible explanation were it not for the fact that Ontario recently increased a municipal hospital insurance plan. The increased demand for accommodation may easily be the result of this plan. Insofar as this is true, and insofar as hospital treatment is essential for the additional patients, the increased demand for hospital beds serves to endorse the views of those who advocated such universal insurance. It proves that a real need for such a measure existed.

Despite this, the record of government policies with regard to hospitals in this province leaves much to be desired.

At the end of the Second Great War, the emphasis was on providing smaller communities with hospitals. The argument was that patients could be cared for in such institutions at a lower cost, and that they could remain nearer their homes and thus could be more easily visited by relatives and friends. Many small hospitals were established. Today we hear nothing of them. Scientific advances, and the expensive equipment required for the full utilization of new methods, have made such small hospitals useless.

When the Liberal Party, under Walter Thompson, fought and lost a provincial election on the issue of hospital insurance, the Conservatives argued it would be cheating the people to compel them to pay for a service which all could not receive, because accommodation was not adequate.

The people of Ontario thought the Conservative case was sound. So do we. But what, then, can be said of a situation in which a 20 per cent increase in the number of hospital beds is needed, but the provision of these beds is left to the community?

Surely, when universal hospital insurance was established, the provincial government ought to have assumed the responsibility for providing all the accommodation needed to assure that those who paid for a service would be able to get it when required.

A Question

Governor Nelson Rockefeller says that he is old fashioned enough to believe that no political leader has the right to try to fool any of the people any of the time.

We are old fashioned enough to wonder who Governor Rockefeller thinks he is fooling when he suggests that attempting to fool the people is a new-fashioned device in politics.

Capital Cuts-Up and Capers During Parties' Playtimes

By RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — This is the season of political whoopla. Party convention and national rally time.

The Conservatives have just had theirs, and the Liberals will be marching on the Capital for a four-day siege next weekend.

The captains of both parties, Prime Minister Diefenbaker for the Conservatives, and Liberal Leader Pearson for the Official Opposition, talk solemnly of writing what each, coincidentally, has called "a positive program of political action" for the next four years.

That is what they say!

The delegates at any of these political shindigs know better.

Like a leading Conservative organizer said at the Tory convention when he was "Trader" Hees cutting up jackpots all over the place:

"Nothing very much, except a lot of talking, ever gets done at one of these things — but boy, do we have fun!"

The delegates get their way paid to the Capital, are right royally wined and dined and pep-talked, then shipped home again, still at the party's expense, tired but happy and ready for the fray.

WAY TO GO BOY!

The Conservative caucus brought in 1,800 rarin'-to-go delegates who trailed almost as many visiting political firemen along with them.

The Liberals are rounding up 500 delegates — they say their's will be a "more serious" whoop-up involving their National Council and their university people — but even although the numbers are smaller, there'll still be no shortage of what party publicist Mike McCabe chooses to call "Beazar".

This "bezarr" is the kind of weirdly wonderful wackiness with which that ballsy political spirit George Hees flavors these fixings.

"Bezarr" is doing push-ups on the breakfast table with a curvy blonde in tights . . . it is parading in the Nova Scotia tartan, tam, shirt, pea-jacket, socks, in fact the whole Scottish works . . . it is High-kicking it through the corridors of the Chateau Laurier, rigged out like a frontier trapper, with black spade beard, dove-white Stetson and a pair of guns on the hips.

It is "show" breakfast with everybody wearing fun and a couple of professional comedians up at the head table, in costume, cracking jokes . . . the is luncheons with assorted highjinks . . . it is dances after the day's work is done, in the Chateau ballroom with professional entertainment on deck . . . and it is parties in hotel rooms, eating, drinking and making merry.

BRASS AND GRASS

It is three or four days of fun and games — with, of course, the serious business of style to which they would like nothing more than to become accustomed.

It does have its penalties, though — its sad and sorry moments — and its hangovers in the inevitable let-down to the highlife.

Like "early" in the morning when some of the more dedicated stay-up-lates can't make it.

It happened just that way the closing night of the Conservative convention.

The boys and gals had been happy-dancing all night before at the big ball, and the Prime Minister was due at nine o'clock next morning to speak to the Young Conservatives.

At 9, as it turned out, there were maybe twenty YPC's in the hall — and that is seeing double, as many of them likely still were.

At 10, maybe another 20 had straggled in.

It was not until after 11 a.m. that a crowd of a size respectable enough for such a state prime ministerial occasion had gathered.

Ah, well, boys will be boys.

NEVER A DULL MOMENT

So you still think politics are drab?

Take in one of these clambakes sometime.

"Help me, George," cried one delegation chairwoman, "the girls won't pay any attention to me, but they will you."

And she wasn't kidding.

Like the Pied Piper, "Trader" Hees obligingly led the delegates into the hall for their meeting.

Hear somebody like bluff and hearty Senator Josie Quart of the Conservative Women's executive brass, rock 'em at luncheon.

"Please, ladies, remain seated," she implores, "while Mrs. Diefenbaker passes out."

And from the rear of the big banquet hall comes an audible snicker, in tones of mock horror, "Passes out!" with the entire gathering dissolving in laughter.

The Liberals can put on just as rousing a show.

And even the New Democrats, when they let down their hair, and forget a moment about saving the world, can have fun.

Yes, this is the season of political whoopla.

Grab yourself a paper hat, stick one of those "Dief the Chief," or "I Like Mike" but tons in your left lapel, turn down the hatches and come on along and let yourself go.

Casualties At Roadside

Sault Ste. Marie Star

There can be nothing more disconcerting for a car owner—especially the owner of a spanking new 1963 model—than to drive along our highways at this time of year and see the bulks and wrecks of cars that have taken a sudden departure from the highway.

One doesn't have to drive far before one comes across some squashed-in loser of the battle to hold the road.

These wrecks are removed speedily to facilitate snow plowing operations, so the fact that there is often room to be seen is proof that someone or other comes a cropper every hour or so.

Most car lovers will suffer a twinge of horror when they see the wreck of a previously immaculate vehicle hardly more than just off the assembly line.

Usually the car is found reared to the car and the body-work will look as if it's been kept in a giant concertina and the car hasn't rolled over in some rock cliff.

When one looks at the front-end the fenders and grill will be smashed in a man's skull after it's been hit with a sledge hammer.

An ugly pool of oil and gas and anti-freeze will stain the ground around, and mangled, twisted exhaust pipes will be compressed into the front of the car's body like so many hunks of crap and rubbish.

The practice of skating cars along and off our highways is an interesting one and worthy of study.

Members of the Ontario Provincial Police force, who usually attend the scene of these disintegrations, might be asked to add into the ditch on the opposite side of the road.

This is especially true on a straight highway, mostly dry, when the car strikes a slippery patch. The driver of the car starts a graceful curve towards the centre of the highway—then it is that the driver takes a hand.

He — realizing that he is going too fast for the prevailing conditions and with a sudden panicky feeling that he must slow down — puts his right foot onto the footbrake and holds tightly onto the steering wheel for grim death.

Now the car, which might have stopped skidding, has all the encouragement it needs to continue its fascinating dance across the highway.

The driver, of course, has plenty of time — a good two seconds according to some of these prospects as he makes a frantic attempt to turn the wheel with one hand while pulling up the other to cover his face from flying glass.

Experts know that if the motorist left his brakes alone — or if necessary applied them in spasms — then more than likely his car would have come out of its skid and he would have been able to straighten it up and continue on his way.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

50 YEARS AGO

February 2nd, 1913.

Familiar locale of the winter sporting fraternity of a decade ago, the Turnbull St. arena gives the impression today of having undergone a bombing raid. The entire centre portion of the roof of the rink collapsed as it was weighted down by an almost unprecedented drift of snow. And the popular dancing spot for many young people in the Belleville district, Oak Lake Casino, has also felt the effects of the excessive weight of snow. It is reported that last week the entire roof collapsed onto the dancing floor.

It was like old times at the Hume Arena last night and upwards of 2,000 puck patrons howled with glee when Belleville Reliance chalked up their first win in three senior "B" O.H.A. starts against the Peterborough "Soldiers." The score was 2 to 1 for Coach Tilly Donlee's charges which just about indicates the night's play. All the excitement came in the final stanza. It seems Bishop thumped Kingdon hard in centre ice, to draw a penalty. Heel promptly skated over to the aid him to tell off Bishop, and in his ire Heal swung his stick, and that was the spark that set off the fireworks; with players and spectators swarming the ice as the players chose opponents, and the melee was on. Later, in desperation Coach Jim Ellis removed goalie Harding and for the last few minutes the Peterborough crew Belleville net, but the homesters warded off the thrusts to chalk up a well-earned victory.

Tranquilizers Tame You But Don't Cure Anything

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My physician says I need psychoanalysis and I am petrified. I think I know the difference between psychiatry and psychoanalysis. Everyone is fearful of deep probing.

My problems started in early childhood but I have heard so many things about analysis and all the so-called Freudian jokes that I question the advisability of treatment.

I thought that psychoanalysis is considered outmoded. I know that a psychoanalyst is not an M.D. and I can't understand why my physician would direct me to one. I haven't been back to him.

I don't understand why he didn't give me those wonderful tranquilizers, but he claimed that my trouble was beyond his field as an internist and he directed me to where he thought there is help. I feel he does not want me as a patient. What do you think? I'm so scared I don't know what to do. F.M.

Plain language, you're still mixed up. Psychiatrists (an hence also those who have continued into the field of analysis) are doctors of Medicine.

Secondly, I feel sure you will ultimately be surprised to find out how little "probing" is involved. It is a highly skilled art of helping the patient do his own inspecting of the facts in his life, and more importantly, less it's natural for anybody to be on edge beforehand, not knowing what is going to happen, but this feeling fades away rapidly once you see that there is nothing to fear.

Third, there's no reason why your physician should try to get rid of you. It would be easy to keep you tamed with tranquilizers, but it wouldn't cure anything. He is wise enough to say so.

I am interested in learning more about the swelling — I feel like a balloon at times, and have had to wear larger size dresses. — M.H.

The problem is discussed in the leaflet. One woman I know had to buy special dresses several sizes larger, until she realized that her doctor could help her by choosing the right medication and telling her when to take it.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes inflammation of the bowel? Why should it recur every few months? I have not been told to follow any particular diet. — E.F.W.

Such chronic, recurrent irritation can be caused by ulceration of the colon, or by a variety of germs and parasites. Culture and study of stool samples (to identify any parasites or harmful germs) plus, if possible, direct inspection of the bowel with a proctoscope, to determine the cause and nature of the inflammation, are essential. If parasites or germs are responsible, you have to find out what they are before you can eliminate them. A special diet, unless you know what it is supposed to accomplish, is of no consequence.

Are you bothered with wiggling in the ears? If so, write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., for the booklet, "Ear Noises — Their Cause and Cures." Enclosing with your request 15c in coin and a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope.

The Dutch incorporated New Amsterdam — now New York—210 years ago today—in 1653. The Dutch had possessed the island of Manhattan, on which New Amsterdam stood, since 1626 when Peter Minuit, director of Dutch colonies in America, bought the entire island from the Indians for $24 worth of beads and ribbons. Today Manhattan is the most costly piece of land in the world.

THE PACKSACK

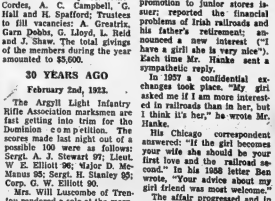
By GREGORY CLARK



A great many people must be puzzled, if they ever look in the window of a tobacco shop or in the showcases of the big stores, to see pipes priced at $20 and $25 or even $40. While there may be bargain baskets of pipes at $1.50, the majority of the pipes in the showcase run from $7.50 to $15 and more. What is there about a meerschaum pipe that makes it so costly?

In the first place, you could buy a pipe made by a world-renowned manufacturer, for 12 shillings which, with the shilling at close to a quarter in value then, was only $3. That same pipe today costs anywhere from $12 to $25. As far as can be seen most pipes are the same.

A member of the pipe trade tells me that in 1920, there were Mediterranean pipe makers who were glad to go into the hills with a mule to collect briar root for a wage of $1 a day. There were pipe-makers in villages who were trained in the family craft who were content to make a bare living. In those same European villages today, the family-trained pipe makers have jobs in plastic factories at about car wages. What pipe smokers are paying for is a thing called progress. The pipes are the same.

Fan Belts 'Sound off' For Help

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Fan belts usually warn you when all is not right with them. If they sound off with a squeak or creak, noticeable when the engine is idling, this usually means the belt is too tight. When the noise is a screech or squeal, which occurs as you accelerate, a loose or slipping belt is indicated. If it's loose, a new belt or tension adjustment (via generator movement) will be necessary. Belt dressing is often the only cure needed if slippage is at fault. A very loose belt can well be responsible when the ammeter or generator light indicates "no charge" and the engine tends toward overheating.

In the case of power steering systems, a belt squeal may be heard whenever a sharp turn is made. This is generally due to a loose hydraulic pump belt.

A.R. asks: "Why would the case of a perfectly good and fairly new battery begin to warp? The motor never overheats."

(A) This can happen if the wing nuts on the battery carrier are tightened too much.

From T.N.: "What type of driving is hardest on a car — fast, slow or widely varying speeds?"

(A) The hardest type of driving is short distance operation which doesn't allow the engine to heat up sufficiently.

P.Q. writes: "In diagnosing fuel troubles, why not advise the driver to look at the fuel filter glass bowl? If it's full or nearly so, either the pump, carburetor or flexible hose connecting them would be at fault. If it's empty or nearly dry, the trouble is obviously back in the line or gas tank."

(A) A good suggestion — although it wouldn't apply on cars where the fuel filter is hidden from view.

D.T. asks: "I generally hit the curb with the right front tire when I park and my brother says this damages the tire. Does it?"

(A) One good bump can break a few tire cords and subsequent bumps can spread the break. Curb hitting also hurts wheel alignment, thus affecting tire wear.

Ford Company Spent Record in Canada

OAKVILLE — Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, spent a record $213.5 million in Canada in 1962 for goods and services, wages and salaries.

This represents an increase of 11 per cent over the $191.9 million spent on the same items in 1961.

In addition the company paid $84.1 million in duties and taxes to federal, provincial and municipal governments compared with $77.7 million in 1961, also an increase of 11 per cent.

The amount spent on goods and services supplied by more than 2,500 Canadian businesses from coast to coast was $144.6 million, compared with $130.3 million in 1961.

Salaries and wages accounted for $68.7 million compared with $61.8 million the previous year. Employment, too, was up with an average employment during the year of 11,123 compared with 10,881 in 1961.

Freedom From Hunger Group Has Taken Root as Part of International Effort

By ARCH MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP) — Quietly the Canadian Freedom from Hunger Committee has taken firm roots as part of an international effort to help 1,000,000,000 persons harvest more to eat.

Its objective is self-help projects in lesser-developed countries — outboard motors for small fishing craft, radios to permit villages to hear farm broadcasts, fertilizer supplies, equipment for school gardens.

Eradication rather than temporary relief, of hunger is the goal of the five-year program launched in mid-1960 by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations.

The Canadian committee, with its base in some 50 nationally prominent groups, holds its second annual meeting March 21 following a two-day national food conference. A world food congress will be held in Washington June 4-18.

The Canadian committee will be a permanent body, says Dr. H. L. Trueman, who as foreign relations officer in the federal agriculture department has headed the committee secretariat.

PRIVATELY SPONSORED

His help, plus some cash, was the federal contribution to what is a non - governmental body supplementing such aid to less-developed countries as the FAO's more technical assistance and the recently formed World Food Bank of the UN.

Dr. Trueman absconded to retire shortly from the civil service, plans to continue part time with the committee, which will establish its own secretariat.

The Canadian organizers took a short cut. Rather than enter the already crowded fund-soliciting field, they gained affiliation with well - established groups who contribute individually.

Thus, behind the committee stand organizations such as the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, Canadian Labor Congress, CBC, churches, Canadian Red Cross Society, Canadian Save the Children Fund, CARE of Canada, various women's groups, YMCA and YWCA and industrial and other organizations. Latest addition is the Canadian Council of 4-H Clubs.

Ten volunteers headed by George Melvor, former chairman of the Canadian Wheat Board and now president of Robin Hood Flour Mills, have approved 11 projects.

Scholarships for study in nutrition, agriculture, fisheries, forestry, co-operatives and rural leadership are being financed by the Women's Institutes. Toronto Board of Trade and the Canadian Catholic Bishops' Latin - American scholarship fund.

Canadian Farm Radio Forums are raising money for radio sets so that farmers can benefit from information in farm broadcasts.

The Anglican, United and Presbyterian churches and the Quakers are raising money for outboard motors that can boost catches by fishermen.

Money is being solicited to establish a $250,000 food technology training centre at Mysore, India, for training scientists in methods of using local crops to inject more protein into starchy diets and preventing rot or insect waste among harvested crops.

An idea borrowed from a small Toronto group, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, is being tried as a means of raising money. It's a cardboard folder bearing the picture of a housewife buying bread. Printed on it are the words "Share a loaf" and inside are slots that will hold up to $5 in quarters. Folders, whether completely filled or not, may be turned over to banks for delivery to the committee.

RACE AGAINST HUNGER—

On a world scale, food production is keeping ahead of population growth. But distribution is inefficient and in many areas of low diet population is catching up or already leading. ### RED SHOTS SECRET

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government figures the Russians have launched four space shots since Sept. 1 without announcing them, government reports indicated Thursday. The public evidence of U.S. detection of unannounced Russians shots came about in an indirect way through the U.S. listing of space shots with the United Nations. U.S. space shots are listed alphabetically. However, four gaps in the letter listing indicated existence of space vehicles without any designation.

FDR Junior Named to Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy has selected Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., a former campaign lieutenant and son of the late president, to be commerce undersecretary.

If the Senate confirms the nomination, the 48 - year - old Roosevelt will succeed Edward Gudeman, returning to private business, in the $21,000-a-year post.

Announcement of Roosevelt's designation opened new avenues of speculation: That he might eventually succeed Luther H. Hodges as commerce secretary or that he is being groomed for a Senate nomination from New York in 1964. Roosevelt was elected to Congress from New York in 1949 and served two terms and part of a third.

The President, Les Digby, introduced Miss Dianne McGrath, who represented the Credit Union in the Chapter Queen Contest last October and was crowned "Miss Quinte Chapter". She will now be the representative on the Credit Union in the Quinte District at the Ontario Credit Union League Annual "Miss Ontario Credit Union" contest in Toronto in March.

The President stated that 1962 had been another year of progress for the Norlecto Credit Union. Over the year nearly half a million dollars worth of business had been transacted and the assets of the Union were close to a quarter of a million dollars.

In his treasurer's report, Bud Chipps reviewed some of the highlights of the year. The financial statement showed that the Credit Union was in a healthy financial condition. Membership at December 31st was 702 of whom 420 had loans.

Vice-president Jim Lynch recommended on behalf of the Board of directors that a dividend of 5 per cent be paid on members savings and that a rebate of 10 per cent of all loan interest paid be made.

Gerald Cherry was re-elected to the board of directors and Dave Duffus and Dorothy Nolan were elected as new directors. The board of directors consists of: Les Dibgy, Bud Chipps, Marg. Blackburn, Gerald Cherry, George Hamilton, Dave Duffus and Dorothy Nolan.

Dick Charlton was re-elected as member of the supervisory committee which will consist of Allan Sills, Reg. Dickman and Dick Charlton.

Re-elected to the credit committee was Earl Tucker and the members of this committee for 1963 will be Earl Tucker, George Dafter and Vern Vanderwater.

G. B. Daugharty, the personnel superintendent of the Northern Electric Co., speaking on behalf of the Company stated that the company was pleased with the progress that had been made in its eight years of operation and praised the credit union for the contribution it was making towards the morale of the employees.

Ray Scott, President of the Quinte District Credit Union Chapter brought greetings from the chapter. He gave notice of a forthcoming insurance workshop when CUNA-Mutual Insurance Co.'s personal insurance program will be discussed.

The guest speaker, Glenn Raycraft, area field supervisor from the Ontario Credit Union League in Toronto gave a resume of the activities of the league and mentioned the stabilization fund recently set up to purchase assets of credit unions forced to liquidate due to closing of a plant or some other unforseen circumstance. This ensures that shareholders can be paid of without a long delay.

He stated that he felt the reason for the growth of the Credit Union movement was because they were dedicated to the help of their fellow man. Part of the league dues of one dollar per member was used to further the Credit Union idea in the underdeveloped countries. This could be a contribution to world peace, and could help those people live a happier and more comfortable life.

Recreation Highlights

B. JARVAR,
Assistant Director

Ever thought of sitting down to a quiet game of chess and then discover you didn't really know enough about the game to make it worthwhile?

Well, you needn't worry any longer, because if you do possess a desire to learn how to play chess — why not join the Belleville Chess Club.

This club, now in its tenth year, was organized late in 1953. An advertisement in the Intelligencer for chess players, by a newcomer to Belleville, evoked a flood of replies.

The year the club began they had about 50 members, which were divided into groups and played games at members' homes. Not all the members actually participated in play, and the schedule as set up then was never finished. The second year saw Dick Payne in the President's position while during 1955-56, Martin Hamelink was president.

In 1956-57, again under Martin Hamelink's leadership, a league was formed. This year, with Peterbrough's entry, a six-city league is operating. The Belleville club, despite its relatively small membership has actually fathered chess in Eastern Ontario.

Besides playing in this league, Belleville has staged two simultaneous exhibitions, one by Dr. D. Dvinsky, a schoolboy friend of Canada's top chess player, Dr. Max Yanofsky.

An interesting feature of the Belleville Club is that Tymaty R. Meeus has been treasurer since its inception. Mr. Meeus has donated a trophy for the club championship, which was won in 1957 and 1958 by Dick Payne, in 1959 by Flt. Lt. Bud Ellis and in 1960, 1961 and 1962 by Martin Hamelink.

Bud Ellis succeeded Martin Hamelink as president for 1958 and 1959. Bruce May was president for three terms, 1960, 1961 and 1962, and Dave Batchelor heads the club for the 1962-63 season.

During the years, the club's personnel has constantly changed. While there have been two or three excellent players, the majority are just average and some are beginners. Players of any calibre are welcome. There is no membership fee, players being charged a quarter a night. The club meets at the Recreation Centre on Monday evenings.

So why not drop in some Monday evening for a couple of hours and relax and enjoy a friendly game of chess!

LADY FROM MANILA

". . . but we'll be missing the palms and sunlight and the south." — Rupert Brooke.

When one first meets and speaks with petite Nora V. Gracilla, it is like going immediately on a magic trip that sends one instantly to a country which we in Belleville, for the most part, know so little about: the Philippines.

Miss Gracilla's home is in Manila "which is somewhat larger than Toronto" and where her lawyer father served on the Manila Police Force for 37 years, but is at present at the Belleville General Hospital as assistant to Mrs. Weese, Director of Dietitics, and teaches subjects such as Nutrition and Diet-therapy to the student nurses.

"How did I happen to become a dietitian? Surely a most natural choice for Philippino girls like myself who are taught all that pertains to the home by their mothers: sewing, cooking and finer points of house-keeping. To this day one of my favorite hobbies is needle work, such as crocheting, which is very popular on the Islands. It is a very common sight to see curtains at the windows of homes which are crocheted, and by hand. And of course bedspreads, shawls. Perhaps much of this is due to the Spanish influence which has greatly enriched Philippino lives.

"Why did I come to America? Mainly to fulfill my desire to travel and see the world. Nor is it easy for a Philippino girl to do so, for she is most dependent upon her parents. Only when a girl marries may she rightfully leave her home. You see family ties are still very, very strong.

Children are never allowed to speak out nor are ever outspoken with their parents, as here. (This can be a hand-cap when they go out on their own. I have had to learn to over come it.) Great respect for the family is followed in the school curricula, where courses are taught on character building and conduct. Consequently to break away from the family is a very very difficult matter. Even my brother, a medical doctor, now married and living in Cleveland, Ohio, is greatly missed — we are a family of seven, 3 boys and five girls — keep in very close touch, especially at Christmas and New Year's Eve, which are family affairs, when he sends all many gifts.

Then, too, it is the aim of well as old tradition that the old folks will always be looked after by the children. There are (with one exception) no old folks' homes. Children are taught to give their children the best possible education, since it is of benefit to the family and everyone is most "degree" conscious.

"To attain my goal, upon graduating from High School, I put myself through a five year course at the University of Home Economics, by attending night classes, working as a stenographer during the day. Upon receiving my degree, and satisfying the government officials I had the proper credentials necessary to leave the country for further study abroad I went to Ohio, where my medical brother was doing post graduate work, and took classes in dietetics and nutrition at the hospital, where I was in residence for two years. I went to Detroit for a year, as a dietitian, before I came to Toronto, and now I've been here in Belleville, since last September, which I like very much. I am lucky with my work, that I've not taken the opportunity to be in close contact with the kind people here. I would love to meet more of them.

"Yes, it is my wish to return to Manila, say within the next two years, for I will continue with my work and studies, with the hope of obtaining my masters degree. Ah, Canada is a lovely country - - except I perish with the cold. In winter how I long for the sunny, warm weather of the Philippines. I know you will understand and appreciate this. After all, the Philippines is a wonderful place - - being my home!" Right away at Christmas and New Year's Eve, which are family affairs, when he sends all many gifts.

QUESTION:

. . . Have you ever made bread using a starter? I have two recipes for this, but they don't tell how much bread it will make. Here is one: two quart potato water and add 2 or 3 well mashed potatoes. Add ½ cup sugar and 1 tbsp salt. When lukewarm add 1 cake or 1 envelope granular yeast. Place in warm place and when frothy stir down and keep in cool place until needed." Any advice on how to go from there? . . . Joyce M.

ANSWER:

As you requested I have mailed to you two recipes for making white bread: 1 batch makes 4 loaves and the other 3. I will give here the recommended method for making white bread with potato yeast.

WHITE BREAD (with Potato Yeast — 4 loaves)

Four cups lukewarm potato yeast (below), ½ cup sugar, ½ cup slightly melted shortening, 1 tablespoon salt, between 12 and 12 cups of sifted all-purpose flour. First make the Potato Yeast: Soak 1 package (or cake) of yeast for 30 minutes in ½ cup lukewarm water. Wash, slice (do not pare) and boil 1 medium-large potato in water to cover. Drain off and save the potato water. Mash potato, add potato water, 1 tablespoon sugar and 1 teaspoon salt. Cool mixture to lukewarm. Add soaked yeast and enough lukewarm water to make a total of 4 cups. Cover and keep in a warm place (about 80 deg. Fahr.) for 12 hours or longer. (The potato yeast may be used then, or poured into a scalded sealer, covered tightly, and stored in a cool place until required.)

Slowly mix sugar and shortening with potato yeast. Sift flour and salt into mixing bowl. Blend yeast mixture with enough flour to make a medium firm dough, about 11 or 12 cups. Knead on lightly floured board for 5 minutes or one hundred kneads and turns. Place in greased bowl, brush surface with melted shortening and let rise until doubled in bulk. Turn dough over, punch down once or twice, cover and let rise again until double. When light, shape into 4 loaves and put in greased loaf pans and let rise until well above rims of pans. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for 60 minutes. Tip bread in pans to cool. The pans may be brushed with melted butter while warm if you like a soft crust.

ROYAL GARDENS

London's Kew Gardens, established by Princess Augusta in 1759, now contain 25,000 plant species over 300 acres.

St. Andrew's W. G. Names 1963 Officers

The first meeting in the new year of St. Andrew's Women's Guild was held on Tuesday last, with Mrs. Bly presiding.

There was much business needing attention and much was accomplished. It was decided to paint the back of the church and to buy two more serving carts.

BRIDGE ST. UNITED

On the evening of January 29th the annual meeting of the congregation of Bridge Street United Church was held in the new Church hall with Reverend Harry M. Davis as chairman and G. O. E. Moore as secretary.

A devotional period, including the reading of the names of those who had died during 1962, was concluded with prayer by the minister.

Minneapolised copies of reports of Church organizations, including the Session, Committee of Stewards, Choir, United Church Women, A.O.T.S., Messengers, Explorers, C.G.I.T., Cubs and Brownies, Hi-C, Y.P.U., and Sunday School were presented for consideration by members and adherents.

BOARD OF SESSIONS REPORT

The report of the Board of Session was in part as follows, the latter dealing mainly with the Christian Education program, prepared and presented by Mrs. Ross Jeffries, Director of Christian Education. "We have also renovated the large Sanctuary with new carpet, a complete centre aisle and painted throughout."

Reports of the church treasurer, J. E. Buchanan, the Building Fund treasurer, G.O.E. Moore, and the Missionary and Maintenance Fund Chairman Judge J. C. Anderson, showed contributions for the year in excess of $9000. This amount does not include funds received by the United Church Women, Sunday School and other organizations.

The report of the United Church Women, prepared by Mrs. A. J. Clare, president, and Mrs. J. R. Reynolds, secretary, was of special interest as 1962 was the first year of operation under this name. Complete warmth and comfort in your home depend largely on proper balance between heat and humidity. About 40% is the right degree of relative humidity and 70%-72° heat best for health and comfort. Overheating by 10% can increase your heating costs by as much as 25%. Lowering the thermostat a few degrees at night makes for better sleeping. If ever you need heating help or advice, call WO 2-4504. Moira-Schuster heating experts are at your service 24 hours every day through the heating season.

TRIBULATIONS OF A DINNER GUEST

A reader of this column was the guest of a friend of his for a "business" dinner at a restaurant. While he admits it's a never-ending source of pleasure to have someone else pick up the check, this particular occasion was more of a bore than a ball.

The host did everything wrong and made the guest feel like a pauper looking for a handout. As soon as the recipient of his hospitality got home he took two digestive pills.

If the host was trying to make an impression on his friend, he succeeded only in making a slight dent — and that was in their relationship.

Here's how not to succeed in business, with or without really trying, according to our disgruntled reader (and I agree):

The host was completely oblivious to his guest's needs. For example, our correspondent likes, like two cocktails before dinner, but no more. He finished his first drink and lighted two cigarettes before the waiter was asked to bring the second round. The host was prompted to act only when he found his own glass empty.

After they had drunk their quota, the guest waited impatiently for the host to suggest ordering dinner.

"Finally," our famished reader writes, "I decided on unilateral action and politely suggested we get the menu. This produced a spark, and mine host hearrily agreed."

As the host studied the menu, though, he made another major boo-boo by commenting loudly about the "exorbitant" prices listed. Since he had chosen the restaurant, such remarks caused the guest to wonder why they had come there. Is there anything wary about what he should choose to eat.

According to our perplexed correspondent: "I was going to order steak, but when my host started talking about the high cost of everything, I decided to order a blue-plate of lamb instead of a gold-plated T-bone."

"However, later in the evening, as I was thanking him for his hospitality, he remarked gradly that it was nothing, that he was charging the cost of the dinner on his expense account. I don't think he should have invited me, as it was not a business contact as well as a friend. As a result, I think less of he'll go out with him."

Before that, though, the host made matters more uncomfort able than ever by commenting about the bad-quality of the service and food, a narrow view which showed up in the conversations of his dinner companion.

Finally, after the check arrived, there was a long, unnerving pause while the host and guest wondered if perhaps, after all, he was supposed to turn it over to the other man's office. Desperately he said he must catch the next train home, which he hurriedly departed, decimal picking it up. To top off the evening, he then insisted on hird-dogging the delivery boy point, haggled with the waiter over nothing at all and ended up leaving a tip far below standard.

My correspondent vows that he will think twice before accepting another dinner invitation from his erstwhile host. Next time he'll pay and take along his own credit card. It's much better company.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Roger N. — How can she make the same mistake twice?

Joan B. — I can help Lou beat his weakness.

Roger N. — My sister was divorced four years ago. Her husband was an alcoholic and was found holed up in a motel with a barmaid, both in a stupefied condition. My wife and I helped her extricate herself from that mess of a marriage, before we realized Joan, and I, myself, had been completely fooled by her husband. He had revealed no sign of any weakness while he courted her and during their engagement period.

But now she's in danger of walking into the same fire. This time it's with her eyes open. She's attracted to a man who's giving her a big rush, but who admits he needs "a few under his belt" before he feels right. She ought to run, instead, she feels he needs a loving wife and she's ready. This time she'd better not count on it.

Joan B. — I've known Lou almost four years, which is twenty times longer than I knew my husband. He's a fine, sensitive fellow, a perfect gentleman. He explained that he sometimes has a drink on a take-it-or-leave-it basis until he went into the insurance business a few years ago. Then he noticed he did a much better job when he was fortified with some alcohol and fell into the habit of fueling up.

But since he's been in love with me he finds he can go out and do a good sales job without drinking. He's able to give him confidence in himself. With me at his side and in his bed, he finds he can maintain peace which gives a man strength. Already his total income has increased and I'm sure he'll master the urge.

The Council: Let's not pretty up the problem. If Lou cannot function properly without a swig of the bottle, he is an alcoholic. And no one should marry an alcoholic in the hope of reforming him. It can't be done that way.

Roger appeals to us to dissuade his sister and we'll try. At the same time, since she is so drawn to his money, we'll get her some hope. If Lou wants to marry her badly enough, he'll do so. If he can't overcome his need for a drink, he'll probably never be able to. Alcoholics Anonymous. Then if he proves that he can stay dry for at least a full year, preferably two, Joan can venture to marry him. Should she same trouble rear its ugly head later, they'd know where to go and how to go about getting help. Most important, Joan wouldn't try to tackle it alone. No can do. Psychologists find that alcoholics, as a group, are unmarriageable because they are basically selfish. Instead of seeking help to bolster their own spirits and movement, through serving and caring for others, they indulge themselves in escape and sweet forgetfulness via distilled spirits. This dumps all their problems on others, and makes them the center of attention. When they marry it's for the sake of what a woman can do for them, not what they can do for her. So Roger is kind and to try to trip Joan up at this point.

But he raises another important question. What is there about Joan which causes her to feel drawn to drinking men? That's a good question for her to bring to a guidance counsellor. One prominent practitioner claims that these women fall into two groups. They're "either martyrs or mammas" as types. They feel impelled to suffer for, or mother these dependent victims. Worse, they battle against solving the problem for this would put them out of a job! Such are the findings of the experts.

Subtle 'Almost Fitted' Look Features Canadian Fashion

By JANET KASK

MONTREAL (CP) — Intricate seaming and the subtle "almost fitted" look highlighted the spring and summer suit and coat collection of union label fashions shown Friday.

The collection of Canadian designed and manufactured clothes, sponsored by the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union (CLC), featured a rash of suits and coats in "national red."

Seams made this year's collection feminine and unique—although a hint of the tailored mannish look lingers. Waists anywhere but at the waist gave most of the coats high-fashion drama. Some waists dropped to thigh tops, others crept above waists, empire-style.

A few coats had two seams, one above the waist and one below, and two, one in rich apricot and the other fuschia pink, were in three sections, with concentric seams giving the feminine nearly-but-not-quite clinging look.

Colors, besides the ubiquitous red, were orchard pastels, wheat and pebble - flecked tweeds and off-whites and some vogue pinks. The ever-popular houndstooth tweed appeared in coats and suits in lemon yellow and pink.

VARIETY SHOWN

Suits ran the gamut in style, from simple, chanel - jacketed pleated skirt numbers to dramatically seamed and cummerbund costume suits with slim skirts, slim sleeves and bugling finger - tip length jackets. Most were wool with a few silks and silk-wool combinations.

The Oriental influence is still very obvious. Several suits and coats had Hong Kong slits and mandarin collars. Formal gowns in chiffon, shown at the end of the collection, were draped in flimsy, matching Arabian Nights stoles.

A Scasal chiffon in maddening red again stressed the "body conscious" look, with halter neckline and shaped seaming, covered with a brief jacket with giant white flowers for sleeves.

Proof that rainy days can be fun came in the rainwear fourscore slickers to foreign-intrigue coats with matching hats. High rubber boots in all colors added a cheerful note. One three-quarter length yellow oilcloth slicker came with a matching kerchief and boots.

Challenge of Pounding Surf Widely Accepted in Australia

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

Sydney, Australia — When Captain Cook first visited the South Seas two hundred years ago, he was astonished to see the island natives actually enjoying themselves in the surf.

"A more dreadful surf I have seldom seen," he wrote. "If the best swimmer in Europe had been by accident exposed to its fury, I am confident he would not have been able to preserve himself from drowning."

For many miles north and south of Sydney stretch the deep, curving, surf-pounded beaches, at least 34 of them with names. Around every turn of the road and behind each rocky bluff are exposed to the Pacific, one pops into view. The endless row of breakers roar with the deafening noise of a jet engine instead of the peaceful flow-and-crash usually associated with waves.

In this balmy climate, at least half of the year is suitable for bathing. Australians took to the water from the earliest days of their settlement. They did little more than paddle about at the beach's edge until, around the turn of the century, a Polynesian youth named Tommy Tanna popped everyone's eyes with his demonstration of "shooting the breakers" — surfing as we know it today.

He showed them how to arch their bodies, shoulders and head hunched, arms and hands tight, and throw themselves into the wave hurtling towards shore. He taught them how to spot the slow-cresting waves and double bankers, how to avoid the seething undercurrents and dangerous dumpers, and how to hitch rides on the once dreaded undertows.

Before long Australians became — as they are today — a little more than subject to surfing and swimming. On a summer weekend, fully half of the 2,500,000 population of Sydney may be out at the beaches. It is not uncommon for a working man to drive out to a beach for a swim on his lunch hour. Virtually every Australian knows how to swim.

But like all lessons learned too quickly, copping with the surf is not learned too well at first. Sharks dwell in these waters, and any creature as deadly as the enemy if its moods are not respected. It soon became apparent that traditional methods of lifesaving developed for calmer waters were not adequate here. A Life Saving Club was formed to active in Australia for several years, and a new and unique pattern of rescue was developed that has since become a trademark of Australia.

The technique derives from the knowledge that it simply is not adequate to have one man plunge into a driving surf, grab a flailing swimmer, and then try to make his way back as if he were in a mountain lake.

Instead, the life savers work in teams of at least two. A belt is attached to the rescuer, and this in turn is fitted to a reel anchored on the beach. One guard plays out the reel as the other plunges into the sea. There he attaches his belt to the drowning swimmer as both are hauled in on signal that contact has been made. Properly handled, the reel insures that the swimmers will not be dragged under while being pulled in.

Shark sightings — often made by patrol airplanes which inspect the beaches by radio — and freak surf conditions sometimes put swimmers in trouble by wholesale lots. On these occasions, lifeguards go out by the thousand, crashing spectacularly through the surf to the danger spots. These techniques are so dramatic and challenging that they have become sports in themselves.

Life saving clubs were started at each beach under the auspices of the Surf Life Saving Association of Australia. Today all lifeguards at Australian beaches are unpaid volunteers and members of these clubs, which have become quite exclusive and elect their members. They throw themselves into the Edinburgh, once marveled that members "pay for the privilege of risking their necks to save others."

Today, surf carnivals are among Australia's most exciting participation and spectator sports. Each Saturday, competitions are held among the clubs for fastest and most efficient rescue drills, and members train for them throughout the year. Pageants and parades of distinctive club costumes feature the events.

There are more than 200 life-saving clubs — and members — more than half of them around Sydney — with memberships upwards of 10,000. They have prevented countless drowning situations and more than 4,000 rescues a year, a total of more than 120,000 lives saved since the S.L.S.A.A. was founded in 1907.

The first rescue ever carried out with a surf-reel at Bondi Beach, introduced only a few days earlier, was in December, 1906. It saved the life of a North Sydney schoolboy who identified himself as Charlie Smith. He later became better known as Sir Charles Kingsford Smith, one of the earliest pioneers of another Australian tradition, international aviation.

GOWTHORPE — SOANES

In the Parish Church of St. Mary-Margaret, Sprowston, Norwich, England, a lovely wedding of wide interest was solemnized on Saturday, December 22nd, at 2.00 p.m. before a pretty background of holly and Christmas roses, by the Reverend A. Coldwells, when Barbara Elizabeth Nicola Soanes, of Norwich, England, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Soanes, was united in marriage to Anthony Gowthorpe, of Corbyville, Ontario, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Gowthorpe.

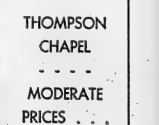
The church organist provided the wedding music, which included the "Wedding March," from Wagner's Lohengrin; Mendelssohn's "Wedding March;" and the hymns, "Love Divine, All Loves Excelling" "The Lord Is My Shepherd" and "Now Thank We All Our God."

Given in marriage by her father, Mr. P. H. Soanes, the bride was charming in her bridal gown of classic white velvet with fitted bodice having a shallow "V" type neckline, and long, sheath-like sleeves. The skirt was gracefully cut and of floor length. She wore a short veil of silk illusion tulle, held by crystal crown headdress, and carried a bouquet of crimson roses, mingled with lily-of-the-valley and freesias.

Mrs. B. P. Soanes, of Norwich, England, sister-in-law of the bride, as matron of honor, was attired in crimson velvet with matching hat, and carrying a bouquet of cream roses and freesia.

Her bridesmaids were Miss Nicola Soanes, sister of the bride and the Misses Gillian and Alison Peek, cousins of the bride. All three wore forget-me-not blue velvet gowns with matching bonnets trimmed with white fur, and carried white fur muffs crested with cream roses.

Mr. Christopher Gowthorpe, of York, England, attended the bridegroom.



The reception was held in the Grosvenor Rooms, at Norwich, England, where the guests were received by the bride's mother, wearing a blue velvet gown, with matching hat, black velvet coat, and corsage of cream orchids. The bridegroom's mother was unavoidably absent.

For the honeymoon to County Luxury Hotel, the bride chose a dark suit with mink collar, dark brown accessories, and tangerine shade hat, with corsage of complementing roses.

Guests attended from Norwich, Norfolk, Lowestoft, Suffolk and Yorkshire.

The happy couple will make their home in Southsea, Hampshire.

Successful Living

Old Policeman Speaks Up

DEAR DORIS—People living in small places may be hardly in touch with the outside world. Their fears at the woman who is afraid to be alone nights are merely the outbursts one would expect from those whose knowledge of life is terribly limited.

I am an old policeman. In police work, one sees things which, to a villager, would be unbelievable in Canada.

No woman—let me repeat—no woman should consider, for one moment, remaining alone at night, and should make positive that her doors are securely locked at all times, during the day, as well as seeing to it that those windows through which access is possible are closed and fastened.

DORIS CLARK

There are men who suffer with a mental sickness that makes it out of the question for them to attempt to fight off the urge to attack women.

I sincerely hope your correspondent will make every effort to look to her personal safety, at all times, despite the laughter of her less aware neighbors. Nothing stops a giggle more quickly than a nylon stocking wound around the throat. — OLD COP.

DEAR OLD COP—We can't laugh off the compulsions of the mentally ill. It's folly to do less than lock up, day or night, if one has the nerve to live alone. Thanks for writing.

DEAR DORIS—My mother and I have an argument about this every weekend and would like you to settle it. Every Saturday about six of my girl friends like to go to the local C.Y.O. together without dates.

Well, my mother thinks it is wrong and improper for decent girls to go to these together. Please write the answer in your column. I'm sure other girls have the same problem. —DIANE.

DEAR DIANE—Give your mother the names and telephone numbers of the adults responsible. Then she can learn just how the get-togethers are supervised.

It is far better for you to meet boys under such circumstances than to make their acquaintance more casually. You do need to meet boys or you will never be able to choose a life partner. Your mother should realize this.

DEAR DORIS—Would you please tell me how to get rid of a double chin, and flabby inner thighs?—WORRY.

DEAR WORRY—A double chin usually goes with overweight, so the thing to do is diet. Write again enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for an exercise routine to help in other places at the same time as you are taking off weight.

DEAR DORIS—We have two boys, aged 14 and 16. Near us live a family with two girls, 16 and 18 years old. The older girl has had a steady boy friend for three years.

This boy and girl went to the swimming hole where there were several children, both younger and older, and would dress and undress together, and carry on in the water until they had everyone embarrassed. My youngest boy would come home and tell me these things. It wasn't long until different mothers were bringing this up to each other, as their children would go home and tell. Finally, my husband and the boy who helped us, went over to repair a fence one day near the swimming area, and found this girl and boy, both naked, in daylight, misbehaving.

I went to the girl's father, and said it was none of my business what this girl did when she was out, except I was concerned with the way she was acting in front of other children, including my own. The father said it was quite a problem bringing up girls and that I was lucky not to have any.

When the mother came home, she didn't come to me to talk it over, she simply went to the president of our Women's Institute and the leader of my unit of the United Church Women and said she wished to resign because of what I said about her daughter. She has inferred that I lied and has upheld her daughter in what she did. My neighbors have seen these things for themselves, so I do not worry what they think.

My question is: "Did I do wrong to tell these people?" At the time I went to them I thought I was doing right, but they have made such ado about it I wonder. If I had told something that was wrong, I would have apologized before this. I would love to go to them and talk it over, but they go out of their way to ignore me, so how would I get to them?—WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING—You would have done wrong if you had stayed away. Your hope was to bring about a cure.

Instead, the mother's terrific guilt feelings are making her turn on you. She feels she must deny what she can do nothing about; and in her rational moments she knows she and her husband are to blame.

If you had called in the police, these two adolescents could have been apprehended for indecent exposure.

Reviewing Parade of Roses

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

New roses are always exciting but many of the old ones have qualities that endear them to the rose grower.

Tropicana is the All American Award winner for 1963. This rose won 13 international awards before it was available to the gardening public. The most brilliant color ever created, a new fluorescent orange-red. Its glowing color does not change and the five inch blooms are perfect in the classical rose shape, long stems and long lasting in water.

Pink Masterpiece is a lovely dark pink with high centre buds, fragrant and extra large blooms. Foliage is lush and sets off the blooms to perfection.

Bronze Masterpiece has very large bronze-apricot blooms, fine dark foliage on tall vigorous bush. Disease resistant.

South Seas is a hybrid tea. This was the rose of the year 1962 and proved a general favorite with the public. The plants are large, strong growers, good foliage and disease resistant The big blooms are "Indian pink".

Hawaii was the 1960 award winner. This is a beautiful orange-coral hybrid tea. The six inch blooms are fragrant, tall bushes are strong, disease resistant and the dark foliage has a fine sheen.

Medley is for those who treasure a lovely salmon pink rose. It is a new hybrid tea that does not fade. The buds open slowly maintaining the high centre until fully opened, long lasting.

Pink Parfait is a grandiflora with shell pink buds opening to deep rose.

Sterling Silver and Orchid Masterpiece are both good lavender roses.

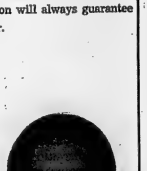
I LIKE OIL HEATING BECAUSE...

At our age convenience and comfort are most important.

We enjoy the dependable steady warmth of oil heating . . . And being old-fashioned, we still like our fuel stored on the premises: It's a comforting thought to have enough fuel "in" when the snow storms begin.



I LIKE OIL HEATING BECAUSE...

it adds to the value of our home. More Canadians prefer oil heating and so if we ever wish to sell — oil heating will be an advantage.

Cost-wise, we know oil heating is the most economical modern fuel at the moment. And looking ahead it appears that oil is becoming more plentiful every day. Competition will always guarantee the lowest possible price to the consumer.

I LIKE OIL HEATING BECAUSE...

it keeps the floors warm all over the house! Oil is clean too — no film, no odors, or dust. Best of all oil is safe all day and all night— no worries about the possibility of a human error or the failure of mechanical equipment. In fact, according to my folks OIL HEATING is best in every way.

Say — did you see where my ball went?

A Lift For Living

Our Money Should Contribute To Growth, Continuity of Life

By Dr. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

I have an elderly friend whose main concern now is to give away the millions he has made. Having no children, he wants to use his money for the greatest good of the greatest number. He tells me it is harder to spend money wisely than it is to make it. That point is a little hard for me to understand in my present state of finances!

But with Congress now tackling a ninety-nine billion dollar budget, it might be well for us ordinary citizens to think more seriously about this matter of spending money.

The Bible bids us to measure carefully the value of the money which we have to spend. The prophet Isaiah asks, "Wherefore do ye spend money for, that which is not bread?" And Jesus repeatedly raises the question of man's use of money. Read the gospels and see how often Jesus makes mention of money. He went into the markets and among the money changers and observed how men made money. He sat over against the treasury and watched how rich men and poor widows gave money. He used the parable of the unjust steward with his shrewd manipulation of his employer's debts to illustrate the need of foresight and intelligence in the handling of resources.

ROOT OF ALL EVIL

Jesus would never have merited the title, "The Master of Life." If He had avoided the subject of money, for money has become so enmeshed in our system of values that as the Bible says, the love of money seems truly to be the root of all evil.

As I understand the teachings of Jesus, Our Lord would have us measure the value of our money on the same principle that He would have us use in measuring our time, namely, does it contribute to the growth and continuity of life?

This column is being written in a Florida city. Two days ago a new university president was being inaugurated here. As he came to the close of his address, he surprised his audience by saying that he was going to ask another man to finish his talk.

A retired minister came to the platform. He began by telling how he and his wife had given much thought to the disposal of their estate. They considered the interests of their relatives and bequeathed to each of them what they thought was good for them. Then they studied various institutions. Finally he gave the reasons for choosing this new Florida college. And the rafters rang when he announced his gift of a new and needed building the campus. The audience was thrilled by the size of the sum coming from a minister, but even more by the careful thought and consecrated motive of the giving.

More than a generation ago Professor Stephen Babcock of the University of Wisconsin made a discovery that cattle might be eating prodigious amounts of food, and at the same time be starving. Extended investigation revealed the fact that life-giving food contains a strange element called "vitamins" which furnish vitality necessary for maintaining life. Now food values are measured by their vitamin content.

Can we apply this vitamin principle to all life? That is what Jesus would have us do.

And this requires both foresight and farsightedness. Jesus measured things in terms of future fertility rather than of immediate utility. On the basis of quick returns, Jesus' life looks like a series of bad bargains. He gave up His secure job as a carpenter to take up the precarious work of a traveling teacher. What a waste of money! But what seemed a waste at the time was Our Lord's way of fertilizing the soil of the race so that it might bring forth the life that is life indeed.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Don Gallinger, a promising young member of the Boston Bruins National Hockey League club in 1948, made the biggest mistake of his life that year. He was found guilty of gambling with a then prominent centre ice star. Both were suspended from professional hockey for life.

Gallinger, I believe, made the second biggest mistake of his life a short time ago when he sought reinstatement and in the doing a Toronto columnist resurrected the skeleton and aired all the details on the public clothesline.

To make matters worse the newspaper "expose" brought to light facts that were not known or at least were not published when Gallinger became involved in the gambling scandal that resulted in his expulsion.

Fifteen years ago when the scandal came to light, a lot of people felt sorry for Gallinger. Not a few believed he was the victim of circumstance and that Billy Taylor, who was expelled with him, spearheaded the gambling activities.

But in his "confession" to the newspaper columnist, the ex-Bruin revealed he had bet as much as $1,000 on his team to lose. Even in today's rate of professional hockey salaries, a thousand dollars "ain't exactly hay." Fifteen years ago "a grand" was wheat with golden kernels. And the thing that surprises players who were associated with Gallinger in those days, is how did he come by a thousand dollars' betting money. Very few NHL players drew a $10,000 salary back in the mid-forties.

Gallinger, it is stated, would like to forget and be forgiven, and perhaps the public would like to forget and forgive. But the "elephants" of the National Hockey League high places have long memories. The ex-Bruin committed the unpardonable sin in their books and they have shown no signs of lifting the "sentence."

As a matter of fact, if memory is correct, the National Hockey League did not expose the details connected with the Taylor-Gallinger incident. All it stated at the time was that they were expelled for conduct detrimental to hockey. The league did state it had sufficient evidence to carry out what it did. It said that in the probe two or three Detroit gamblers had been named and Gallinger and Taylor had been associated with them.

The Canadian sports public, fully cognizant of gambling and betting scandals in United States athletic circles and what they incur might have loomed sympathetically towards Gallinger because of lack of detailed evidence of the 1948 affair. But when he confessed recently to betting $1,000 against his team—that could have swung the pendulum the other way.

Detroit Red Wings' manager-coach Sid Abel said that back in 1946 after the engine he felt, with other hockey men, sorry for Gallinger. "He was young at the time and could have been led astray. Now he comes out and says he bet $1,000. That floors me. What are we supposed to think. Why would he do this to himself?"

"The thing was buried," said Abel, "and most people had forgotten Gallinger, although they remembered Billy Taylor. To the best of my knowledge there was the only gambling affair connected with the NHL in all its history."

Asked by a columnist if hockey could be "fixed," Abel said, "If you mean gambling, odds and points spread—no. Certain knowledge could help a gambler like if a player (Gordie Howe) was hurt or several key players injured. But nobody can guarantee who will score a goal or how many goals will be scored. Hockey isn't like baseball or football. There's the goalkeeper who would have to be fixed. In fact, if the goalie isn't fixed what difference would it make if anybody else was?"

"Now," said Abel, "there's something I want to say here and now. Our game is played by Canadian boys who are a breed all their own in professional sport. The Canadian hockey player mostly comes from a small town and is not reared in an element of gambling, and it never becomes part of him. He plays pool and snooker for quarters and wagers a half-dollar on the world series like we all do and plays hearts and bridge for nothing."

"Why would anybody want to dig up that Gallinger thing for anyway. It's over and done with."

And with that statement I heartily agree.

Whip Terriers, Woodstock

Dogs, Maroons Hold Tie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Windsor Bulldog-Chatham Maroon deadlock continued Friday night at the top of the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior A series.

The Bulldogs trounced last-place Galt Terriers 6-2 and Chatham kept pace by defeating the third-place Woodstock Athletics 4-2.

The Bulldogs have scored the most goals in the league so far with 229, 47 more than Chatham but they have played one more game than the Maroons.

The injury - riddled Athletics were handicapped in Woodstock Friday night by the lack of regular goaltender Ron Salter and centres Tommy Wilson and Carl Hymers.

Woodstock opened the scoring at 1:50 but the Maroons answered with two goals in the first period and added another in the second.

Jack Costello led for the winners in Galt with two goals. The Terriers trailed 3-1 at the end of the first period and 4-2 after the second.

Irwin Gross, Jacques Beguin, Norm Foster and Real Chevrefils were the other Bulldog scorers. Larry Pfaff and Bob Master answered for Galt.

Wins Indoor Two-Miles; Crothers Beaten ★★★★★ Kidd Seconds Short of World Record

By JIM PEACOCK

NEW YORK (CP)—Russia's Igor Ter-Ovanyan cracked the world indoor broad jump record and his countrymen Valery Brumel and Valery Bulshov won the high jump and half-mile respectively at the Millrose Games Friday night.

But they had to share the spotlight—and the noisy cheers of the standing-room crowd of 16,212 in Madison Square Garden — with Bruce Kidd, the amazing youth from Toronto who ran the second fastest indoor two-mile race ever.

Kidd, whose ungainly style and matter-of-fact approach have made him a favorite at the Garden and elsewhere, stepped off the two-mile distance in what seemed, at seconds, the best of his career indoors or outdoors. He won by more than 30 yards and his time was just 6.6 seconds off the world indoor record.

A year ago the lanky 19-year-old University of Toronto student told a reporter he'd done just about what he intended.

HIS CLUB WINS

"I thought I'd run it in about 8:40," he said, then hurried off to watch Canada East Youth Track club mates win a special two-mile relay.

George Shepherd, Dave McClure, Stan Worsfold and Jim Snider made up the winning Toronto relay club team that covered the two miles in 7:46.6.

Ter-Ovanesyan, whose outdoor mark of 26 feet three inches is up for recognition as an indoor record, leaped 26 feet 10 inches Friday night to crack Ralph Boston's indoor mark by 3¼ inches. Boston finished second in the Millrose, a foot short of the Russian's record-breaking jump.

Brumel, who has cleared seven feet, 5¾ inches outdoors, and 7-3½ indoors, cleared 7-2 Friday night, then missed three times at 7-3. His U.S. rival, John Thomas, cleared 7-1 but failed at an inch higher to lose to the Russian for the seventh straight time.

Bulshov came from behind to win the half-mile in 1:50.8. USELESS RETURNS

John Sulses, freed last week from a suspension imposed by the American Athletic Union for accepting too much expense money, returned to the Garden with a bang. He cleared the vault to win the event in which a year ago he became the first to clear 16 feet indoors.

His winning jump was below the 16 5¼ cleared last week by E. K. Yang of Los Angeles and he missed three times at 16 3¼. Bob Seagren, who trains with Sulses in Toronto, last week failed at 15-6 Friday night.

Bill Crothers, another Toronto runner who has become prominent in track with victories in the Boston A.A.U. and in indoor fixtures up to 1,000 yards indoors, finished fourth in the Wanamaker Mile.

Tom O'Hara, whom Crothers defeated in the outdoor Sugar Bowl Mile earlier this month, was a better-than-even choice to win the metric-record time of 4:01.3.

Quinte COSSA Basketball

Moira's junior and bantam hoopsters came away on top with a victory over BCI's Collegians in a COSSA Bay of Quinte triple-header played last night at Moira. BCI's senior collegians, pulling off a second-half comeback, managed a 45-37 win to ruin the Trojan's bid for a complete sweep.

The junior collegians playing the last half without the services of ace Murray Swan, who sprained an ankle in the third quarter, dropped a 39-36 squeaker, in a relief effort. It was their initial loss of the season.

The game was close all the way with BCI commanding a slim lead all the way to the fourth quarter. Bob Dumore's accurate foul shooting put Moira ahead, and although threatened up to the last, they clinched the game on Faulkner's field goal with 11 seconds remaining.

Ron Faulkner, with 16, led his teammates in the scoring department, with Dumore clicking for 10, while George Pugh had 7.

Swan and Dave Anderson, who was the team's leader throughout the game, collected eight points apiece. Mott and Carver were each good for 7.

Moira's smooth Bantam squad overpowered the green colleginians to the tune of 56-22. Pistol sized Bobby Watson pumped in 21 points for the victors. Dave Beresford hit for 15.

Moira collected 7 cops for BCI with a half dozen.

SENIOR GAME

BCI fans got lost in the first half, throwing the ball away at random and checking very poorly. Moira controlled the back boards, their ball control plus a shoddy BCI defensive effort enabled them to rile up a 28-15 lead at the half.

The collegians took a new lease on life after the half-time break, however, as Chick and McCabe regained their shooting eyes and Bob Williams out-rebounded everyone. They settled down both offensively and defensively to reclaim the game Trojans 27 to 9 on the half.

Terry McCabe garnered 18 points but was closely followed by an everimproving Williams who netted 16 before the final bell rang. Chick's 7 and Brewster's 5 rounded out BCI's scoring.

Sprightly John McKibbon was the high man for the Trojans with an 11-point outlay Brant, Turner and Jury were each good for 6.

Petes, Habs Tie 0-0

Flyers Whip Red Wings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Wayne Maxner of the Niagara Falls Flyers made a strong bid for top spot in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A scoring race Friday night.

Flyers downed Hamilton Red Wings 4-1 and Maxner figured in all goals. He picked up four points on a goal and three assists, enough to tie Hamilton scoring ace Ted Martin.

But at 17:10 of the third period Martin slipped in a goal to keep a one-point lead in the race and put his team on the score sheets.

Maxner scored the only goal in the opening period at Niagara Falls and Gary Harmer made the score 2-0 in the second period. Terry Crisp opened scoring in the last period. Martin scored the only Hamilton goal and Harmer came back with his second of the night at the 19:35 mark.

NAUD IS HURT

In Montreal fans saw a hard-hitting, fast-skating game in which only six penalties were given out—five minors and one major. The major went to Montreal's Bob Charlebois in the first period when he smashed Ron Naud of Peterborough into the boards, sending Naud to hospital. He is reported to be suffering from a concussion.

The defence of each team looked exceptionally good and Montreal goalie Jocelyn Cardinal and Peterborough netminder Chuck Goddard each earned their third shutout of the season.

Waves Whip, Jockey Is Suspended

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—English jockey Lester Piggott was suspended Friday for 10 days for illegal use of the whip and was fined $50 for failing to give his correct weight to the clerk of scales.

Piggott, riding in Florida since early January, finished first in four races and was aboard Swift Sands, a 76-to-1 shot. But his mount was disqualified after the second race when films showed Piggott had waved his whip in front of the head of the second horse, Always Alive, 70 yards from the finish.

The stewards said Piggott also failed to give his correct weight to the clerk of scales.

Piggott has had 18 mounts at Hialeah, with one win, three seconds and three thirds. His suspension begins Feb. 3 and ends Feb. 12.

Kirkland Lake Rink Sweeps Top Trophy

By GEORGE FRAJKOR

QUEBEC (CP)—Frank Rainford ensured a supply of silverware for the gold-mining area of Kirkland Lake Friday night and had his eye on a bigger supply.

Rainford's undefeated, Northern Ontario rink swept into Chateau Trophy, one of the 50th Quebec International Bonspiel's three major events, with a 9-4 victory over Ron Kemp of Hamilton.

His fellow Kirkland Lake skip, Orval Archer, lost a chance for an unprecedented double-trophy capture by one centre when he was pounded 12-2 by Hugh Little of Halifax Mayflower in the finals of the Omega Trophy event.

Little's win split the two top trophies between Ontario and the Maritimes, the areas that dominated the bonspiel almost from the start. Quebec City and province rinks were speedily eliminated first from the major trophy events and later from the bonspiel playoffs.

In the Francis Johin event, the third major trophy, Paul Murphy of Midland, Ont., knocked off Frederiston's Dr. Robert H. Chalmers 12-8.

Rainford had a record of 10 victories without a loss in going into the semi-finals of the bonspiel playoffs today against dark horse contender Harold Frye of St. Thomas, Ont.

Archer, though out of the Omega, still had an outside chance of sweeping the playoffs and grabbing the grand aggregate trophy, goes in the rink winning the most games.

Archer's loss, while a shock and a surprise to the bonspiel spectators who had rated the Kirkland Lake entry higher than Little's Halifax curlers.

Little was bumped out of the playoffs for the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy by Rainford and Archer had little trouble disposing of his playoff opponents.

The bonspiel's system divides its 180-rink entry into two competitions. One section plays for the Chateau Trophy and the other for the Omega.

Losers of first-round games in these two enter the competition for the Francois Cabin event, and all rinks reaching the quarter-finals of these three qualify for the bonspiel playoffs and for the grand aggregate trophy.

GALT RINK WINS

In the other championships declared Friday night, perennial winner Nels Findlay of Galt beat Gordon Tanner of Walkerton, Ont., 13-4 to win the Holt Renfrew Trophy for his second straight year. Findlay is a long-time veteran of the bonspiel and usually always finishes with a prize of some sort. He has been honored with membership in the Decarie Club, composed of members who have attended at least 10 of the annual bonspiels.

Jacques Girard of Quebec Curling Club, last year's winner of the Omega, defeated the early victims of the Kirkland Lake power this year and Ontario rink in the major trophies, but he worked his way into the finals of the Carling's Cup event at Hershey Friday night with an 11-9 victory over Gerry Venne of Quebec Winter.

Girard defeated Ron John, N.B., won the Wedgewood Bowl with an 11-9 extra-end victory over last year's big winner Carl Basteda of Burlington, Ont. Basteda was the defending bonspiel champion and holder of the grand aggregate trophy.

Uxbridge Defeats Picton 7-6

PICTON (Special) — Uxbridge Black Hawks won a last-second 7-6 Lakeshore Hockey League game from the Picton Pirates here last night but the victory may turn out to be a costly one.

Uxbridge goalie Joe Carpenter was rammed back into the net by Pirate Ron Haynes in the second period and struck his neck against the crossbar. He was taken to hospital and the early report this morning said the player was seriously injured.

Haynes finished the game with a Picton goalie, John Ingram, in goal.

Uxbridge overcame a 6-4 deficit with three goals in the last three minutes and four seconds of the game. Haynes potted goals at 16.56 and 18.55 to tie the score 6-6 and Fred Eicher triggered the winning marker with only one second left in the game to send the Maes down to a heartbreaking defeat.

The winners led 1-0 after the first period and it was a 3-3 contest after two minutes of play. Mulholland scored once and Guernsey twice early in the third to build Picton's 6-4 lead before the Hawks pulled out the last-second decision.

Fred Eicher scored three Uxbridge markers while Haynes had two goals and one assist. Grimes and Radnage also scored.

Jim Guernsey potted three Picton goals with singletons for Ron Hull, Doug Murray and Sam Mulholland. Weese earned 4 assists, Botly, MacDonald two apiece.

Each team drew five penalties, including fighting majors, to Barry and Todd.

Nicklaus Tops Classic Field By Five

Shoots 67 In Sandstorm

By JIM BACON

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus was a big five Yanks ahead of everybody in the $50,000 Palm Springs golf classic today after shooting a five-under-par 67 in a sandstorm that would have kept Lawrence of Arabia in his tent.

The United States Open champion fashioned a five-under-par 31 on his first nine holes over the Bermuda Dunes Country Club course Friday and it appeared he would do the same on the next nine. Then came the wind and sand.

When the storm settled, he had a par 36, which put him in the 702 bracket after three days and 54 holes of the 90-hole event.

His closest competitor was Johnny Pott at 207 with 69-68-70. Alone at 208 was Bob Shave Jr., who had 72 Friday.

At 209 were South Africa's Gary Player, Al Geiberger and Dewitter Dickinson. Player shot a 73 on the third round, Geiberger a 68 and Dickinson a 70.

Runners-up last season at the Canadian contingent with his second straight 70. He was tied with five other men at 212. Al Balding of Toronto had 71 for 217 and Jack Bissegger of Vail Morin, Que., had 72 for 218.

WIND BOTHERS PUTT

The wind hurt Nicklaus on the second nine Friday. On the 10th hole, it stopped a birdie putt on the lip of the cup. On the 145-yard, 18th hole, a nine-iron shot headed for the pin and the wind picked it up and carried it off the back of the green.

"But," said Nicklaus, "the wind wasn't that bad. I got a birdie on the 11th and I couldn't even see the fairway in front of me for the sand."

The other two members of golf's big three had trouble. The wind bothered Player no end. On his 73, he missed six putts of six feet or under.

Arnold Palmer took a seven on the first hole at Bermuda Dunes when he whacked his tee shot out of bounds.

The leading pros hit water, trapped Eldorado today — the toughest of the four courses used in this tournament.

Four Top Rinks Meet For Corby Trophy

Four of the best rinks in the Bay of Quinte Bonspiel have qualified for the Corby trophy, main event of the spiel and they were paired this Saturday morning for the semi final rounds. In this event, Bill Lewis of the RCAF with his Consol rink of George Peters, John Law, Grant Macaulay with Lewis as skip took on Jim Corbyde, Dr. McCorquodale, T. A. Carruthers and Mac White skip in the one round while the Burns of Napanee with his Consol rink met Cairs of Ottawa. The Burns-Cairs game was played at the Quinte rink, while Lewis and White met at the RCAF rink.

The other events are being whittled down and most of them are in the eights and it will be a dogfight from here in for the beautiful prizes and trophies.

The finalists in the first four events will compete on Sunday in the Grand aggregrate and the H. J. McFarland shield.

There will be final games at the Quinte Club and at the RCAF this evening, while the four other finals will be played in Trenton on Sunday evening, after the social hour at the RCAF Station. Mayor James MacDonald will be the host at the Trenton Club on Sunday evening.

The Cinderella rink of the bonspiel, Fred Rawson, Bill Spinelli, Dick "Deacon" Beare with Jack Sills as skip fell by the wayside trying to get into the fours of the Corby event on Friday evening on the late draw. They stayed even with Lewis for seven ends but the roof fell in in the eighth when Lewis counted a big six.

There were a number of tight, interesting games during the day and this one with Doctors Nelles, Beattie and Loynes, skipped by Bob Lansing against Ernie Jones was a standoff. Ernie Wilkinson, who was playing last rock in the extra end for Jones drew cold for the "button" for the winning shot.

Bruce Cardy, bonspiel manager has been most co-operative in supplying the press with information and he has been ably assisted by the men looking after the draws in the three clubs. The schedule has been well maintained although there was a lag on the 8.30 draw on Friday night, which was not conducive with after midnight, and many of the curlers had to go right back at it on the early draw this Saturday morning.

Following are the rounds for the day and minus the 8.30 draw, which was not completed at an early hour

Hab Coach Uses Word 'Bet'

Campbell Probing Blake 'Quote'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toe Blake's aversion to losing hockey games has got him into trouble again.

When things are not going well for his Montreal Canadiens, the normally placid coach sulks, mumbles and is given to outbursts of language that turn the air purple.

Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, has an investigation under way because Thursday night in Montreal Blake used the word "bet."

It arose from his reaction to the officiating of Eddie Powers after Toronto had scored to tie the Habs a 6-3 drubbing.

The French - language Montreal Matin quoted Toe as saying—among other things—that Powers handled the game "as though he had bet on the outcome."

In the light of the recent revival of the Don Gallinger episode—involving a player thrown out of hockey for life because of betting activities—the timing of the statement attributed to Blake wasn't exactly diplomatic.

Blake, once fined $2,000 for socking a referee, denied Friday that he was serious in his interview with Bettilo.

He indicated it was more an idiom denoting disgust than an assertion of fact.

"When I'm sore I say a lot of things I may not mean and that are certainly not for publication," he said.

"It appears that I'll have to start barring the dressing room to reporters for about 10 minutes after the game."

Campbell confirmed that his investigation has started but declined to comment further until it is completed, a process that will undoubtedly take a couple of days.

As if Blake hasn't enough troubles, it was announced Friday that goalie Charlie Hodge has developed hip trouble and will be replaced against Chicago Black Hawks tonight by Cesare. Maniago, who has been recalled from Montreal's Hull-Ottawa farm club of the Eastern Professional League.

New York Rangers visit Toronto and Montreal and Wings play the Bruins in Boston rounding out the first half of the weekend schedule. On Sunday it's Toronto at Chicago, Montreal at Detroit and Boston at New York.

RANGERS GET PAIR

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Rangers of the National Hockey League have obtained Bryan Hextall Jr., and Leon Rochefort from Baltimore Clippers and sent Jean Ratelle and Ted Hampson to the American League team. Bryan Jr., a centre, has scored eight goals for the Clippers, a Rangers farm team. All the transferred players are forwards.

Hull-Ottawa Frontenacs Tie 3-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A one-sided victory in the Eastern Professional Hockey League isn't exceptional—unless the last-place team is on the winning end.

Cellar - dwelling St. Louis Braves accomplished this feat Friday night when they humiliated third-place Sudbury Wolves 9-3 Saturday after holding a lead going into the third period.

In Ottawa a see-saw battle between Kingston Frontenacs and Hull-Ottawa Canadiens ended in a 3-3 tie leaving Canadiens seven points on top of the league.

St. Louis held Sudbury scoreless until 6:13 of the third period, when Wolves' Ed Ehrenverth destroyed hopes for a shutout. About 11 minutes later Marc Dufour added another for Sudbury to end the scoring.

HARRIS COUNTS TWICE

Duke Harris scored two for St. Louis and Dennis Kasalan, Jim Sanko, Phil Esposito and Al Caron each scored one.

At Ottawa there was no scoring in the first period. In the second, Canadiens opened the scoring for a 2-0 lead, only to be equalled by a pair of Kingston goals. Another Hab goal by Hull-Ottawa the lead at 17:14 if the middle period but the game was knotted again at 15:06 of the finale.

Seattle Totems padded their lead atop the Western Hockey League Friday night with a 5-1 victory over Los Angeles Blades.

Portland Buckaroos clipped Vancouver Canucks 4-1 and San Francisco Seals took Edmonton 6-4.

The Canuck loss kept them from moving up with the Totems, who held a two-point edge going into Friday night's action and came out of it with a four-point spread.

Top gun for Seattle was Bobby Barlow with three goals. Gayle Fisher and Rudy Pilous added a single each. Leo Labine scored on a 25-foot slap shot early in the first period to give Los Angeles a 1-0 lead.

Orland Kurtenbach scored twice for the Seals, with Duke Edmundson, Al Nicholson, Ed Panagabko and Moe Mantha adding singles. Mantha's goal was the heart-breaker for Edmonton. The Flyers had come back to within one goal when Mantha scored—with his own team—minded.

Cummy Burton, with two, Bobby Cox and Tom Burgess scored for Edmonton.

Arnie Schmautz celebrated his 500th WHL appearance with the opening goal for Portland. He was followed by Bill Davidson, Art Jones and Gord Fashoway. Bob Kabel scored Vancouver's only goal.

Family, Business Reasons

Harvey Rejects Politics

MONTREAL (CP) — Doug Harvey, longtime defence star in the National Hockey League, has declined to stand as a Progressive Conservative candidate in the next federal election because of family and business reasons.

The 36-year-old member of the New York Rangers had been asked to seek the nomination in the Montreal riding of Notre Dame de Grace, where he grew up and his family resides.

William Hamilton, former postmaster-general and former PC representative for the riding, said Friday night: "He (Harvey) said his family of five children was his first consideration and you can't really blame a man for thinking that way. He also has business interests in Montreal which was a secondary consideration."

Harvey said his hockey career has taken him away from his family so much in the past he didn't feel it wa fir to the family to stand for political nomination now.

Louis Says Rematch Big Mistake

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Joe Louis, who ruled the heavyweight boxing ranks longer than any other fighter, believes Floyd Patterson's insistence on a quick return bout with champion Sonny Liston is a serious mistake.

"When you get knocked out in a hurry like Patterson did, you should do something to show the public you deserve another chance," Louis said in an interview.

"I think Floyd would have been better off if he had fought one or two other opponents and built back his own confidence and the fans' belief in him."

'The Mikado' To Be Staged At Stratford

"The Mikado", most popular and colorful of the Gilbert-and Sullivan light operas, will be staged here this summer as one of the main attractions of the Stratford Festival's music season.

Presented in the Avon theatre during a six-weeks-and-two-days period beginning July 5, it will be the fourth G. and S. works to be presented by the Festival's Light Opera company. The series began in 1960 with "H.M.S. Pinafore," continued in 1961 with The Pirates of Penzance" and in 1962 with "The Gondoliers."

Norman Campbell, the CBC television producer, will stage "The Mikado." It will have sets and costumes by Brian Jackson. Louis Applebaum will again act as its musical director and the accompaniment will be played by the National Festival Orchestra

ERIC HOUSE SIGNED

Eric House has been signed for the role of Ko-Ko, the Lord High Executioner of Titipu. Mr. House, currently starring in London in the Canadian revue, "Clap Hands," is a favorite with Festival audiences - not only for his appearances in Shakespeare on the Festival Theatre stage but for his work as Sir Joseph Porter in "H.M.S. Pinafore" and Major-General Stanley in "The Pirates of Penzance." With "Pirates," after a New York engagement at the end of the Stratford season, he toured the United States. With "Pinafore" and "Pirates" together he was seen in London, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Vancouver.

"The Mikado" with its colorful Japanese settings and its lilting music, was first presented at the Savoy theatre in London on March 14, 1885, and it is safe to assume that scarcely an evening has passed since that time that it has not been staged somewhere in the world. The Stratford production, after opening at 8.30 p.m. on Friday, July 5, will be presented in the Avon theatre each evening (with the exception of Sundays and Mondays) with matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays until August 17.

SIX-WEEK SEASON

It will form part of the six-week music season which, this year as last, will include six Sunday afternoon, five Saturday morning and two Friday afternoon concerts in the Festival theatre. Details of these are to be announced shortly.

Glenn Gould and Oscar Shumsky are again the directors of the music season. Leonard Rose, the third member of the directorial triumvirate which has guided the Festival music for the past two years, is taking a year's leave of absence because of a heavy schedule of concert dates in Europe this summer.

ROOF STARTS TO FALL

LONDON (Reuters) — Hundreds of angry ballet - goers were turned away from the Garden, Thursday night because part of the roof started falling in. They had reserved seats in the gallery and amphitheatre. Those who had expected orchestra seats were allowed in.

AT THE PARK — Heidi Bruehl and Christian Wolff in one of the more tender scenes from the daring film, "The Young Go Wild", opening Monday at the Park Theatre. On the same program in Color "While Angels Sleep" starring Angeli and Edmund Purdom. Both features are first showings.

Herb Gray Back With Bombers

WINNIPEG (CP) — Co-captain Herb Gray says he has given up his candidacy for retirement plans and will return to Winnipeg Blue Bombers next season.

The 29-year-old all-star defensive end returned here Thursday from Texas and is expected to sign a contract shortly with the Western Football Conference club.

He said last December he was considering going into coaching in his home state.

(The Canadian Press erroneously reported Friday that Gray had signed his new contract).

AT THE BELLE — Joan Crawford and Bette Davis appear together for the first time in "What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?" playing today, Monday and Tuesday at the Belle Theatre. The two Hollywood greats, both of them Academy-Award winners, play aging film stars caught in the web of terror and jealousy. Robert Aldrich directed the suspense film.

Kidd Speech Irked Sportsmen

By JACK SULLIVAN

It has been said that Bruce Kidd, a talented 19-year-old student of political science and economics, has ambitions to wards joining the diplomatic corps. If so, this young distance runner got off on the wrong foot in Toronto the other night.

He delivered a prepared speech to more than 1,100 sportsmen at a dinner in a downtown hotel. He described track and field as a "pure sport" and tried to show that such team sports as hockey, football and basketball don't compare with it.

Here are some excerpts from his speech:

Track "is more exciting than football or hockey."

"It has far more variety than other sports."

"There are no crooks in it as in basketball."

"It's better than a team sport because competition can be compared (by statistics) though they haven't yet."

"The rules are not the artificial rules of team sports."

There was more of the same. This sort of talk may be okay at a rally of track men at some obscure club, but immediately Kidd sat down toward the end of the $25 - a - plate Ontario Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association annual celebrities dinner, people started to carve him up.

"He left some of his listeners out in left field," wrote Al Nickleson of the Toronto Globe and Mail.

Head - table guests included professional men from hockey, football, baseball, boxing, harness and thoroughbred racing. In the audience were track and field officials who said privately later that they squirmed throughout the speech.

"It was the teen-ager in Bruce showing through," said one. He added:

"We have no ambitions to shove track down people's throats. I guess he got over-enthusiastic about his subject but he didn't do much to put track in a right light.

"He shouldn't have criticized other sports that people happen to love. And certainly not in front of people representing these sports."

Even in hotel rooms after the affair centred around Kidd, voted Canada's outstanding athlete in 1961 and 1962, the sensation of the indoor track circuit in North America the last couple of years and a middle-distance runner who has the potential to become a world champion.

"What was that kid trying to do?" inquired one baseball man. "Save the world?"

Sports Editor Hal Walker of the Toronto Telegram said the affair was "going from bad to mighty . . . until Bruce Kidd stepped up to a microphone to read a high school essay to 1,111 adults who became a captive, and irritated audience at $25 a plate."

He added: "Nobody questions Kidd's great ability as a world track star. . . . His tone was to put it bluntly, insulting. . . . Kidd's immaturity showed through his prepared speech."

Had Bad First Period

Juniors Bow To Kingston 6-3

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Belleville Juniors had a bad first period here last night and it cost them a hockey game!

Kingston Frontenacs took advantage of the homesters' early mistakes to grab a 3-0 lead in the opening heat and went on to defeat Belleville 6-3 in a rugged OHA Eastern Junior "B" battle.

The Quinte crew played greatly improved hockey over the final 40 minutes cutting the margin to 5-3 before the Fronts bagged their final goal into an open net, but the three-goal deficit proved too much to overcome.

Belleville outplayed the visitors from the seven-minute mark of the second period on, although Kingston added the lone goal in the middle twenty minutes.

The losers failed to get untracked in the opening period had passes in their own end and loose play in general leading to the 3-0 score. Haskill did not look too sharp on early goals by Robertson and Earl but he was screened all the way on the third, scored by Rawson, with the teams playing five aside at 8.45. The burning was heavy from the first whistle with referees Vern Goyer and Tim Williams having their hands full all night.

They dished out 19 penalties in all, nine to Kingston, with Jones and Reid of Belleville picking up a couple foolish misconduct sentences. Jones drew one in the second period and Reid drew the third, when he rushed Williams after receiving an elbowing minor.

Haskill was busy early in the second, especially with his club two men short, but Zakos sparked while killing off the two penalties. Muirhead slid the puck past the corner with Demmler out and down at the side of his net at one point and Goodfellow was robbed later as the entire Belleville club lurched on the pressure. Despite Bellevilles edge in play, Kingston got the goal, a screened shot by Osborne, at 17.15.

Muirhead cuffed home Dullalls owner-play passout to cut the lead to 4-1 with McMillan off at 4.15 of the final but Earl sank a backhander to get that back at 9.44.

Penalties came thick and fast and Kingston was again down a man when Rutherford made it 5-2, shoving the disc home as he fell past the goal post at 13.15. Jones was left uncovered in front and slapped home a quickie at 17.46, as Belleville continued to press.

Kingston drew another penalty at 19.20 and Haskill came out in favor of a sixth attacker. He was back in once and had just skated off for the second time when Long banked a shot off the side boards into the open net at 19.56 to wrap it up.

Peter Robertson, with a goal and two assists, and Ron Earl, with two goals, led the Kingston scorers. Bob Rawson, Ed Long and John Osborne also scored.

Stu Muirhead had a goal and assist for Belleville. Jim Rutherford and Gerry Jones had a goal each, Ted Rowland, Bob Either, Paul Zakos and Gary Burnett an assist apiece.

Kingston — Demmler, Long, R. Reid, Earl, Robertson, Convery, Rawson, Bryant, Sprott, Earl, Rawson.

Belleville—Haskill, Rowland, Either, Rutherford, Goodfellow; Rushlow, Zakos, Reid, Duvall, Muirhead, Jones, Hagerman, McGrattan, Moreau.

Need 'More Shoot, Less Pass'

Forwards Little Help To Gump

NEW YORK (AP)—There's a good reason why goaltender Gump Worsley has been forced to make 193 saves in New York Rangers' last four National Hockey League games.

Emile Francis, assistant general manager of the Rangers, says "it's over-passing by our forwards."

"Everybody puts the blame on our defencemen. But it's a combination of things, including the back-checking of our forwards."

Francis, former star netminder in the NHL, said in an interview that in the Rangers' first 36 games this season there were 236 more shots taken at the Ranger goal than the New York players fired at opposing goalies.

"The big thing is that our guys pass too much. They try to go too deep into the other team's zone and, as a result, they get caught and can't get back quickly enough. The other team then can break away for clear shots at Worsley.

"What we need is more shooting and less passing. Red Sullivan (the coach) has been trying to impress on them to shoot from 20 or 25 feet out. That way they can pick up a rebound or, if they lose the puck, they are in a better position to skate back and check the opposing wingmen. But they just dont listen."

Three Bandits Rob Bank in Three Minutes

TORONTO (CP)—Three bandits armed with rifles and a pistol robbed a west end bank of $6,000 Friday in what police describe as a "tremendously fast job."

It took the men just three minutes to rob the branch of the Toronto-Dominion Bank.

They wore white handkerchiefs over their faces and entered the bank at the opening time. The staff of eight and one customer were herded into the outer vault and guarded by one of the bandits while the other two scooped up currency and stuffed it into a canvas bag.

The customer, Mrs. Tillie Fromstein, 53, fainted.

minister, Rusk countered that statements had been made in the Canadian Commons last week disclosing the confidential negotiations "without notice to us."

"And a number of arguments were put forward by various speakers which appeared to offer new interpretation of the position of the United States."

RAISE QUESTION

Senator Aiken and other U.S. legislators had raised the question whether, if the department felt the prime minister had to be contradicted, this could not have been done better, privately, by a note or protest.

Rusk said this would not have been appropriate because a protest "might have been called interference in the light of the political context in which the initial disclosure of our talks had occurred."

Instead, the department decided on the simple public statement and if this statement contains any errors, "we shall be prompt to correct them."

Rusk apparently anticipated that the difference between the two governments may take time to resolve. He spoke in terms of "the long run" suggesting that Canada and the United States would permit and require "open and frank exchanges of opinion between nations of great common problems."

had been killed along with 11 passengers. The Viscount was bound for Istanbul from Beirut via Nicosia, Cyprus.

The announcement said the passengers included Americans, a Japanese, a Lebanese and four of unknown nationality. The crew was Lebanese and the stewardess Lebanese-Armenian.

IS INFERNO

Eyewitnesses said the city centre was an inferno of flames and smoke before Chinese gained control late Friday night.

A storekeeper snatched a little girl to safety when part of the airliner plunged into the bank area and an ambulance driver was treated for a ruined building to one of four hospitals crowded with the dead and injured.

Many victims were in the Quarabie Bank (Native Canadi Raaae) which was hit by the fuselage of the airliner. Women and children were trapped inside as the flames spread from the bank to blocks of buildings around the city's main square.

BOAT SHOW OPENS

Widow Tells How She Managed After Husband Died Suddenly

By THOMAS COLLINS

"My husband, just past his 62rd birthday, dropped dead last Fall on the golf course . . . and I was left as panic-stricken and helpless as an older widow ever is."

She knew nothing about money as she says, and had only vague ideas of what her husband had left her. There were no children. A spinster sister was the best counselor she had.

What follows here is what this widow, at age 57, discovered about her husband's provisions for her, and how she put her life back together.

"One of the finest things my husband left me," she explains, "was good will at his company. He had been a hard and loyal worker for the firm for nearly 30 years, and almost the first people I remember seeing after the tragedy were two executives from the firm. They wanted only to say they were standing beside me, and would be back tomorrow.

"They came back the next morning with a check for $1,000. They said it was an advance on money my husband had at the company, and would help me through the crisis . . ."

MADE DEEP IMPRESSION

The widow says nothing in all her ordeal made a deeper impression on her than this . . . an often uncredited bequest a man can leave his wife simply because he was a good man among his fellow men.

The widow was left their home, worth $15,000. But $2,000 of the mortgage was still unpaid. The husband had taken out a life insurance policy to cover the unpaid balance. The widow didn't know this, and to her great relief discovered the home was now clear.

The husband had had a contributory pension plan at the company, and had made the effort in the Post Office to specify that his contributions should be paid in cash to his widow in case of his death before retirement. This totaled roughly $6,000.

There was a $5,000 group life insurance policy at the company, payable in cash to the widow. There was another $5,000 at the company in a "clean-up fund," consisting of severance pay and vacation pay which a liberal company policy provided older employees in case of death, and a savings account in the company credit union. The widow knew nothing of these things. (It was where her $1,000 advance came from.)

Finally, there was a $7,500 private life insurance policy on the husband which provided that at his death the policy would start paying the widow $100 a month until the money was exhausted. However, if the widow chose, she had the option to defer the start of the $100 payment until she needed them.

WORKED OUT PLAN

"So," says the widow, "when all this was finally clear to me I figured out what to do. I sold the house for $15,000 and bought a $9,000 cottage nearby. I added the $6,000 profit to the $5,000 company insurance, the $6,000 pension fund, and the $4,000 left from the clean-up fund. The total of $21,000, invested in a savings and loan at 4½ per cent, assured me a steady income of $78.75 a month.

"My spinster sister moved in with me and agreed to pay $50 a month. Meanwhile I have an offer to be a receptionist in the funeral home where services for my husband were held. It will be on a part-time basis at $25 a week.

"Thus, out of all my ignorance of what a good husband had been providing me, I have found my way to security. In the background I still have those two insurance policies that will pay me $150 a month. I will just hold them for a rainier day . . ."

Dear Henry — No one ever plays with me. I phone them but they are always playing with someone else. I try but they just don't seem to want me. Even my parents don't want to play with me. My dad is OK and understands that I'm 12 and want to be called Henry or at least plain Hank. My mother says I'm making a fuss over nothing. My sisters do it on purpose. Can you help? — Plain Henry.

Dear Plain Henry — When I heard that your name was Henry, I knew I just had to help. I dont have your problem but we Henrys must stick together. Your mother and sisters and relatives are just jealous because they know that all Henrys are members of a privileged minority!

DEFENCE MINISTER HARKNESS QUITS

Italy Behind Britain In Mart Campaign

Macmillan Given Premier's Assurance

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Macmillan has returned home from a three-day visit to Rome with solid Italian backing for Britain's campaign to join the Common Market despite President de Gaulle's opposition.

Macmillan appeared heartened by assurances that Premier Amintore Fanfani will work with other European leaders to override the French veto of Britain's bid to join the European Economic Community.

"I have been very much encouraged . . . by the unanimity of the Italian and British points of view," Macmillan told reporters in Rome. "A setback is not the end of the journey."

In a clear allusion to de Gaulle, Macmillan said there have been times in Europe's history when one nation or one man tried to exert control, but Britain is convinced such times are past.

Macmillan and Fanfani in a communique deplored the breakdown in the Brussels negotiations and agreed that efforts should be made to salvage the drive for European unity despite the setback.

WILL EXTEND TALKS

"Meanwhile, they (Macmillan and Fanfani) will extend and strengthen the close consultation which already exists in the political and economic fields, both on a bilateral basis and with other states which share the common aim of European unity," the communique said.

The communique expressed support for President Kennedy's plan for a multination nuclear NATO force which de Gaulle also has rejected.

"As the strength, security and cohesion of the free world depend now more than ever on the North Atlantic Alliance the two prime ministers affirmed their determination to maintain the existing collaboration with the United States of America and welcome the opportunity to establish a NATO multilateral nuclear force in order to enable the alliance to maintain peace in security."

Britain and Italy have agreed to accept Polaris missiles from the United States under Kennedy's plan, but de Gaulle has insisted that France will develop its own nuclear striking power.

ATTACKS DE GAULLE

De Gaulle also came under attack from Belgian Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak.

Spaak told the Brussels socialist paper Le Peuple "the increasing nationalistic spirit" in preparing and examining development plans."

Fleming's Son Wounded At Hull Home

OTTAWA (CP)—Donald Watson Fleming, 20, son of Justice Minister Fleming, is in satisfactory condition following a shooting in the suburban home of Mrs. Jyne Perley-Robertson, 34.

Police Chief Walter Maheaux of South Hull, Que., said the shooting took place at about 2:30 a.m. Saturday. The young man was taken to Sacred Heart Hospital in Hull with a wound in his left chest above the heart and later transferred to Civic Hospital in Ottawa.

Police, who found a 12-gauge shotgun beside Fleming on the kitchen floor, said they hoped his condition would improve sufficiently to permit him to make a statement to them today.

"He is in a state of severe shock," Chief Maheaux said, "and it is a matter of waiting until he is able to talk. Until we have his statement we can not venture an official opinion on how the shooting occurred."

Scientists Of 80 Lands Hold Meeting

CP from AP-Reuters

GENEVA—One of the biggest scientific conferences ever held was formally opened today in Geneva's palace of nations.

Nearly 2,000 scientists and technicians from 80 countries attended the opening session. The two-week meeting, sponsored by the United Nations, aims to make modern scientific and technological achievements available to the poorer nations seeking development.

Conference President Makelal S. Thacker of India suggested in his formal opening speech that a permanent brains trust of scientists be set up under UN auspices to promote technical progress in the underdeveloped countries.

Thacker, director-general of India's Council of Scientific and Industrial Research, said:

"A kind of world committee of wise men . . . with no power, might draw upon all the vast fund of experience we are accumulating . . . to help in preparing and examining development plans."

Teachers Advised to Stay Away From Children's Rally for Queen

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)—Teachers in New South Wales have been advised by their union not to attend a mass rally of school children to welcome Queen Elizabeth to Sydney March 4.

Some 2,000 teachers already have volunteered to look after the 58,000 children expected to attend a service to be held in Sydney's showground and adjoining cricket ground.

A Teachers Federation official said: "This is not an attempt to boycott the welcome to the Queen. It is simply that we don't think this is the way to do it."

He said the federation was opposed to the rally because it believed the "herding" of children would cause undue hardship.

The Sydney Sun said the federation feared a repetition of an incident during the welcome to Queen Mother Elizabeth in 1958 when 120,000 children waited hours to see her and more than 600 collapsed.

Attendance by children at the welcoming ceremony is voluntary.

FIVE COUNTRIES BOYCOTT FRANCE WITHIN MARKET

Are Making Her Pay For Veto of Britain

BRUSSELS (Reuters)—Britain's five supporters among the six Common Market countries are expected to make France regret its veto of British Common Market membership, diplomatic observers say.

The "friendly five's" first reaction has been to refuse for the time being to co-operate in any way with France within the market's institutions. This action threatens to bring the trade group's activities to a virtual standstill for the next two or three months.

The observers say the five—West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg—are determined not to accept France's methods of negotiations on British entry as an accomplished fact.

They said the five still intend to do everything possible to help Britain join the Common Market at the next meeting of the Common Market's council of ministers. This meeting was set as a definite date for the signing of a new association agreement between the market and 18 African states.

This agreement was of special interest to France because most of the African countries are members of the French community.

France's farming policy also was expected to suffer from the new tough line adopted by the five toward President de Gaulle's government.

Common Market sources said the trading bloc's agricultural policies—in which France is most interested—were most likely to suffer from the French veto of British membership.

House Creaks, 23 Are Killed As Panic Hits

SANTA CRUZ DE TENERIFE, Canary Island (Reuters) — A panic Sunday in a municipal office in nearby Granadilla de Abona today was officially put at 23, with 100 injured.

Some 15 of the injured were described as being in serious condition following the stampede in the house that is said was feared about to collapse. Earlier reports had placed the death toll at 25.

The stampede began when the house, which was being used temporarily for issuing identity cards needed by all adult Spaniards, began to creak.

A spokesman said the building did not collapse.

Reuters, a well-known tourist centre, is the largest of the Canary Islands group off the northwest coast of Africa. The islands belong to Spain.

Fire Loss $300,000 In Kingston

KINGSTON (CP) — Fire destroyed the J. L. Edwards Auto Sales and Service building Sunday, causing a loss estimated at $300,000.

The fire burned for 4½ hours through the one-storey building, punctuated by several explosions from oil drums. No one was injured.

Two new cars in a showroom were destroyed along with two used cars and a jeep. Several other cars and trucks were damaged.

Cellars of some neighboring homes were flooded by water from fire hoses.

Keating Says Red Power In Cuba Increases Ten-Fold

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator Kenneth B. Keating, a man with a sources full of information, is keeping the Kennedy administration hopping overtime with his charges of a Soviet arms buildup in Cuba.

For more than six months the white-haired, ruddy-faced New York Republican has been rising in the Senate to announce ominous Communist developments in Cuba. Time and again the defence and state departments have challenged his information, only to have to concede later that Keating was at least basically right.

Keating claimed in a television interview Sunday night that total Soviet military strength—soldiers, weapons and equipment—is 10 times greater now than it was estimated to be last July, even conceding that Russian ballistic missiles have been removed from the island.

Assistant Secretary of State Edwin M. Martin, in disagreement with Keating, cautioned that estimates of Soviet troops in Cuba last July were not too accurate but said Keating's claim "is within the range of possibility."

Last week Keating told his Senate colleagues there is "convincing, absolutely confirmed and undeniable evidence that the Soviets are maintaining" the missile bases that were involved in last October's quarantine crisis.

He said he believes there is "the very real possibility" that the Russians either hope to return missiles to the island or have missiles left there, "and need only to wheel them out of caves."

Keating's charge that the bases have not been dismantled was challenged promptly by the defence department and White House press secretary Pierre Salinger.

Keating won't tell where he gets his information, but he says that statements he has made have been predicated on facts from "official" sources or facts

Expect Kennedy Will Soon Crack Down on Cuba Trade

WASHINGTON (AP)—Administration sources say they expect President Kennedy soon will be awaited order against shipping to Cuba to be issued shortly, perhaps today.

The order is reported still undergoing last - minute revisions. It remains unset a main feature to be a ban on shipments of U.S. government or government-financed cargoes aboard vessels stopping at Cuba after last Jan. 1.

The aim is to discourage non-Communist ships from going to Cuba, adding the U.S. effort to isolate the regime of Fidel Castro. Supporters of the plan say it would increase the Communist bloc's cost of supplying Cuba by forcing the Communists to use more of their own ships.

The proposal at this point is understood to call for a similar istration plan advanced last fall. Informants said the pencils could be strengthened if the first order does not produce the desired effect.

The shipping order has been delayed time and again since Washington authorities first unveiled a four-point plan early in October and said they intended to issue detailed regulations within a few days.

U.S. authorities have remained close-mouthed on the reasons for the hitches as well as reasons for delay. One stated reason has been the complicated nature of a regulation that could affect ships of many countries. Another was the U.S. effort to persuade allies to help. Others were the efforts to get invasion prisoners and hostages out of Cuba. The U.S. longshoremen's strike was another factor.

It is known also that there is split within the U.S. government as to how effective a shipping order would be, and that several maritime countries have been cool to the idea.

U.S. diplomats have been urging maritime allies to divert their ships from Cuba. State Secretary Dean Rusk reported Friday that the number of non-Communist ships stopping at Cuba in January was fewer than 70, compared with 60 last July. The defence department, which keeps track of shipping to Cuba, has declined on security grounds to list the ships or the flags they fly.

Lesage Makes Plea

New Atmosphere Required For Confederation to Work

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP)—Premier Lesage of Quebec says a new atmosphere in Canada surrounding Confederation is needed rather than a change in the wording of Canada's constitution.

In a major address on Confederation Monday, Lesage asked English - Canada to attempt to understand French-Canada's interpretation of the federation and to help make its contribution to Canada richer.

He spoke at ceremonies inaugurating construction of the Fathers of Confederation Memorial Building which is to be ready in 1964, the centenary of the first meeting of the Fathers of Confederation.

Mr. Lesage issued his appeal in Confederation Hall, where the fathers first met, saying Confederation had been a success in many ways. It could be improved "if it were genuinely lived with everything that it calls for in the way of broadmindedness and mutual understanding."

LACKS ATMOSPHERE

"It cannot be definitely said that Canadian Confederation is a success because it contains one of the major groups which make up our population has not found the atmosphere—because that's what it is, it isn't a question of commas, paragraphs or words—that is affirmation as a distinct people and its cultural development required."

French-Canadians were "worn-

PROBE CHAIRMAN DECLARES STATE DEPT. 'CLUMSY'

Washington Paper Says PCs Benefit

WASHINGTON (CP) — State Secretary Dean Rusk switched signals today and decided to take on the job personally of defending his department before a Senate investigation as the department faced mounting public criticism of its handling of the United States nuclear controversy with Canada.

Rusk previously had designated George McGhee, Undersecretary of State for political affairs and the No. 3 man in the department, to appear before a Senate foreign relations subcommittee but decided at the last minute to take the job himself as the flood of criticism increased.

A department spokesman said Rusk made the change because he felt the issue has become increasingly important.

Senator George Aiken,who will preside at the closed hearing this afternoon, has accused the department of handling the controversy clumsily. He said the cross-border dissension can benefit no one but the Communists.

NEWSPAPER CRITICISM

A number of U.S. newspapers have accused the department of general bungling and ineptitude in execution of foreign policy.

And today, columnist Joseph Alsop added to the flood by saying:

"Few bloopers have angered President Kennedy quite so much as the state department's impulsive intervention in the Canadian Parliaments debate on national defence."

The White House declined to comment on Alsop's statement which described Rusk as a wise policy-maker "but a man with no knack and no taste for executive leadership."

The Washington Star, an independent newspaper, Sunday raised doubts about public confidence in the department's handling of foreign policy, particularly in the light of the Ex-pearson Canadian Nuclear debacle and the Canadian nuclear flight of U.S. interceptors, over Kennedy supporter, says the department's public criticism of the Diefenbaker administration may just lead to the return of that administration at the election.

The subcommittee investigations into the affairs, a Vermont Republican and chairman of the U.S. section of the Canada - United States Interparliamentary Group. He issued a public statement of criticism Sunday, in effect condemning the department before it went on trial.

Aiken said he didn't want to prejudge the investigation but he wanted to make clear his view that "overt and clumsy efforts to use any United States officials to influence Canadian policy decisions are likely to achieve results opposite to the ones intended."

The dimension that is unnecessary as well as unfortunate," he said in a statement which

Toronto Man Gives Self up At Kingston

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto police have charged George Mason, 32, of Toronto with criminal negligence in the driving of a motor vehicle and failure to remain at the scene of an accident after police said Mason gave himself up to a Roman Catholic priest in Kingston.

Police said they went to Kingston early Sunday and returned with Mason, who had hitchhiked to Kingston. He is being held for a preliminary hearing, scheduled for today.

Nuclear Arms Views Oppose Diefenbaker's

Harkness Makes Public Letter Sent PM Sunday

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Harkness announced today he has resigned from the cabinet over the nuclear warheads issue.

He released the text of his letter to Prime Minister Diefenbaker said he would be made a full statement of his position in the Commons later today.

In the meantime, he would not reply to reporters' questions.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker told reporters he had nothing to say on Mr. Harkness' resignation.

His letter of resignation, sent to Mr. Diefenbaker Sunday, said:

"For over two years you have known that I do not consider warheads should be supplied to the four weapons systems we have acquired which are adapted to their use.

"Throughout this period I believed that they would be authorized at the appropriate time.

"During the last two weeks particularly, I have made absolutely clear that I considered the minimum position I could accept, and several times have offered to resign unless it was agreed to.

VIEWS CONFLICT

"It has become quite obvious during the last few days that your views and mine as to the course we should pursue for the acquisition of nuclear weapons for our armed forces are not capable of reconciliation. Thus it is with a great deal of regret that I now find I must tender my resignation as minister of national defence.

"Until the last few weeks I enjoyed my 5½ years as a member of your government and trust I have made some contribution to it and to Canada."

The four weapons system referred to in Mr. Harkness in his letter of resignation are the Bomarc anti - aircraft missile, the Voodoo interceptor, the CF-104 strike reconnaissance jet and the Honest John rocket artillery rocket. The former two systems are part of North American Air Defence Command and the latter two are part of Canada's NATO forces in Europe.

Mr. Diefenbaker told reporters during a recess in a cabinet meeting that he had confirmed acceptance of the resignation and said Mr. Harkness' successor will be announced when he is appointed.

Asked about Mr. Harkness' reference to a dissolution, the prime minister said he had nothing to say.

Mr. Harkness, handing copies of his letter of resignation to reporters, said he would be along with a memorandum to Mr. Diefenbaker Sunday.

The memorandum, Mr. Harkness said it was his intention to make his resigna-

Rocks Thrown in Election Rioting Kill Baby in Nicaragua Hospital

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) Three men and an infant were killed and eight persons were wounded as Nicaraguans voted Sunday to extend the Somoza family's 31-year rule of their Central American nation.

The clash between National Guardsmen and 300 anti-Somoza demonstrators erupted during the first presidential election which gave the presidency to Rene Schick Gutierrez, the candidate of the Somoza-run Liberal Party.

Dr. Fernando Aguero Rocha, opposition leader who had called for a boycott of the national elections, was placed under house arrest charged with inciting the demonstrators, who battled with police and troops for three hours. Fifteen rioters also were jailed.

Two men were killed by police bullets and an infant died after being hit by rocks thrown through a hospital window. A policeman was reported killed in a clash in an interior town.

Eight persons were brought to Managua hospitals with bullet and bayonet wounds.

Order was restored after Aguero and the authorities declared a truce and the opposition leader agreed to remain undercover arrest. Police dropped demands that Aguero go to jail after the latter agreed to advise his followers to give up the demonstrations.

Shick, an ex - professor who takes office May 1, was called a Somoza puppet by the opposition.

Quebec Young Liberals Want Nuclear Arms

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec Young Liberal Federation unanimously adopted a resolution Sunday that Canada accept nuclear weapons in conformity with her present commitments.

Jean-Claude Roy, a Montreal student who proposed the resolution, said Canada must honor its commitments if it is to have any voice in the Council of NATO and WORLD.

A second resolution congratulated Liberal Leader Lester Pearson on his attitude toward biculturalism and described Prime Minister John Diefenbaker as "fundamental incomprehension of the role of French-Canadians in Confederation."

The Young Liberals recommended the creation of the legislative council—Quebec's upper house—and the establishment of provincial departments of planning and education.

Stole Dime, Tipped Cops, Loses Life

RENO, Nev. (AP)—An unemployed man was shot to death after he held up a gas station and stole a dime—a dime—to up police to the robbery.

Police Hobbs, 36, who police say made an unsuccessful suicide attempt last week, was waiting for policemen when they arrived.

When they shouted to him and fired a warning shot, they said, the bandit walked to the door of the station and pulled a gun from his pocket.

Officer Ron Haskell fired three shots, one of which caught Hobbs in the throat. He died in hospital.

The station attendant, Doug Penrod, 21, said Hobbs demanded—and got a dime—then gave it back to him with instructions to call police.

Accident-Free Awards Given Quinte Drivers

Awards for long term accident free driving were handed out Saturday night to approximately 120 Bay of Quinte district drivers as the district of the Transportation Safety Association of Ontario held its annual banquet night at the Masonic Temple.

Two hundred and sixty persons, including wives of district drivers, enjoyed the evening banquet catered to by the Plainfield United Church Women. George Wilkie, field representative for the safety association acted as master of ceremonies.

The top award of the night went to J. Henderson, driver for Moira Schuster Company in Belleville who has 26 years driving to his credit. One woman school bus driver, Mrs. M. Crowe, also came in for an award for over 10 years without an accident.

The safety awards were presented by inspector J. Claik Hayes, head of the Ontario traffic division and inspector A. McDougall of the Belleville District. Constable Provincial Police Dennis Hill, safety association representative for the west half of the district also attended the banquet.

Awards and pins were presented to drivers for periods of one year and over.

The Bay of Quinte district of the Transportation Safety Association of Ontario includes from Brighton to Napanee and north to No. 7 highway. Drivers from approximately 15 transport companies were represented at the awards banquet.

Guy Gordon of Hamilton, professional driver with guest appearances on the Arthur Godfrey and other TV shows, delighted the audience with popular numbers.

Dodging Rabbit Proves Costly

Ever try to duck a bunny? Let this be a lesson, then:

Mrs. Carolanne Cain, 22-year-old Verdun housewife, was driving with her husband as passenger on Highway 401 just north of Belleville yesterday.

West of Highway 14 proposes a rabbit darted across the road-way - - - in the path of the Cain automobile.

Swerving to avoid it, Mrs. Cain ran the car onto the road shoulder, hit glare ice and flipped the machine.

Damage to the car was $375, Mrs. Cain was treated for minor cuts at Belleville General Hospital.

City, District Temps Low Over Weekend

Winter sulked during the Quinte district during the week end, turning in two of their second lowest readings of the year.

The lows ranged from seven low in Belleville to 25 below in Dacre.

A driving wind knifed through the district's southern township through most of today, after a weekend keeping most residents snuggled up beside their thermostats. While the day was cold and sunny the mercury failed to rally over 10 degrees above in most areas.

At Tweed the high for the afternoon was four above.

The readings from the other below in Belleville to 25 below near the Lands and Forests:

|---|---|
| Bancroft | -20 |
| Gilmour | -23 |
| Havana | -24 |
| Tweed | -16 |

Snow still blankets ground level in the Quinte district, with Bancroft holding the record of 18 inches above ground level.

The cold snap cut travel to a minimum and police patrols reported no serious accidents in the Belleville-Trenton district throughout the weekend.

Police Department Report States Force Is Efficient

TRENTON — A report on the organization and operation of the Trenton Police Department was released for publication today by Mayor James Macdonald. It concludes that "Trenton has an excellent police force that is second to none for towns of comparable size." No change in the present system of police protection is recommended.

The report was prepared by Staff Inspector V. D. Whiteley of the Ontario Provincial Police at the request of the Trenton Police Commission. It is based on a study of administration costs, police requirements and interviews with municipal heads, police officials, businessmen and private citizens.

The report says that although administration costs are up, the majority of citizens interviewed indicated they would not want the present police protection and preventive measures the town now enjoys" replaced by a cheaper system. The increased costs are mainly attributed to greater protection and the new radar unit purchased for traffic control.

The report blames the town's topographical location for "the serious traffic problem, especially during the work shift changes in town and at the RCAF Station." The traffic across the River Trent is singled out because it is the only route for traffic travelling east to west through the town. If an accident occurred, and an officer couldn't get to the scene immediately, there would be a chaotic traffic jam, says the report. "Hence the need to call for the addition of another constable to the Trenton force.

The question of another man on the force has been a bone of contention since 1961, when the police commission authorized the hiring of a constable to two men. The town only hired one new man, and the 13 constables on the 19-man force have been working a 42-hour week to make up for the "extra" man. Their Police Association contract calls only for a 40-hour week, and the report says the men have begun to grumble over having to work the odd hours and more night work."

Noting that the town hired a meter-maid in 1961, the report adds: "There appears to be no general impression that this should be a very popular or desirable, but it would appear this is not so as it is impossible for the constables to handle more than one or two round trips a day. As supervision, therefore, would only be one further rounds, it is logical that the officers on patrol should, if duty permits, check and issue overtime parking tags."

The report also recommends raising Inspector Whiteley's ford's clothing allowance to $200, saying there is a considerable saving to the town if he purchase a uniform for a plain clothes investigator. Likewise, the report favors raising Chief F. J. Taylor and the inspector a car allowance if they use their cars for police duties.

"The police protection and preventive measures which the town requires usually depend upon whether the citizens wish to continue with the present system which apparently has resulted in keeping serious crime to a minimum or, on the other hand, whether they wish to retrench in personnel in anticipation that no serious outbreak could occur," states the report.

"It should be remembered that while preventive measures absorb extra personnel, this type of service often avoids the necessity of spending many hours on investigation, preparation and attendance in court."

Sizing up the police says: "In consideration of all the information obtained from this enquiry and believing that the majority of the citizens interviewed do not wish to sacrifice the present efficient police protection and preventive measures the town now enjoys, it is my opinion that no change should be contemplated in the present system of police protection."

In a preface to the report, addressed to Judge J. C. Anderson of Belleville, a member of the Trenton Police Commission, B. J. MacDonald, chairman of the Ontario Police Commission, says:

"I have read the report with interest and think that the conclusions reached by the inspector, and the general procedure upon which they are based, will be of concern to your commission and also to the citizens of the council. It must be understood, of course, that this commission does not necessarily adopt the conclusions reached by the inspector, and if a public inquiry is required, would reach its own independent conclusions on the basis of the evidence before it at that time.

"In the meantime, however, it does appear that the Trenton Police Department is being administered upon a reasonable and justifiable basis as to cost, and the commission and council are to be congratulated upon having the services of an efficient and well directed police force."

Magistrate Comments on Police Report

TRENTON — Magistrate T. Y. Wills, chairman of the Trenton Police Commission, said in a statement last night that the conclusions reached in the report on the Trenton Police Department are "quite in accord with the stand taken by the Trenton Police Commission or a majority of them in respect of matters specifically questioned by council."

These are also in line of the force considered necessary, the number of car allowances to Chief F. J. Taylor and Inspector R. J. Rutherford, and a clothing allowance in lieu of uniform to Inspector Rutherford.

Both these latter items were placed in and passed with the estimates of expenditures for 1963 upon which the tax rate was struck," said the magistrate. "The car allowances are similar to those paid to other town officials. The clothing allowance is for an officer whose work by nature is much facilitated by wearing ordinary clothing and who is not regularly issued with a uniform."

Magistrate Wills said the commission authorized a $50 increase in Inspector Rutherford's clothing allowance last year, but, since this was questioned by council, he has so far received no allowance at all for that year.

"Accounts for these items have been passed monthly by the commission and forwarded to the council for payment but have not been paid," he added.

Car Hits Pole

TRENTON — Damage was estimated at approximately $600 as the result of a one-car accident in Trenton Sunday night on Dundas Street West.

Police say a car driven by Koop Hofstra, age 20, of 47 Marmora Street, Trenton, went out of control on the highway at 7.25 p.m. Sunday, bounced off a snowbank at the curb - and struck a telephone pole, breaking it off.

The vehicle finally came to a stop on the lawn in front of 263 Dundas Street West.

tion public at 10:30 a.m. EST today and to rise in the Commons this afternoon on a question of privilege to explain his position.

In his memorandum, Mr. Harkness also said that if Parliament were dissolved before the Commons meets at 2:30 p.m., he would make copies of his statement public.

Mr. Harkness said his resignation from the cabinet did not involve vacating his House of Commons seat, where he represents Calgary North.

The minister appeared composed while he read the text of his letter and the accompanying memorandum. He said he would meet reporters again after his statement in the Commons.

Only last Thursday night in the Commons Mr. Harkness had said there was no contradiction between himself and the prime minister on defence policy as outlined by Mr. Diefenbaker Jan. 25.

ENDS SPECULATION

Today's statement by the minister followed a rash of speculation last week that he was on the verge of resigning. The reports were based mainly on the fact that Mr. Harkness had issued a statement a week ago purporting to summarize and interpret what the prime minister had said in his Jan. 25 speech. Mr. Diefenbaker said later in the Commons that his speech had needed no interpretation and declined—under opposition questioning—to state that Mr. Harkness' statement represented government policy.

The nuclear issue took a dramatic turn Wednesday when the U.S. state department issued a statement contradicting Mr. Diefenbaker on several points concerning Canada - U.S. negotiations for the acquisition of nuclear warheads.

Last Thursday Mr. Diefenbaker called the statement an "unwarranted intrusion" in Canada's internal affairs.

Leaders of opposition parties were quick to comment on the resignation.

Liberal Leader Pearson said Mr. Harkness had "taken the only honorable course open to him."

New Democratic Party Leader Douglas said the minister's departure from the cabinet was understandable in the light of government indecision over acquiring nuclear arms. He said he hopes the government now will decide against acquiring the warheads.

Social Credit Leader Thompson said it was obvious that Mr. Harkness would be forced to resign in view of the government's "confused policy" and its lack of support for him.

The Liberal party, noting Canada has acquired four nuclear weapon systems under NORAD and NATO defence arrangements, has called upon the government to fulfil its commitments by accepting nuclear warheads for these defensive tactical weapons. Mr. Pearson has said a Liberal government would discharge these commitments pending discussions with the U.S. and NATO aimed at a more realistic role for Canada in continental and collective defence.

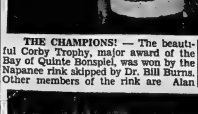
Mr. Douglas and Real Caouette, deputy Social Credit leader, have declared outright rejection of nuclear warheads.

Mr. Harkness, a Commons member since 1945, was an original member of the Diefenbaker cabinet following the Progressive Conservative election victory in June, 1957.

He was originally northern affairs minister and acting agriculture minister, and then switched to full-time agriculture minister Aug. 7, 1957, holding that portfolio until he succeeded George Pearkes, VC, as defence minister in he fall of 1960.

Mr. Harkness was awarded the George Medal for heroism in 1942 after HMS Devis was sunk by an enemy submarine on a voyage from England to Sicily with men and equipment for the start of the Sicilian campaign. He organized the rescue of several men.

A native of Toronto and a graduate of the University of Alberta, Mr. Harkness operated an Alberta ranch before he Second World War and taught high school a the same time.



He went overseas with the Canadian Army in 1940 and served in Italy and Northwest Europe.

Nominated for Parliament while he was still taking part in the final battles west of the Rhine, he was first elected to the Commons in 1945 and has been a member ever since.

In his youth, his interest in politics caught the attention of William Aberhart, principal of the school where he taught history. Mr. Aberhart, who led the Social Credit party to power in Alberta in 1935, at one time tried to persuade Mr. Harkness to join his organization.

Six Foot-Wide 670-Pounder Dies in Florida

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—Charles Steinmetz, who weighed 670 pounds, died Sunday in a city hospital.

Ten policemen and six firemen hoisted the 38-year-old Steinmetz into a flower delivery van Saturday night and carried him to the hospital after he complained of lung congestion.

"I haven't much time left," Steinmetz said a few weeks ago. He said every pound brought him nearer death.

"I crave food like an alcoholic craves alcohol," he said. "Other people smoke or drink when they worry. I find myself a chicken."

Steinmetz, who was 76 inches wide and 68 inches tall, said doctors had told him repeatedly there was nothing physically wrong with him. "I have no health problem, no diabetic trouble — just overeating," he said.

Underweight at the age of eight, Steinmetz grew normally until he went to work as a typist at the age of 18. When he retired 16 years later on a medical pension he weighed 565 pounds.

France, Spain May Hold Joint Manoeuvres

MADRID (Reuters) — French Army chief of staff Gen. Charles Ailleret today headed into three days of talks with Spanish military officials which were expected to lead to closer defence co-operation between the two countries.

Military experts said France and Spain may agree on joint air and naval manoeuvres and that France may offer Spain motor transport and helicopters.

But they said while much "lower echelon" collaboration may follow, they did not think the head - of - state, Francisco Franco, would risk endangering his position with the United States, which was due to discuss a revised military bases agreement with Spain soon.

Ailleret in close personal contact with President de Gaulle and his visit comes hard on the heels of talks held between Spanish officials and French Interior Minister Roger Frey.

Ailleret's trip was seen here as part of de Gaulle's new bid for French leadership in Europe.

PENTICTON (CP)—Six Sons of Freedom Doukhobors were sentenced Saturday to prison terms ranging from two to four years for their part in bombings that rocked the Kootenay region of interior British Columbia in 1961 and early 1962.

Judge M. M. Colquhoun found four of the Freedomites guilty of placing explosives under a bridge near Grand Forks Dec. 14, 1961. The other two were convicted on charges arising out of a railroad track bombing.

Sentenced to four years each for the railroad bombing were Paul Chernoff and John M Lebedoff. Steve Lapshinoff, Paul Pereversoff, Peter Tomilin and George Demenoff were each given two years for the bridge blasting.

Demenoff will serve his sentence concurrently with a four year term imposed earlier for his part in a power-pole bombing. Tomilin's sentence also will be concurrent with an earlier one.

Judo Chop To 'Chops' Still Works

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP)—Mrs. Marlene Clark, 31, got another chance to practise her judo chop Saturday. It still works.

She was sitting in her husband's car when a man opened the door and demanded the purse. She chopped him smartly across the throat and rapped him on the head with the purse.

The man staggered back and ran away, shouting to an accomplice: "She's a tough old bird, let's go."

Mrs. Clark said she first used the chop—taught to her by her husband—two years ago when two men snatched her purse. They fled under her attack.

"The next time I get any practice is when someone attacks me," she said.

Urges Lawyers Report Others In Difficulty

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—"Staggering" compensation claims by victims of dishonest lawyers could be reduced if lawyers reported colleagues in trouble, the annual meeting of the Ontario Branch of the Canadian Bar Association has been told.

Joseph Sedgwick, treasurer of the Law Society of Upper Canada said Saturday that if lawyers were warned of the financial crisis of their profession it was their duty—"distasteful though it may be"—to do this.

He said the society's compensation fund has paid out $728,000 since it was first created in 1953.

The fund now has a balance of $349,000, but outstanding claims—some of which will not be honored—total $566,000, Mr. Sedgwick said.

"Some of these are really staggering," he said. "There was one for $225,000, and others for $83,000, $57,000 and $48,000."

The two-day annual meeting, attended by about 625 delegates, ended Saturday.

Midwest Warms As Cold Air Moves to East

CHICAGO (AP) — A fresh mass of cold air ended a brief warming spell in the eastern third of the United States today but temperatures rose sharply in the midwest and western regions.

Zero or below temperatures were confined mostly to areas in New England and New York State but the cold air mass covered most sections east of the Appalachians.

Some of the cold spots in New York State included Massena, 20 below, and Platisburgh. In Caribou, Me., hit by a nine-inch snowfall, the mercury dropped to 16 below.

Warmer air from the Pacific Coast spread across the Rockies into the plains and eastward through much of the Great Lakes region.

In the far west, light rain fell in the Pacific northwest while areas while rain or ice which threatened many towns in southern Idaho receded.

New Blizzards Sweep Britain

LONDON (AP) — Europeans shivered on in their little ice age today with no sign of early relief from the freeze.

Europe's unofficial death toll climbed to at least 330 as fresh disaster struck. And in Spain's Canary Islands, off the northwest coast of Africa, 23 persons were killed in a panic caused by fear that a public building was about to collapse.

Fresh blizzards dumped 15-foot snowdrifts in Britain's West County. Snowplows were unable to get through to some villages. Main British highways began to crack. Officials said this would add millions of dollars to the snow-clearing bill, which stands at £20,000,000.

London's water board, plagued by thousands of burst pipes, took up the idea of an enterprising private plumber and started thawing pipes by sending a huge electric charge through the pipes.

A typhoid epidemic added to the troubles of Yugoslav villagers in the Bijelo Polje area of Montenegro. More than 50 persons were in hospital, but snowdrifts kept doctors from reaching other victims.

West German temperatures averaged about 5 degrees. The Rhine was still blocked to shipping.

Snow was reported from Marseille and along the Mediterranean coast. Hungry wolf packs were reported swooping down from the Apennines of central Italy to prey on cattle and sheep.

Boy Tossed Stone Through Train Window

A thrown stone gathered one year's suspended sentence for a Belleville teenager today.

The youth, appearing in Juvenile Court, was charged with public mischief after a window on a CNR passenger train was smashed as it entered Belleville station October 1st. Railroad police said the juvenile hurled the stone from beside the tracks as the train slowed.

Family court deputy judge T. Y. Wild ordered the youth to make reparation to the CNR and also to report monthly to the Hastings County probation officials during the next year.

6 Fishermen, Tied Together, Survive Storm

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP)—Six fishermen who tied themselves together and leaped into a boiling sea when their trawler sank told today of the ordeal that claimed the lives of three companions.

The six were in the Gulf of Mexico about 40 minutes before a U.S. Coast Guard cutter, hampered by 25 - foot waves, could pull them to safety.

Eight men lashed together with a rope were hoisted from the gulf about 25 miles offshore Sunday by the cutter Nike.

Two of the eight were dead. The body of a ninth man, who had been knocked off the line during the rescue operation, was recovered several hours later.

Lt. Cmdr. John A. Packard, Nike commanding officer, said the men were tied so close together the Nike crew could not pick up six at a time; they had to attempt to lift the nine men at one time.

"We showered them with lifelines but they were worn out and could hardly help themselves," Packard said.

The men finally were pulled aboard with the aid of a net.

United Europe Inevitable?

Most British newspapers, surveying the chaos in economic planning left by the collapse of negotiations for Britain's entry into the European Common Market, take the view that a United Europe is inevitable and that it will include Britain.

It is difficult to follow this reasoning.

In the first place, the division between Europe and Asia is an arbitrary one. Unlike the other continents, these two are not divided from each other by geographical features. Perhaps there was a day when the Urals were a natural barrier; this is no longer true.

With no geographic features setting the boundaries, in a United Europe, these would have to be fixed by economic and political considerations.

It so happens, however, that the natural economic boundaries and the existing political boundaries do not coincide.

Whatever may be said against the old German dream of Mittel Europe, it made sound economic sence. The natural market for highly developed German industries was in Eastern Europe. The Iron Curtain has been lowered across these natural trade routes.

Moreover, in no part of the world, except perhaps in Africa, are there so many "tribes" with customs, languages and cultures of their own. None of these is a force for unity, but rather for continued division. Trade was the only unifying force, and it has been distorted by politics. Long before these political differences are erased, the economic conditions which determined old trade patterns may—nay, are almost certain to—have changed.

What may emerge is a United States of Western Europe, but whether Britain would fit into it is questionable. Its adhesive force would have to be primarily political.

It is customary to consider Western Europe as essentially democratic. But since the French Revolution that unhappy country has repeatedly toyed with authoritarianism in one form or another and de Gaulle's republic every day is looking less like a parliamentary democracy as we know it. Germany's record since the end of the Second Great War is bound too closely to the fortunes of one man, Dr. Adenauer, for a reasonable man to feel any assurance that it has at last done with dictatorships. In the south of Europe, Portugal and Spain are as firmly fascist as was ever Mussolini's Italy.

Why, one wonders, would a union of these nations inevitably include Britain? Perhaps de Gaulle is right, but for other reasons than he stated. Perhaps Britain is not fitted for a role in Euromart, not because of the impossibility of her adjusting her trade patterns to such a union, but because of deep-seated differences in political outlook. Politically speaking, Britain's natural partners in Europe would be the Scandinavian nations, isolated Switzerland and, possibly, Holland and Belgium. These two last-named countries, however, are geographically and economically linked with Germany and France and it is questionable whether mere political ties can overcome these natural forces.

A Good Move

It was recently announced that the Ford company will be supplying seat belts as standard equipment in all of its 1964 cars. This is a move which has been long overdue, the main stumbling block to the automobile industry being the estimated $75 million annual cost.

Ford also proposed to the Automobile Manufacturers Association that such equipment be standard in all 1964 cars. Whether or not their competitors take up with this proposal the Ford people certainly intend to carry through with it.

Research figures adequately proved several years ago the overwhelming reduction of injuries and fatalities amongst those who used safety belts.

The only group in Canada to make safety belts compulsory has been the sports car racing and rallying groups via their national voice, the Canadian Automobile Sport Club. This they did almost a decade ago. This is another instance where the use of cars in competition has developed an additional safety factor for the normal user of the automobile.

We wonder whether Mr. Ford's recent announcement that his firm is going to actively participate in auto competition events might be a frank realization of this vital and practical research link.

Whatever the motivation we feel both moves are in the right direction.

Wampum to Bank Notes

Bank of Commerce Commercial Letter

The story of money dates back almost to the dawn of mankind. Through it we can trace history from the days of our cave-men ancestors down to the present time. Names such as Antony and Cleopatra, Nero, Julius Caesar, those of the great kings and queens of the Middle Ages, and those of the Founding Fathers of the New World would be completely obscure if remain legendary, or even mythical, come to life when shown on some old coin. Historic battles, both victories and defeats, and other great events throughout the ages are commemorated. We learn of the way of life, the customs, the aims and aspirations of many peoples and many cultures through the study of their means of exchange.

The currency of the world includes many kinds of money and a great variety of forms. Some are or have been in use as media of exchange, and as common measures of standards, and stores of values. People of primitive cultures recognize a money of intrinsic value. The articles were coveted for their rarity, beauty, and practical applications. A great many of the coins in use at present and all the paper currency have intrinsic, intrinsic value, but their use has been tested and they are readily accepted.

Since early times every country or state has had a monetary unit, which was used for the principal merchandise or product of the area and which was established as a measure or number. The units fell into two main categories, one comprising articles of practical use, and the other those of which the principal purpose was ornament. In the early development of money in the tropics, shells were the articles chosen for monetary purposes were those which could be readily transported, in fishing and in hunting wild animals. Such articles included cowrie shells, elephant tusks, tiger claws, fishhooks and flints for arrows. In colder climates, in which people wore clothing such as skins and furs, were widely used.

The use of gold as one of the most striking and most widely used forms of currency. It has been used for the payment of various times in Asia, Africa, America, Australia and the South Sea Islands. In parts of Africa until a generation ago, transactions of all kinds from simple purchases of food and selling on a large scale were accomplished through this medium. The first settlers to the North American Continent found wampum, a form of shell money, in use among the Indians as an article of adornment and a means of exchange. It consisted of beads made from the inner whorls of certain shells, but by the time it was stood for health, richness and peace, purple and black stood for sorrow and sympathy.

As the art of domesticating animals progressed, cattle and sheep were commonly selected as standards of value; indeed the ox remained the standard of value in many early civilizations long after the introduction of metallic currency. The growth of agriculture led to the adoption of many other intrinsic, natural implements and of such commodities as sugar, corn, wheat, tobacco, rice and cocoanuts. However, coins made of precious metals were the personal medium of exchange for centuries in what is now known as the Western World and they have a long tradition reaching back to the dawn of history in Asia Minor.

At first the precious metals were used in the form of ingots which had to be weighed, and tested for the fineness, in each transaction. Later, the ingot often bore the impress of some merchant, as evidence that it had not been melted or debased since leaving his hands. This stamping of the ingot was the first step in the evolution of the coin. Then came the brilliant idea of making the ingots of the same weight, then of the same fineness, and finally of separating the gold and the silver metal which, in natural combination, was known as electrum.

Following the collapse of Rome, gold widely disappeared from Western Europe, although the tradition of gold money was maintained in the East by the Byzantine Empire. In the West, during the period generally called the Dark Ages, and which lasted from about the beginning of the ninth century until the thirteenth century, money existed practically at a standstill and the use of coinage as a medium of exchange was negligible. Silver performed such monetary services as were necessary. The rise of the Italian republics in the thirteenth century, and the growth of commerce between them revived the importance of money as a medium of exchange. The modern gold coinage is usually dated from the appearance of the gold "florin", issued by the city of Florence about the middle of the thirteenth century, and by the fourteenth century gold was the standard of the countries of Western Europe.

The discovery of America, followed by the Spanish conquest of Mexico and Peru, and the seizure of the rich silver mines of those regions, brought about an unprecedented flow of silver into Europe. For more than three centuries the American mines provided for abundant media of exchange for the rapidly growing commercial activities of the European nations, and thus it is that, for much of the modern era, silver has outranked gold as the principal monetary metal.

The great discoveries of new gold mines in California, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa during the nineteenth century provided for possibility of adequate supplies of gold a reality at the beginning of this century. Most of the gold coins of the world are now made of gold, silver, nickel, and copper, in various combinations, and alloys; tin and zinc being employed, as well, in making coins of least valuable denominations. Gold coins, however, are not used exclusively as a store of value.

Early coins were irregular in shape and their value was determined by weight. Thus the talent and the shekel of Biblical times, and in later times the pound sterling, while referring to value nevertheless, all had their origin as measures of weight. Until the Middle Ages coins were generally struck or engraved dies by hand hammers and hand minting persisted in India until the nineteenth century. The Romans cast their larger coins. Modern minting methods date back to 1550 from the middle of the sixteenth century when refined the art of the blanking of cast bars, machines for punching out round discs from sheets and for using screw presses for striking coins were introduced in Paris.

From among the major developments in the history of coins, mention may be made here of some of those of particular importance to Canada. The Canadian dollar derived its name, through gradual evolution, extending over almost three centuries, from the famous Joachimsthalers or Joachimsthalers of Bohemia. About the beginning of the sixteenth century a large silver mine was found in the city of the County of Schlick in the Thal (valley) of St. Joachim, Bohemia, began to be worked and an issue of silver coins was struck. These coins were called Schlickenthalers in honor of the Count, or Joachimsthalers, on account of their origin in the valley of St. Joachim, and also because they bore the effigy of St. Joachim. They circulated extensively in Germany and Austria where the name was soon shortened to Thaler, became "thaler". The Dutch called such a coin a "daalder", and they were called dalers in Denmark, Norway and Sweden, roubles in Russia, crowns in England, talleros in Italy, while in Spain they were known as pieces of eight or as dollars. In the New World the accepted version was "dollar".

The old Spanish piece of eight, famed in stories of pirate ships and the Spanish Main is of particular interest to the West-Indies it was the practice to cut these coins into halves, quarters or eighths to use as small change. One eighth portion of the silver dollar was known as a bit, a bit is the expression "two bits" for a quarter dollar.

The British gold sovereign which was the standard of currency in Canada for many years, was first struck in the reign of Henry VII. The sovereign disappeared from circulation soon after the outbreak of World War I, after a career of over three hundred years.

Marco Polo, the famous traveller, who visited China in the 13th century, described the paper currency of the Mongol Empire. ## To Your Good Health

So-Called Sinus Cases Possibly Due to Allergy

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please send me a copy of "You Can Stop Sinus Trouble." I enclose a long unstamped, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents in coin for it.

Many people have suggested an operation but I am reluctant because it sounds quite serious. My sinuses bother me only when I have a bad cold.

Some relatives have suggested that I use salt water, snuffing it up my nose every morning. It seems to help. Is it possible for the sinuses to affect one's ears? — L.M.

This sounds like a lot of advice without getting the facts. And advice without facts isn't worth much.

The booklet you asked for will explain a lot of things, including the fact that some "sinus cases" aren't really sinus disease, even though they may be great aggravations until treated.

I have some doubt in this instance whether it is true sinusitis, if it bothers you only when you have a bad cold.

With a severe cold, the membranes of the nose and sinuses are inflamed and swollen, and this interferes with sinus drainage. The sinuses can ache. But this doesn't call for an operation.

When the sinuses remain congested, and pus and constant drainage persists, that is another matter, and can be determined by examination and/or X-ray.

It is important that such symptoms are done. One is to straighten a bent or deviated septum of the nose, so that it plugs one side of the nose, blocking both nasal and sinus drainage. Another is nasal polyps, if they are forming a blockage. (Polyps are more common in people with allergy. Or there may be surgery on the sinuses proper, to remove diseased membranes and aid drainage.

So there's nothing gained in arguing over whether to "have an operation" until you know what, if anything, the trouble is do.

Many so-called "sinus cases" are due to allergy or to constant irritation from fumes, and I deliberately include tobacco fumes. Many a "sinus" sufferer has stopped smoking long enough to find that the "phlegm" and "catarrh" and coughing disappeared.

No, sinuses do not directly affect the ears, with the exception of a severe nasal infection. However the same underlying factors — chronic irritation, infection, etc. — can plug the Eustachian tubes and thus impair hearing.

As to sniffing salt water, I can give you no more than a lukewarm answer on that. The nose harbors germs which are relatively innocent there, but can play havoc if drawn or forced into the sinuses, and this is a risk that I myself would rather not take.

Dear Dr. Molner: My daughter, now 36, has been suffering for eight years with eczema of the ears. They are red and swollen inside and out and always "running" or discharging. Often the rims of her eyes are red. Can you tell me what causes this chronic condition? Is it an allergy? — Mrs. E.L.

It could be allergy or Infection but the chronicity suggests the latter, with a probability of a fungus infection. Such fungus infections have a nasty habit of being complicated by infections from other germs, making the condition stubborn to treat. Special laboratory cultures often are used in an effort to determine what the original cause is, and what subcultures may have appeared later.

Dear Dr. Molner: For a diabetic is there such a complication as sugar settling in the lungs? — R. T.

Sir, I am not familiar with such a condition and I have studied diabetes frequently. However, tuberculosis can occur very easily in a person with diabetes.

Count your calories the easy way! To receive a copy of my pamphlet, "The Calorie Chart," write Dr. Molner in care of The Ontario Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10c in coin to cover handling.

Goals Too High Could Lead To Failure

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The boy returned home from college for the Christmas holidays, and he seemed drawn and depressed. Somebody asked me why, and I said, "Too much pressure."

"Too much pressure of school work?" I shook my head. "No, too much pressure at home. A boy can't carry so big a burden.

The burden I referred to was the expectations of his parents. They are planning too many hopes on his career; his success is too important to them. And he feels this keenly, and resents it without knowing why.

Even the burden of parental love is sometimes heavy for him, almost suffocating in its intensity. But most young people successfully learn how to cope with that.

What is much harder to handle is the sense that you have to live up to the mark your parents have set for you. The grades become too important, the competition too frantic, the fear of disappointing those who believe in you turns into an overwhelming nightmare.

And it is desperately unfair to the boy. He cannot live his parents' lives over again for them. He cannot make up for their own lacks, their own unfulfillments, their own early career, their torch — only his own.

Now, the boy who is not in college — simply because their parents' ambitions are too small for them, and they are afraid of letting down the team.

If they do not try, the parents can always say: "He's very bright, he's very capable; if only he would try, he could do marvelously well." But the boy knows that no matter how hard he tries he will not live up to as his parents' expectations and so by refusing to try, he is keeping his psychological cake and eating it too.

All this, sadly enough, is truer of the more successful, higher-income, professional families. It is here that the competition is most greatest, the pressures most elevated. If the boy would be happier as a telephone lineman or a farmer, he is likely in a hopeless bind. His goals have been set for him by his parents, and he must live by their own man; so he simply refuses to play the game. He "does not try."

A poor boy has difficult odds to struggle against; but at least he sets his own goals, he cope with that.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The plight of many parts of the world during the severe cold spell brings to mind a lesson the major problem of urbanization. We are becoming too bunched. The threat of atomic war would not be half so devastating if there were not the targets of vast cities. Concentrated population has encouraged us to put all our eggs in baskets in which vulnerable element we have entrusted even our furnaces and kitchens and the running of numerous appliances without which modern woman would be a flap.

I can recall my grandfather, around the turn of the century, advising the womenfolk not to adopt one of these new stoves. "Stick to wood," he counseled. "Coal has to be hauled hundreds of miles. Any old thing can cut off the supply. But wood is right there out the back door."

My grandpa had many such ideas.

"These motor cars," he said, "are only a fad. Nothing will ever beat the horse and rig." Kitchen stoves, he would also look at all these cities and countries and nations perplexed by a little winter. As the fact remains that if you had a horse, you could at least eat it.

Gold was discovered in the Fraser River area of British Columbia 105 years ago today—in 1858—attracting thousands of men to the west coast. Hundreds of ships, jammed with gold seekers, worked their way across the Gulf of Georgia to the Fraser, then made to the dangerous trip up the swift - running river. Hundreds died without seeing a speck of gold but others struck it rich at such places as Hope, Boston Bar and Barkerville. When the gold fever died down, many prospectors stayed on to found businesses and basic industries.

A U.S. scientific study found that water leaving a bathtub, having been left undisturbed in a constant temperature for 36 hours, always had a vortex which turned in an anticlockwise direction. Now they can turn to less urgent problems.

Thieves Get Little Loot, Cause Damage

Thieves reaped little loot but sowed a trail of property damage in three break-ins in Belleville during the weekend.

Vending machines were found smashed after thieves broke into the Knights of Columbus building on the city's Front Street Saturday night. A small amount of change was taken from the machines.

Sometime Sunday the offices of Seaboard Finance and the city's Elks' lodge rooms were entered. Nothing was taken but, say police, property damage was extensive.

Car Plunges Through Ice, Two Drown

BROWNS VALLEY, Minn. (AP) — Their car plunged through the ice and 12 feet of frigid water, settling on the bottom of Lake Traverse.

The Indian College men climbed into the back seat and pressed their noses to the roof, where there was a pocket of air. They pulled off their coats and co-pilot Hahn said: "Well, we all have to go for it."

Hahn, 21, was the only survivor of the accident Sunday. He swam 75 feet, pulled himself onto the ice, then ran and crawled a half-mile to a lake shore shack.

Phillip Anderson, 19, an excellent swimmer, was drowned. So was Paul Vergeldt, 21, whose last words were: "You gotta help me, I can't swim."

A skindiver later found the bodies of Anderson and Vergeldt, in the back seat of the car.

Scouting activities

5th BELLEVILLE TROOP

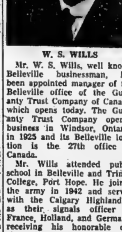
Despite the winter conditions 5th Belleville Scout Troop has been enjoying the outdoors. Day's cookouts have been held at Sandy Beach, Thomasburg, also the occasional patrol hike.

To keep up the interest in the troop a monthly meeting is being held at the Armouries, where the boys are learning safe gun handling. They are also engaged in 22 rifle competition, the rifle used to be presented to the boy who makes the highest score by next December. All shooting is held at the Armory Range under the strict supervision of ADC Sid Sharman and Mr. W. J. McMechan.

In November, six boys were invested as Scouts, Paul Crossen, Bill Arnott, Jim McKinnon, Ricky McIlquham, Joe Scott and Charles Pattison.

In a ceremony at the Armouries in January, Paul McReavey was invested as a Scout. The troop now numbers 30 boys. An exciting game of hockey was enjoyed by the troop, with a good crowd of friends, including the 14th Cubs, at 6-R.D., when the 5th walked over the 18th to the tune of 8-0. The seventh 14th will have a chance to get their own back when the return match at the same rink is played on February 7th.

It is hoped by all the boys and their leaders that parents will turn out in full force for the Valentine Party being planned by the Ladies' Auxiliary for the boys on February 14th.



Badge being added to mark their calendars for the night of March 6th which will be the occasion of the annual "Father and Son Banquet". Besides these activities the Auxiliary is busily engaged in unveiling the camping needs which make this activity a success and the boys take this opportunity to say "Thank You" to a group of wonderful mums.

In January Mr. A. N. Fitzgerald joined the troop as A.S.M. He is no stranger to the group as he and his wife were very generous with their help with camping and other activities last summer which was very much appreciated.

On January 31st the troop enjoyed a banquet at which were the guests of 14th Belleville. As a fitting end to the evening the Ladies' Auxiliary of Hillcrest Church served soup and crackers while the boys sat around the campfire and sang numerous songs.

If plans now being completed are realized the troop is in for even better summer in 1963 with even more outdoor activities.

Mr. Trill was thanked for a job well done. He will continue to serve the club in other official capacities.

Everett S. Fairman was elected vice-president, and Ray A. Lennox was named secretary-treasurer for the 1963 season. Others named to the board of directors were: Mr. Gordon H. Trill, David R. Duffy, Mr. Donald F. Lamb, Mr. Donald E. Stanton and Mr. Stanley C. Wiggins.

Chairmen of committees also appointed were: house committee, Mr. Trill and Mr. O'Brien; course, D. R. Duffy; games, D. F. Lamb; membership, Mr. Stanton and Mr. Fairman; publicity, S. C. Wiggins.

The new executive promised that 1963 would be an active year and announced that a drive would be made to acquire more members.

Early meetings of the various committees are being planned in order to get the club off to a fast start. Cards will be available announcing all playing and social events as soon as plans are finalized.

Accidents At Minimum

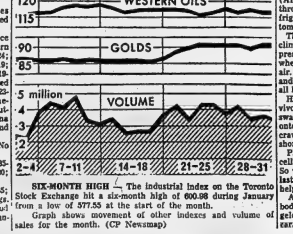
Cold weather cut travel—and traffic accidents—to a minimum in the Belleville district over the weekend.



On Highway 401, 34-year-old Hamilton man Reinder Terwyn was treated for forehead cuts after his car rolled over three miles west of Marysville.

In Belleville, police are seeking the driver of a hit-run car that sideswiped a parked automobile outside Christ Church on Coleman St. Damage to the car—owned by Arthur White, Middleton Park, was $75.

Nearly 400 Women Attend 1st Annual U.C.W. Meet at Picton

On January 31st, nearly 400 women assembled in Picton United Church to attend the first annual meeting of the United Church Women, Belleville Presbyterial.

The one morning drive (from as far north as Roseneath, from Trenton on the west and from Odessa to the east) on roads between white fields of snow, to the lovely grey stone church in the historic U.E.L. settlement of Picton, was a delight.

Inside the building, friendships were renewed and new friendships created tying all the 107 U.C.W.'s together in one great fellowship of Christian love to study and worship one God and Father of all.

Mrs. R. H. Smithrim of Trenton, president of the Presbyterial, presided at all sessions. She welcomed the delegates and visitors most cordially. Another gracious welcome was extended by Mrs. H. Gray, president of Picton U.C.W., and the ministers of the church, the Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt.

MUSICAL PRELUDE

Mrs. Earl Ostrander presided at the church organ throughout the day. Her morning prelude of quiet hymns made a most suitable atmosphere for the worship conducted by Picton U.C.W. and the half-hour of Bible study under the direction of Mrs. Karl Wellband of Bloomfield, R. Picton. The afternoon worship was conducted by Mississauga U.C.W. and Wellington U.C.W. was in charge of the evening worship.

In the absence of Mrs. Canman Slack, Bond, Ont., Mrs. Kenneth Weaver of Stirling took care of the literature table and gave a brief report. A great deal of literature has been purchased and is being used in the local presbyteries. Mrs. Weaver also introduced some new books and pamphlets as well as the Mission study book.

BUSINESS SESSION

During the business session in the forenoon, recording secretary Mrs. Andrew Benvie of Picton read the minutes of the inaugural meeting and the executive meetings held during the year.

Financial reports were given by the treasurer, Mrs. C. W. Smith, R.R. 2, Belleville, and Mrs. R. G. Coulter, Belleville, chairman of the finance committee. A missionary allocation of $33,750 for 1963 had been accepted and met; $409 had been raised for "over and above" gifts. The Presbyterial accepted an increased allocation for 1963.

MANY LETTERS

Corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. G. Smith, Napanee, reported the many letters and details she had taken care of. Reports from chairmen of standing committees and portfolio secretaries were heard at intervals during the day.

The regional presidents reported progress, amiable fellowship and rich experience as the local women study the Bible for their devotional development and participate in the missionary study of the ways of people in other countries — the wider work of the church. All regions had held autumn rallies with Miss Millicent Howse, B.A., missionary of Africa, as guest speaker. All reported giving financial help in their local church and community, thus depicting that the new organization 'United Church Women' is proving a great successful adventure.

GREETINGS

Mrs. W. Weatherhead, Sharbot Lake, who was named the first president of the United Church Women Bay of Quinte Conference, a year ago, was guest of honor. She brought greetings and encouragement from the Quinte Conference and invited all to attend the next meeting of that assembly in Brighton on March 18th and 19th. Mrs. Weatherhead mentioned several interesting conferences and schools for women of the United Church to attend during the summer and autumn.

The highlights of the day were the two addresses given by Miss Beatrice Wilson, associate secretary of the Board of Women of the United Church of Canada. Miss Wilson has occasion to visit conferences and presbyteries all across the Dominion. Her knowledge of the work of U.C.W. is unlimited. Mrs. Ralph Hall of Trenton, introduced Miss Wilson and said "She is a great source of information".

NOT AN EASY YEAR

Miss Wilson said, "we have come to the end of the first year of United Church Women. It has been quite a year! It has been a good year, but it has not been an easy year". When the two former organizations amalgamated with the beginning of 1962 most women did not know what to expect. It was like moving into a new house. Some women did not know what to take so took everything and ended up using everything just as they had done previously in both W.A. and W.M.S.

"In an over-crowded house one is going to find out some of the things that women ought to do. (1) She found Miriam, first as Little Miss Self-starter on organizing and seizing the opportunity of asking Pharoah's daughter if she could go and find a nurse for baby Moses—then she became one of the triumvirate who led the people out of Egypt. (2) Then she came to Deborah—back about the year 2500 B.C., a time when women were not taking leading positions in the world and also a time when the church was not—and it was because the people of Israel were the people of God—His nation! Deborah was a prophetess. The people of Israel came up to her to be judged! Miss Wilson asked "Modern?" she went on to say "Here Deborah was the head of the state—the head of the church, interpreting God's justice to her people". Miss Wilson challenged her listeners to read the 4th and 5th chapters of Judges to find out more dazling works of Deborah.

BUILT CHURCH

"When our ancestors came to Canada, they built a church over their heads, shelter for their animals and then a church. The first Elm county who so often felt it was their responsibility to see that a church was built. In the year 1823 women on Prince Edward Island formed the first women's organization in any church in Canada. It was called "The Female Society for Propagating the Gospel of Christ and Other Religious Purposes". The women of St. John, N.B., in 1808 established free children tea rooms of ago working in factories should have an education—they set up a Y.W.C.A. and hired teachers for their children. In 1872 two women dared to venture to the mission field—Miss Fairweather and Miss Rodgers went to India.

"All these women knew it was God who led them and through a need which they saw and they all were willing to step out of comforts and security into a situation that needed their help regardless of criticism. We look back and we see them with a halo about their heads and likely there were comments passed that the halo was not of gold, but brass."

COMMUNITY NEEDS

Miss Wilson asked, "What are you going to see out of your window that needs to be done in the community?" She referred to Fox's Book of Marvels—women after women after women, whose commitment was so strong they were willing to even go unto death for their faith. How strong is our faith? How great is our commitment? How far does that commitment take us in time, talent and money for other people? How far are we willing to make real to people this faith of ours?"

U.C.W. CHURCH UNIT

In her evening address, Miss Wilson dwelt on "Why do we do things the way we do them" and she attempted to explain the procedure of the committee who presented the proposed constitution for the Board of Women to General Council for approval. She said "The U.C.W. is not an independent organization. It is a unit within the church. In the past there was a great division in church life. We had the 'room' for Canada, the 'room' for the work outside of Canada and our own 'room.' Some of us worked in all the rooms of our house, others just stayed in one room, everybody thinking we were the Christians and people in other countries were heathen and we were doing things for them. In that place has come the conception that the whole Church be one. This is why our missionaries are no longer Missionaries of the United Church of Canada in other countries; either they are employees of the country to which they go to work. We give financial help and moral assistance on the 'whole church'. A member of a U.C.W. is working and contributing to this 'whole church'.

PROGRAM MATERIAL

Speaking of program material Miss Wilson said that for women ought to know what the job of the church is. "We ought to know what the basis of our faith is. Everything suggested in the program packets fits into this pattern. Each unit of program committee is to 'pick and choose' the pieces of material susceptible to their particular pattern.

"Emphasis in 1963 of citizenship week committees will be an interesting study to find out what is contribution the new incoming citizens have made to our church, community and country. What contributions have we to offer the new family who moved in next door?"

U.C.W. PURPOSE

Miss Wilson concluded her address with the purpose of United Church Women "To unite all women of the congregation for the total mission of the Church and to provide a medium through which they may express their loyalty and devotion to Jesus Christ in Christian Witness, Study, Fellowship and Service."

OFFICERS INSTALLED

Due to the fact that Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt had to conduct two funeral services in the afternoon, the Rev. R. T. Young, Wellington, presided for the election and installation of officers.

Mrs. McLaughin of Tamworth gave the report of the Nominating Committee in which she expressed appreciation and thanks to all who had contributed in any way toward a most rewarding day. She especially thanked the Picton women who catered to the nourishing needs of the human body. The meals were delicious.

Mrs. Smithrim added her personal thanks to the guests, the executive and mentioned particularly those ministers were brave enough to make long trips to attend this first annual meeting of U.C.W. Belleville Presbyterial. She closed the sessions with a sincere and appropriate prayer for everyone's safe journey home.

Mother's Helper

RUNNING out of syrup when pancakes or waffles are in the works can be most unnerving. Most children will love a syrup you can make yourself, in such a case. Boil 1 cup of water, 1¼ cups white sugar, and 3 or more tablespoons of brown sugar. Cook to desired thickness. A touch of maple flavoring can be used if you have it, but it isn't necessary.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

THIS GAME CAN TRIP YOU UP

How are you on "points"?

An informal parlor game that could be one of the best things that ever happened to the practice of good manners is making a slight splash in certain social circles in New York. Other cities might take note.

The game of "points," as described to me by Norton Mockridge, an editor friend, is aimed at pomposity, self-importance and name-dropping, all obvious targets. And there's nothing to buy.

Any number can play the game anywhere — in the living room in car or in a restaurant. The rules are simple. A word or statement that indicates superiority over others is penalized by an arbitrary number of points.

For example, the word "I" is considered necessary for normal usage, but very low on a point. It's all right to say "I went shopping yesterday," but if you say "I met Sophia Loren at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday," you'll be hit with half a point for the word "I", five points for "dropping" Miss Loren's glamorous name, and perhaps a point or two for "Waldorf-Astoria".

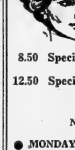
To go further on the basic sentence, the word "I" can get you into real trouble and draw a penalty of two points. Instead if you say, "I MET Sophia Loren Yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria."

An 'astute player like Mr. Mockridge might cunningly try to catch the others napping and avoid the rightful penalty by saying "Me met Sophia Loren," but what a player has to watch out for to catch him on the count of artificiality and knock him down for all points.

Obviously, you can't win. This is the sort of pastime in which everyone is a loser.

The important thing is to keep the game good-natured and informal. It's best to play among friends who know how to place things in check and keep it there. Limit the playing time to a safe half hour.

The players in one game the other night tried to visualize a statement which would be chock full of superiority. They came up with this gem: "Well, when I was king . . ." This surely would be worth at least 1000 points unless the speaker, of course, was the Duke of Windsor.



As I see it, the real point of "points" is that it reminds people they've forgotten the old conversational etiquette. Idiosyncrasies of speech and other such game-dropping that annoy others are brought out into the open, often to the horror of the speaker.

But if he's also amused, he's learned a lesson.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a lodge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. This article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counselors and social workers.

Alan Y. — I'm nothing more than a money-machine to her.

Diane Y. — He should know I appreciate him. But he likes soft-soap.

Alan Y. — I can see how a man gets into the habit of stopping off at a bar, or even giving a woman a ride home in his car. He craves a kind word.

Lately I have the feeling that my wife looks at me as some kind of a machine, nice and reliable, that hands over money to her and runs along fine, but has no feelings. She's even stopped saying thanks. It's Do this, Do that, Get me this.

I hear other wives. They know how to talk to their men. It's How do you feel, darling, and Oh, you're wonderful, and I'm such a fool, and Maybe Diane loves me. But nobody, me included, could ever get it to hear her talking to me.

Diane Y. — Since when is talk the sign of love? I can show Alan plenty of glas who put on those lovely love-tails, re Elizabeth Barrett Browning's sonnets and all — and yet Alan's as blase as a nickel. I shaw Alan plenty of gals who my work. I keep his home runand clean, and cook for him that are tasty and nourishing, and I manage to get some of his money in the bank so we can soon own our own place.

Canada. What a one-sided gush. I'm a straightforward person and I just say what has to be said and I'll be darned if he feels unappreciated. But that's all in his own mind.

Whatever could talk be gfld from others may well be bal ony. Mine, he should know, is honest and sincere.

The Council: A little buttering up now and then is relished by the best of men, Diane. And women, too, we might add. Nobody denies that a vanilla ice cream is a treat, but it's the sauces and trimmings that lure it into a parfait! You've been handing Alan the ice cream cold, leaving him to embellishment in the closet so long that you even forget they're there.

Imagine what a wonderful world this would be if people spoke their kind thoughts, instead of keeping them in mind only. In a marriage it may be a bother to dress up those fleeting feelings, escort them out of the mind and heart, and present them in words which flow easily out of the mouth. It's exactly, Diane does, to assume that one's mate knows how one feels. And she relies upon her actions rather than words, to speak loudly to Alan.

But man is an insecure animal. He laps up reassurance from any quarter he can find it. And as he is...tures he different-...ioted between empty flattery "to get on his right side," and true appreciation. Of all possible forms of praise, none can be more meaningful than the word of commendation from his mate. Who should know him better? What she says really hits!

Alan puts his finger on the carelessness and thoughtlessness which often creep into a good marriage. A man can easily collect smiles and a kind word in the course of his daily contacts. But he, and no doubt Diane too, feel much like Sweet Alice when the smile was from her one and only Ben Bolt. Then, "she wept with delight . . . and trembled with fear" at his frown.

So we advise Diane to take time-out, even if she feels "silly" doing it, to put all her positive feelings about Alan into simple words. Maybe Alan does listen to her, but it's chockful of the minerals and vitamins which nourish a strong love. Too often, the unsaid is just dead.

St. Mark's Evening Guild Lists Officers

Leftover Ham Promoted To Sunday Dinner Status

by Mary Moore

When I repeat something here I am not comfortable. I remember that there are so many dishes yet to be tried that if I live to be one hundred years old I could not try them all.

But the Gulche Lorraine (Ham and Cheese Pie) that I made last night was so good I'm going to yield. The night was cold. We were hungry. Both factors contributed to its deliciousness. It had another comforting virtue — it was made from leftovers and was dressed up so well we had it for Sunday night's dinner for four.

I had bought a smoked ready-to-eat picnic shoulder on special for 39c per pound and had sliced from it all week long. Like the Dogpatch ham. But there was still meat on the bone. So I cut it off and ground it and found I had 2½ cups. It was enough to make tablespoons ice cold water. Cut the shortening and butter into flour and salt until mixture resembles coarse meal. Sprinkle with fork. Pick between palms. Roll out thinly. Line 9" pie plate and even up and flute the edge.

Grind your leftover ham or picnic shoulder. You should have 2 to 3 cups. (I had 2½ cups.) Also grate or shred some cheese. I had 1¼ cups from grating 2 or 3 small pieces of Cheddar and Swiss. Now beat 3 eggs a little and add 1½ cups milk, shake of Tabasco Sauce (optional) and shake of onion salt (or 1 teaspoon grated or chopped onion). Pour this custard into partbaked pie plate. Carefully add ground ham and cheese with a fork to distribute it evenly through the custard. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for 25 minutes. Remove from oven and sprinkle the shredded cheese evenly over the top. Reduce heat to 350 deg. Fahr. and bake 35 minutes longer until custard is set and cheese is melted and golden brown on top.

Served hot this serves 4 very generously if you have bejewelled only a salad and no vegetables. Served hot with 2 vegetables it will serve 6. Herbin likes it with catsup. I like it with warmed cold sauce.

Served cold with a relish it will stretch for 8 as a late snack.

Women's Apathy Said Their Biggest Obstacle

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—In a pamph.let written for United Nations women's group, Secretary-General U Thant says the apathy of women themselves is one of the biggest obstacles to their participation in public life.

The UN this weekend circulated the pamphlet on "civic and political education of women" for a March 11-29 session of the UN commission on the status of women, which will consider it for publication.

Speaking of factors that keep women from taking part in public life, it says:

"Social and psychological factors are frequently linked—fear of social ostracism and diffidence are that part of women to enter into the political life of a community often have their origin in the customs and traditional attitudes of the community. . .

"But women themselves frequently fail to take advantage of the changing views of society. Their apathy and indifference and their lack of comprehension of their rights and duties as citizens are among the most serious obstacles to be overcome. . .

TIES LACK

"Women may also be prevented from making . . . a contribution by educational factors . . . in general, women are less likely to have access to education of a kind enjoyed by men, and any disadvantages which they suffer in this respect will seriously affect their role in the community. . .

"The economic factor will continue to be an important element . . . unless women themselves should have sufficient time and opportunity to develop themselves as individuals, as wives, as mothers and citizens. . .

"Women have seldom held conspicuous positions in political parties The more women join the rank and file on political parties, the stronger their influence on the composition of the governing bodies and, thereby, on the selection of candidates, the composition of lawmaking bodies and finally the government."

The pamphlet is a revision of one put out in 1951 and now out of print.

SMALL TALK

Ned Pratt's Four Score Years

By ZENA CHERRY

Eighty years ago today Canada's master poet, Edwin John Pratt, was born in Western Bay, about 50 miles from St. John's — his father had come to Newfoundland from England as a Methodist minister, his mother was a Newfoundland girl.

Dr. Pratt is affectionately known as Ned Pratt — he lives in Rosedale, Toronto, and I asked him how he would spend his birthday. "At home, quietly, with my wife and daughter," Mrs. Pratt founded, and for 28 years edited the United Church's childrens' magazine, World Friends. His daughter, Claire, is an editor at McClelland and Stewart.

"How does it feel to be 80?" I asked.

"I don't like to think about it," he said. "The only good thing is that this is only four score years, not four score years and ten."

"Of the 18 books of poetry you have written, which are your favorites?"

"That is like asking one to choose between one's children. I love them all." Then I asked for a sample from "The Titanic," and for a shortie I'd choose "Erole."

Next I asked, "Who is your favorite contemporary poet?" And he said, "I lean towards Robert Frost. I think any poem should convey something, clearly. I think it is an imposition on a poet to expect his reader to find meaning in meaningless jargon."

"What is your biggest disappointment in life?" I wondered.

"I've had very few disappointments — and for that I am thankful. However, I am disappointed that I cannot find a great disappointment for your interview."

"And what pleased you most, Dr. Pratt?"

"That I'M 80. . . being made a Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George."

Unified Silhouette Confirmed

PARIS (Reuters)—Yves Saint-Laurent's new collection confirms the unified silhouette with chemise dresses and sweater suits.

Saint-Laurent gives the chemise a high waistline, worked with yokes or horizontal seaming, compared with Marc Bohan's unbroken tapered shift for Dior.

Saint Laurent concentrates on shoulder width and bulky top treatments evolved in long cardigan-inspired suit jackets, ulster coats and loose - waisted dresses.

In tune with the rest of Paris, Yves has not attempted to revolutionize fashions. He evolves many of his own best trends in fresh young versions for spring.

The dominant new theme is the cardigan sweater, showing in both suits and two - piece dresses. Collarless deep necklines and long jackets resting on the hipline are the signatures.

BELT STANDS OUT

Other suits repeat the same long jacket with blouse back, but feature a high waistline marked under the bosom by a narrow leather belt.

While organdy scarves are knotted high around the throat, matching white hats with such accessories as the planter and sun helmet.

Sleeves are cut full, tightened into wide cuffs above the wrists.

The pristine freshness of the schoolgirl is played up by the basic grey and navy colors chosen for day wear, highlighted with the white pique or organdie collars or scarves. Two-piece cardigan dresses evolve long polo shirts.

St. Laurent abandons the elaborate details he invented last season for simply upswept styles ornamented by life-size silk petals and leaves made of lacquered hair.

Mr., Mrs. W. J. Booth, of Selby, Mark Golden Anniversary

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Booth, Selby, was the scene of a happy event on January 26th when they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Many flowers, telegrams, gifts, and cards were received and about 250 called during the day and evening.

They were married at the bride's home in Selby, by the Rev. J. W. Down, Methodist minister. Mrs. Booth is the former Margaret Sexsmith.

The couple have one son, Harry, in Toronto, and a daughter, Mrs. Herb Hayes (Peggy) of Napanee, and two grandsons, Tommy and Peter Hayes.

Mrs. Hayes arranged the event with the help of the OSTOC Club of Napanee, who served the lunch.

Women's Institutes

SIDNEY SOUTH W.I.

The January meeting of the Sidney South W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. A. Christopher. The meeting was opened in the usual way with the vice-president, Mrs. M. Nobea, in charge.

The business section was fairly lengthy with everyone taking an active part.

Mrs. J. Sargent, historical research convener provided an interesting and enlightening program.

Mrs. D. Thompson gave information on the "Tweedsmuir Book," and how it is to be made.

Mrs. S. Spafford read a history of Alken's United Church, which is the oldest church in this area, originally a pilgrim mission; and Mrs. M. Nobes read a history of Centenary United Church, originally an Anglican mission.

Mrs. T. Alkens' oral contribution gave interesting sidelights and history of the Alkens family who settled here when the Indians still lived here and deeply resented the white man.

A will of years ago pertaining to the Farley farms on the 2nd of Sidney, was read by Mrs. K. Kerr. This will was explained in fuller detail by Mrs. Sargent who told more about the people named in the will as many know the Farley farms and some of the members now reside on these farms.

Mrs. Sargent had pictures taken at Centenary school from the time her husband attended until the present. Most members could find themselves, their children or their parents.

The evening was concluded with a lunch and a surprise birthday cake for Mrs. Christopher.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY FOR SPRING 1963

My Fair Lady, a gal who certainly broke records on Broadway, is with us again in the fashion pictures this spring. The last time she influenced fashion, at her debut, we had a rash of Ascot fashions, ladylike silhouettes and gentle colors. Well, it's My Fair Lady for this coming spring — but how different the old gal looks now!

Her silhouette used to be hourglass, with many cinched-in waists, ruffles and frills. The new Fair Lady of 1963 will wear a tightly shaped silhouette, with any easy fit that follows the figure, neither exaggerating it, nor shrouding it. Those of us, who have gained ten pounds since the original Fair-Lady, will get a break, as this silhouette covers a multitude of second helplings. (One day, and it might be fairly soon, the marked waist will be back in fashion. Perhaps, we'd better think of dieting). The 1963 look emphasizes simplicity, understated colors and an air of well-bred femininity. Remember last year's Dear Liz look, with its frills — dead as a dodo now!

The new Fair Lady gets tailored this spring, she will wear the Haberdasher look, mostly, classicly simple in narrish-type fabrics. There is nothing "mannish" in "boyish" look this look, when it is correctly interpreted. This Haberdasher Look is seen in high, round-crowned bowler hats of fine straw, with stitched ribbon trims. When worn, as they should be, square on the head, about an inch above the eyebrows, with a face well, they create an air of sophisticated mystery — terrific with suits! Colors for this spring are interesting, as they are lightened and whitened. We have already mentioned the new Clay shade. This and grey are emerging as the new basics, along with an ivory beige. Hot orange, coral and strident lilac are gone — thank goodness. In their place are the honey tones, paled aquas and yellow for accessories. The only really bright color on the spring color card is a cheerful red, best seen in slicky tailored dresses, shoes and the odd handbag. A soft, watermelon pink looks delicate and there are some wonderfully beautiful prints in combinations of yellow and yellow-green, or blue and gold tones. While for early spring is too? ed down white linen base. We think that black for summer playwear and beachwear is in for a revival, but we believe that deep chocolate brown will edge black of the map, for midsummer wear in the city.

Fabrics are featured with linen leading the parade, in every price point. Knits in all-cotton, or all-silk, along with the blended, mas made fabrics are prominent in every good Canadian collection. Prints run from the splashy abstracts (hard to wear) right through to the neat, ladylike patterns in small floral designs.

Yes, My Fair Lady is back but she's younger and prettier than ever!

Glitter Touch

By ALICE ALDEN

Beautiful baubles to add an accent of glitter to gala costumes—that's what we want when party invitations arrive.

Richelieu answers the call with a beautiful three-strand pretend-pearl necklace intermingled with fake gold and cocardelaced with a domed Golden Apple pin, matching earrings and bracelet.

Nice with any color but especially striking with black or white.

Suspension of Negotiations Matter of Personal Concern To Six European Countries

Probe Chairman

he will read at the opening of the hearing at 3:30 p.m. EST.

American diplomats were surprised that Aiken would make public a statement scheduled to form part of a secret hearing, but it appeared Aiken was getting his side into the picture because the subcommittee is heavily weighted in favor of Democrats. In fact Aiken may be the only Republican. Others invited to sit with him are Senator Mike Mansfield, Montana Democrat and Senate Majority leader; Senator J. William Fulbright, Arkansas Democrat and chairman of the full Senate foreign relations committee, and Senator Wayne Morse, Oreon Democrat and a sharp critic of Canadian foreign policy.

ON TWO FRONTS

Aiken said the investigation will seek information on two fronts: Facts on the Canada-U.S. conflict in nuclear weapons strategy for North America, and the basis for the department's public statement last Wednesday contending Prime Minister Diefenbaker's version of nuclear negotiations and the value of Canadian nuclear commitments.

By issuing a public statement of criticism rather than opening through normal diplomatic channels, the department seemed to be "aggravated rather than ameliorated our differences with Canada," Aiken contended.

"The U.S. at this late date has no excuse for its insensitivity to the sovereign independence and national pride of our northern neighbor but the purpose here is to determine whether in fact U.S. officials have attempted to exercise unwarranted pressures on the Canadian government and, if so, for what reasons."

Aiken said there may have been compelling reasons for the department to act as it did. He wanted to hear them so that he and others could help to restore cross - border confidence and harmony.

The controversy was particularly unfortunate because it came "at a time when the failure of Britain's application for membership in the European Common Market has caused a far more serious division in the Western alliance."

HARD TO UNDERSTAND

"It is difficult to understand why it was seen fit to express official displeasure with Canada by a public rebuke when no such statement was made regarding Gen. de Gaulle's disruption of the negotiations in Brussels. In any case it is clear that a satisfactory conference between Canada and the U.S. can benefit no one outside the Communist world."

The controversy has been featured on the front pages of U.S. newspapers from coast to coast. Editorial cartoonists have had a field day, one cartoon depicting Canada as a snowbound woman refusing Uncle Sam's nuclear wares while a far - off island marked British shoots off nuclear warheads. Another shows Prime Minister Diefenbaker standing guard with a rifle while President Kennedy points to a huge Soviet nuclear missile and says: "Don't forget—we're in this together."

Italy Behind

France threatens the future of a unified Europe where "the notion of an engaged leadership is inconceivable."

Spaak said Europe needs Britain "more than ever now that the democratic spirit is fading in some countries and nationalism—which we thought dead—is awakening."

Sir David Ormsby Gore, British ambassador to the United States, expressed concern in a television interview in Washington that de Gaulle is seeking to assume the role of "third force" arbiter between the West and Russia.

French Ambassador Herve Alphand appearing on the same program, said de Gaulle wants to create a strong Europe that "will be a third force in a way, but a third force allied and completely friendly to the United States."

CHARGED IN SLAYING

EDMONTON (CP)—John Ernest Fitzpatrick, about 33, of Edmonton was charged with capital murder Sunday in the beating death of a 43-year-old Edmonton woman. Police withheld the victim's name.

Successful Living

Should My Career Be Sacrificed?

DEAR DORIS—I am faced with two objectives: my future and my mother's, brothers' and sisters' future. You see, my father won't work to support the family and thus my mother has to rely on welfare. My father is only 42, and physically I can see no reason why he can't work. He has gets the idea that he doesn't want to work any more, so he quits.

I am eighteen and have been away from home since my eighteenth birthday working, trying to earn enough money to put myself through as a nurse. I want to be a nurse more than anything in the world. But I also want to see that my mother and brothers and sisters have a decent home to live in and a life to lead.

I was wondering, should I forget my future and take on the task of raising them, or what should I do?—VERY CONFUSED AND MIXED.

DEAR VERY CONFUSED—The career can help you help them. If they can struggle through a little longer, stick with it. You should not be sacrificed on the altar of your father's incompetence, be it mental or physical. Talk to your welfare counsellor about this.

• • •

DEAR DORIS—I am not what you would call beautiful or handsome, and I'm putting on the chubby side. How can I get a certain guy interested?

I've played hard to get, but when he talks to me I feel like I'm gonna die. He is a very nice person.—DUH.

DEAR DUH—Playing hard to get has its hazards. He might believe you. Nothing beats a smile and natural friendliness. Leave something to fate.

DEAR DORIS—I am 20 and am still single. I don't go out anywhere because there are no girls of my faith for miles and miles around. I sure feel lonely.

Just lately I found a girl friend through an ad in the paper. We've exchanged pictures we fell in love. I asked her hand in marriage and she came out here on her own terms but I had to meet her part way. After she was here for one day she wanted to go back to help her aunt pack for a trip to her new home as a promise that she'd come back in ten days. But she has not returned.

I would like to find a true partner, but if I look for another girl, I feel I'll be cheated and made a fool of again.—STUNG AND HEARTBROKEN.

DEAR STUNG—Has it occurred to you that falling in love by correspondence has its limitations? Your priest is the one to talk to. He can steer you to young people's groups of your faith.

• • •

DEAR DORIS—Would you please give me a few hints on how to be popular with the boys. I don't want to show off, but to stay by myself and when said: "I have more boy friends than you do."—WANT TO SHOW.

• • •

DEAR WANT—What matters is not quantity but quality. To attract the boys who have something on the ball you need friendliness and a way of showing interest in what the other fellow is thinking and doing—be it boy or girl.

Be sure of that well-groomed look, and just never say anything rude like your girl friend said to you.

TO MISS R.—Next time he asks you to meet him, say: "Oh, aren't you going to call for me at the house? My boy friends always do." Then be ready on the finishes work just fifteen minutes ahead of curtain time, give in. Otherwise, bold out for the courtesy every girl is entitled to.

(Putting your problem on paper to Doris is the first step toward Successful Living. Try it.)

checked with such sources.

He has contended over and over again that the government has the same information he has "plus a lot more."

As a brigadier-general in the army reserve, after service in two world wars, Keating has many friends in uniform. He declines to put a finger on them.

Keating says privately that the Kennedy administration with an Aug. 16, 1962, letter asking the state department to report on rumors. He said he has received information that Soviet troops were being landed in Cuba.

HAD NO INFORMATION

Although it now is generally accepted that the Soviet buildup began in July, the state department maintains that up to Aug. 29 it had "no information that any Soviet bloc troops have landed in Cuba."

Keating says he first learned from Aug. 31 to say he had been "reliably informed" that 1,200 men in Russian uniform were landed in Cuba in August. He followed this two days later with a protest to the Organization of American States investigate reports that Cuban missile bases were being built.

On Sept. 4 President Kennedy said the Russians were not placing missiles were in Cuba but the buildup was defensive. Keating replied that Russians had built an offensive base.

By Oct. 9 Keating was telling the Senate that 3,000 was a "modest number" for the Soviet troops stationed in Cuba. He said the next day that construction had begun on "at least a half-dozen launching sites for intermediate-range tactical missiles."

But on Oct. 14, McGeorge Bundy, special assistant to the president, said on a telecast: "There is no present likelihood that the . . . Cuban government and the Soviet government would in any combination attempt to install a major offensive capability. . . ."

This later was identified by the president as the date on which the first hard information on the missile buildup was received by him.

Winter Toll In Japan 97

TOKYO (AP) — Avalanches triggered by heavy snow continued today to raise the toll in human lives and property in Japan's severest winter in decades.

Avalanches and the weight of snow on roofs have crushed 373 homes, damaged 970 and paralyzed rail and road traffic in prefectures along the Japan Sea coast.

fried" about the place they hold in Canada today.

". . . The French-Canadians—and I'm here to tell you the truth—do not have the feeling they belong to Canada to the same extent that their English speaking fellow countrymen do. And that's serious."

Mr. Lesage, whose carefully prepared address was almost entirely in English, said the contribution French - Canadians can take to the country must be appreciated "and certain prejudices . . . done away with."

"I believe if we want a united Canada the French - Canadians must be understood now and not as too many people, alas, used to think they were."

Quebec, he said, is rapidly changing and intends to utilize all its intellectual and natural resources. It thus could make a greater contribution to Canada as a whole.

"But for this to happen," he said, emphasizing his words, "there is one absolutely indispensible condition—have confidence in us, not only in verbally recognizing our presence in Confederation but by making concrete gestures that will support the positive will of the people of Quebec.

"And above all, yes above all, you must not deceive the French-Canadian group through indifference or any negative acts at a time when many in this group are inclined to doubt the possible advantages of Confederation."

Ontario Intelligencer SPORTS

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Bruce Kidd, a young Canadian with Olympics' and world records' potential, stepped into place last week at a Toronto Sports Celebrities Dinner—and promptly stepped out of it.

In what one critic said was "a high school essay" he placed track and field in an ivory tower calling it a "pure sport" and pulled no verbal punches in his criticism of professional athletes and team sports.

He said track rules with few exceptions are in the original form . . . "the very fact football and basketball rules are changed so often proves that their governors were merely guessing."

He said "track brings the best men to compete against each other . . . in most sports the best is chosen by artificial All-American teams and even all-star games."

He said track is probably a higher spectator sport than most. And here is the remark that had the 1,100-$25-a-plate dinner guests, or at least the sports newsmen and columnists that were there slightly grinding their teeth:

"Track has no crooks as in boxing or basketball, no tolerance of dirty tactics as in football and hockey, no immature appeal to mob psychology as in football and others, no gambling element and far fewer low elements as in most sports".

As a wire story said: "Head table guests included professional-men from hockey, football, baseball, boxing, harness, and thoroughbred racing. In the audience were track and field officials who said privately later they squirmed throughout the speech."

Kidd, an all sports-minded Canada hopes, is headed for the high places in his particular field of athletics. He is the best distance runner we have produced in a long while and has carried the Canadian track banner high not only here but in the United States and Great Britain.

But in the realm of tact and diplomacy he seems to be a rank novice. As someone pointed out, a speech like Kidd made might be all right before an audience of track addicts in some obscure club, but to a gathering of such as attended the Celebrities Dinner it smacked of immaturity.

I talked with several sportsmen here and most of them agreed that Kidd "talked out of turn" and should have used some common sense in the selection of this topic.

One said: "Don't forget this is a free country and we enjoy the privilege of free speech. Every man is entitled to his opinion even if, as in this case, he does not choose the right time and place to air it."

Another opined: "Kidd might not have used his head in giving such a talk, but he certainly did not use his hat for a megaphone. While I do not agree with some things he said, he had a point in others. He was perhaps unfair of his criticism of team sports as a whole but there is no denying that gambling and crooks infiltrated the realms of boxing and basketball."

"Why all the fuss over a track-happy teen-ager blowing his top over his favorite sport," said another. "Kidd probably figured this dinner would be a good spot to tell the country's outstanding sports people what he thought of track and field—But—he should not have spoiled a fine piece of track propaganda with such a sharp criticism of other sports."

And so on—into the night.

Kidd may have "goofed" so to speak. But I don't think he has inflicted enough self-damage that a world record and a couple of Olympic gold medals won't cure.

Nip Athletics, Maroons Tie

Bulldogs Break Deadlock

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A last-minute six-man power play produced the tying goal for the cellar-dwelling Galt Terriers Sunday night and pulled Coach Jim Maroons out of a first-place tie in the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior A Series.

Maroons needed the win to keep pace with the first-place Bulldogs, who posted a hard-fought 5-4 win over Woodstock Athletics in the afternoon.

Rick Hay fired his second Galt goal of the night at 19:18 of the third period, and neither team could break the 4-4 tie in overtime.

The tie brought Galt within one point of the last playoff spot, held by Kitchener-Waterloo Tigers who lost 4-3 to Woodstock Saturday night. The win spread the Athletics' total to 12 points over Kitchener-Waterloo, but left them still six points back of the second-place Maroons.

In Chatham, Keith Worrall also turned in a two-goal performance for Galt. Bob Pole, Ted Power, George Aitken and George Usitalo were the Chatham scorers.

In Windsor, the Bulldogs notched three quick goals in the first seven minutes of play, then just barely managed to stop Woodstock's third period rally to win 5-4.

The rankings were announced by Chet Coleman, chairman of the ranking committee at the association's annual meeting Saturday.

Ontario champion Mrs. Louise Brown of Port Credit was ranked first in the women's classes, followed by Mrs. Benita Sem of Toronto. Ann Barclay of Toronto, 1962 national champion, did not play in the Ontario championships last year and was not ranked.

OLTA Ranks Top Stars

TORONTO (CP)—Davis Cup-pers Don Fontana, Harry Fauquier and John Swann, all of Toronto, have been ranked was two and three by the Ontario Lawn Tennis Association.

Hull Scores Three Over Weekend ★ ★ ★ ★

Hawks Up Lead; Whip Leafs, Tie Habs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The league-leading Chicago Black Hawks finally are start ing to put a little daylight between themselves and the runners-up for the National Hockey League leadership.

Their 3-3 tie with Montreal Saturday night and 3-1 victory over Toronto Sunday gave them 62 points a four-point edge over the two closest contenders.

At the other end of the standings, last-place Boston earned a 4-4 tie with Detroit and a 6-4 triumph over New York to bring themselves within shooting range of the fifth-place Rangers.

Glenn Hall was Chicago's standout Saturday, stopping a breakaway by Henri Richard with 19 seconds to play to preserve the Hawks' tie.

PUT ON PRESSURE

Canadiens outshot Chicago 32-16, putting on tremendous pressure in the final period to overcome a 3-0 deficit.

Three Hawks went ahead on power-play goals by Bobby Hull and Stan Mikita, while both times defenceman Jean-Guy Talbot of Montreal was sitting out a penalty.

Ab McDonald scored a third goal for the Hawks at 15:48 after Bobby Rousseau started the Canadiens' comeback.

Gilles Tremblay and Beliveau counted in the final 20 minutes of the game, Tremblay on a close-in shot and Beliveau on Rousseau's rebound.

Leif Isaksen and Bobby Hull bagged his 21st and 22nd goals of the season in pacing the Hawks to victory over Toronto Sunday.

The Leafs got off to a 1-0 lead when Bobby Nevin scored mid way in the first period. Hull tied the score at 1:14 of the second period while Toronto's Eddie Shack was serving a penalty, and put Chicago in front three minutes later.

Centre Stan Mikita clinched the win midway through the third period.

COME FROM BEHIND

Toronto salvaged one point from its two weekend outings, coming from behind a two-goal deficit to tie New York 2-2 Saturday.

Earl Ingarfield scored the opener, a 15-footer from a difficult angle. Left winger Camille Henry made it 2-0 at 4:57 of the second period, while Shack was off for boarding.

Toronto defenceman Allan Stanley scored at 18:01 and the equalizer came at 9:11 of the third period from Dick Duff.

Montreal earned its second-place tie by trouncing Detroit 6-2 Sunday. Beliveau was the only Canadien to score twice. The other markers went to Bobby Rousseau, Ralph Backstrom, Henri Richard and Claude Provost.

Parker Macdonald gave Detroit a 1-0 lead late in the first period. Andre Pronovost counted in the second for the Wings.

Boston gained ground with its 4-4 tie against Detroit Saturday and its 6-4 upset of the Rangers Sunday.

The Bruins were well on their way to winning the first contest when olo reliable Gordie Howe scored for the Red Wings with 61 seconds left to play.

Boston took an early 3-0 lead before the Wings got rolling. Don McKenney scored in the first period and Murray Oliver, Jerry Toppazzini in the second.

Detroit brought the count up to 3-2 by the end of the period on goals by Alex Faulkner and Macdonald.

It was tied 3-3 at 14:20 of the third period when a puck glanced off Alex Delvecchio into the net. Boston retained the advantage 43 seconds later when Bassen accidentally brushed Johnny Bucyk's shot into the net.

BATTLE ALL THE WAY

It was a battle all the way against New York Sunday. Toppazzini snapped a 4-4 tie early in the third period and Oliver added the clincher on a power play with less than two minutes remaining.

Rookie Leon Rochefort of the Rangers scored his first NHL goal to give New York a 1-0 lead. Forbes Kennedy tied it and Jim Neilson, a rookie defenceman, tallied the first of his two goals to put the Rangers ahead 2-1.

McKenney tied it for the Bruins at the end of the first period. Boston went ahead 4-2 on goals from Oliver and Tom Williams before New York's Dean Prentice cut the margin to 4-3 at the end of the period. Neilson's second goal evened the count 4-4.

Griffith Puts Dane Away in 9

COPENHAGEN (AP)—Powerful Emile Griffith of Virgin Islands' technical knockout victory over Denmark's Chris Christensen Friday to defend his world welterweight championship in the 14th four-round bout.

The hard-hitting Virgin Islander signed to meet Brian Curvis of Wales on the Welshman's home grounds early in June. He came to terms with Jack Solomons, the British promoter, shortly after smashing Christensen with pile driving lefts and rights to end their bout in the ninth round Sunday.

Referee Robert Seidel of Switzerland stopped the scheduled 15-round bout as Christensen fell helplessly against the ropes in a fight that was billed for the junior middleweight title, although Griffith is the recognized champion in this division only in Austria. The World Boxing Association recognizes Denny Moyer of Portland, Ore., as the titleholder.

Griffith is expected to defend his 147 pound crown against Luis Rodriguez, an exiled Cuban, next month. Curvis defends his British Empire welterweight championship against England's Tony Smith in London Feb. 12.

MARLENE WIN

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Mrs. Marlene Stewart Streit of Toronto and Hobart Manley of Savannah, Ga., won the national mixed foursomes championship Saturday, the second time the duo has won the event as a team. The last time was in 1955.

Manley and Mrs. Streit stroked a four-round total of 293, one stroke ahead of Jack Penrose of Miami Beach and Jean Ashley of Chevalle, Kan. Third place went to Dudley Wysong of Kinney, Tex., and Mrs. Ann Casey Johnston of Mason City, Iowa, who carded 299.

Bay of Quinte Bonspiel

Napanee Takes Coveted Corby Trophy

A Napanee rink of Neil Lambert Alan French, Dr. Bill Burns and Glen Jerome won the coveted Corby Trophy, top award of the four-day Bay of Quinte Bonspiel which concluded at the Trenton Curling Club last night.

The Quinte Curling Club won two of the four major events, Mac White and his rink taking the Bata Trophy and Claude Tice's rink winning the Lafferty Trophy.

White's rink of Jim Coverdale, Dr. McCorquodale and T. A. Carruthers defeated Bill Funk's Welland rink while the Tice rink of Dick Lumbers, Jack Murphy and Ron Benn turned back Herb Seguin's RCAF quartet.

Runner-up for the Corby Trophy was the Trenton RCAF rink of Bill Lewis, skip, George Peters, John Law and Grant Macauley.

In the Elliott Motors event, Bill Goetick of Kingston with Bob Landry, Charles Millar and Pat Purcell were the winners while the runner-up was a rink skipped by Jim Fewell of the RCAF. The LaPalm trophy was won by a rink of E. Hyatt, L. Platt, Jack Hallett with Bob Barlow of the Trenton Club as skip and he defeated J. Broadfoot of the RCAF in the final match on Saturday night.

The O'Keefe trophy was won by Pat Fedorek, Brock Thompson, Russ Smith and Harry Lewis of St. Hubert, Quebec and in accepting the trophy Mr. Lewis called the spiel one of the best and he stated that more Quebec rinks would be hearing of this event. Defeated in this event was Wayne MacAlpine of the RCAF.

The Pepsi-Cola trophy was won by Jack Fleming, Alex Mc-Rae, Bud Powell with Don Noble of the RCAF as skip. The trophy was presented by Bill Spinelli, proprietor of Moira Bev-erages. Ald. Walter Elliott presented his trophy and prizes. Harry Lafferty presented his trophy and Mickey McDonald of Corby's did the honors on Saturday night.

Scores of four to three, six to five were common with many dead ends thrown in. Most of the rinks had to go eight games to make the finals.

The McFarland shield for the grand aggregate of the spiel was won by the Gostick rink of Kingston. The finalists in the first four events started a knockout draw Sunday morning and after three games the Kingston rink defeated Bill Lewis of the RCAF.

The concluding function was a buffet supper at the RCAF Station on Sunday afternoon between the second and third games and it was a delightful affair. An orchestra directed by Jack Keane from the Air Station provided background music and which was much enjoyed.

The arrangements for the spiel moved like clockwork and the committee headed by William Ruley as general chairman and Bruce Cardy as piel manager are to be congratulated for the smooth operation in which 64 rinks were kept to their draws at the several rinks. It was a well-run bonspiel in every detail.

The women's section of the three clubs did a tremendous job in refreshments for the curlers. The galleries that followed the games were large and many came early and stayed late. To the icemakers of the three clubs a word of congratulations from the hundreds of curlers. The ice was always fast, sometimes a little tricky but the ice was clean and well cared for at all times. ## Will Conduct Coach Clinics

Dyson Arrives In Canada

NEW YORK (CP) — British athletic coach Geoffrey Dyson, en route to Ottawa, arrived here Sunday firmly resolved to do his utmost to raise the standards of track and field coaching in Canada during the next five years.

"If after five years the only thing I leave behind in Canada is an improved corps of coaches and teachers," he said, "I shall be happy."

Dyson, for more than 14 years the senior professional coach Athletic Association and a man described variously as a "controversial personality" and "the greatest coach" in the United Kingdom, has been hired by the Royal Canadian Legion to direct its athletic training program for Canadian youngsters.

He arrived here with his wife and 11-year-old daughter, Judith.

Dyson, who expects he may become something of a coaching co-ordinator or full-time link between coaches in various parts of Canada, said he likely will conduct clinics for coaches and athletes across Canada.

A clinic for coaches will be staged in Guelph Aug. 12-20 under the Legion auspies and Dyson will be key figure there. It follows the pattern set last year when the Legion training plan brought Dyson to Canada to conduct a clinic that attracted more than 170 coaches from Canada and the U.S.

Crothers, Kidd Win Events

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The track specialists from Toronto's East York Track Club continued their winning ways in indoor meets during the weekend.

The contingent, led by versatile University of Toronto sophomore Bruce Kidd and lanky Bill Crothers, wrapped up both wins Saturday to take a big share of the spotlight at the Philadelphia Inquirer Games.

Kidd turned in a creditable four minutes 8.7 seconds to top the field in the mile run. Tom Sullivan of Villanova University pushed him toward the end but was unable to catch him. Ergas Leps of Toronto was fifth in 4:17.2 and Jim Irons of Bramton, Ont., was next in 4:19.6.

Crothers, gaining experience on the shortest indoor track and the consequent greater number of turns, ran away with the 1,000-yard event. He stormed ahead of the field with 1½ laps to go and was increasing his margin at every strike.

Crothers was clocked in 2:10.6, handing a solid setback to defending champ Cary Weisiger of the U.S. Marines as he led him across the finish by 10 yards.

HELPS WIN RELAY

Kidd called on his shortdistance ability late in the evening to help the East York two-mile relay quartet to another win. Other Toronto runners—Kidd, Dave McClure, Stan Worsfold and Jim Snider—wrapped up the club-armed services relay with a 7:52.6 clocking. The Baltimore Athletic Club team was second.

The meet also saw a new pole vaulter added to the ranks of those who have cleared 16 feet. Jones, unbeaten in 37 indoor starts going into the meet, made it 38 straight with a performance of six seconds flat in the 60-yard dash.

Boston's John Thomas took the high jump at six feet 10 inches.

Brilliant Player Ties Nicklaus

By JIM BACON

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—Gary Player, the little man in black, came from five strokes behind in the final round of the $50,000 Palm Springs golf classic for a tie—and so today meets Jack Nicklaus in an 18-hole playoff.

The money difference is $9,000 to $4,000. The match was set for 2 p.m. EST.

Nicklaus went into a one-stroke lead in the second round, then maintained a five-stroke lead on the third and fourth rounds of the marathon 90-hole tournament.

But he said someone, like the witches in the Shakespearean play Macbeth, warned him: "Jack may lead the pack but watch out for the man in black."

Player, of South Africa, usually wears black from head to toe in tournaments.

The two have met head-on only once before—last summer in the world series of golf. Nicklaus won by five strokes.

PLAYER PESSIMISTIC

"I seem to putt best on the Indian Wells course in Palm Springs," said Player. "But I've been in eight playoffs all over the world and I have never won once. And this Nicklaus isn't the easiest man in the world to beat in a 36-hole off."

The two meet today on Indian Wells. On two previous trips on the course last week, Player carded 67s while Nicklaus shot a 69 and 72.

Both finished the tournament with 345 totals. Nicklaus, last to finish, needed an eagle to win on the 465-yard, par-five 18th.

It appeared he had read the green perfectly on his 30-foot putt. But the ball missed the cup by inches. He settled for a birdie four, the same as Player.

Nicklaus, 23, took his final round blows good-naturedly.

JUST DIDN'T KNOW

"I guess I didn't know how to act with a five-stroke lead," he said. "I have never had a five-stroke lead before. I know I played too conservatively."

Arnold Palmer, the other member of golfing's big three, made on of his famous finishes with a final 67 for 349 to get himself $2,000 and a tie for sixth place with Jack Fleck.

Ahead of him at 346 was Tommy Bolt, whose iron play was as deadly as most pro putting. Bolt's final-round 66 won him third-place money of $3,000.

Two Canadians got in for a share of the money. Stan Leonard of Vancouver shot a final 72 for a $250 total, good for $331. Toronto's Al Balding finished with a 70 that left him two strokes behind Leonard and earned him $110.

New York 'Trots' Set Records

The commission's annual report, released Sunday, shows that revenue to the state was $40,763, 397 in 1961.

Attendance in 1962 totalled 7,533,273, up from 7,491,639 in 1961, and parimutuel turnover increased from $316,790,071 in 1961 to $330,109,244 last season. Purses last year totalled $14,021,471, a boost from 1961's $13,367,992.

Finn Sets New Pole Vault Mark

PAJULAHTI, Finland (AP)—Pentti Nikula of Finland cleared 16 feet 8¾ inches (5.10 metres) in the pole vault Saturday, soaring 5½ inches higher than any man had vaulted before.

The wiry Finn, holder of the recognized world record of 16-3¼, performed the feat in an indoor meet in this obscure resort while tuning up for a United States campaign.

Indoor performances are not recognized as official records by the International Track and Field Federation.

Before Nikula's vault, the highest any man had vaulted was 16 feet 3¼ inches, a height achieved by C. K. Yang, National Chinese athlete who attends UCLA, a week ago in an indoor meet in Portland, Ore.

'Hurricane' Nearly Blew But Won

NEW YORK (AP) — Hurricane Carter is thinking about title fights, but he's not through the middleweight contender is still more than a year away from big business.

The wild-swinging musclemen from Paterson, N.J., won a lopsided 10-round decision over Gomeo Brennan at Madison Square Garden Saturday night but not before he gave his handlers a terrific scare.

Brennan, a back - peddling southpaw first floored for eight rounds, suddenly nailed the 4-to-1 favorite with a right to the jaw that sent Carter staggering to the ropes. Gomeo couldn't do much more than set and blow his chance for an upset.

Otherwise it was Carter by a huge margin in a fight that gained him no prestige but some experience.

Carter kept trying to take out the slippery Gomeo with one punch all night. He did manage to hurt Brennan in the sixth and seventh rounds but couldn't drop him.

Carter weighted 156¾ pounds to Brennan's 157¾.

Central Ontario 'B' Badminton

Bowmanville Wins Tourney

The Bowmanville Badminton Club made a clean sweep of the three major events in the Central Ontario Class "B" Badminton tournament held at the armouries here Saturday.

Displaying consistent court ability the lakeshore town players won men's, Women's and Mixed Doubles, with two of the club's pairs reaching the men's and mixed doubles finals.

Trenton RCAF took the men's consolation award with the Oshawa YMCA winning the ladies' consolation. Belleville Badminton Club supplied the mixed consolation's winning pair.

Tragedy injected a note of sadness in the tournament when it was learned that Miss Gwen Hall, 22, of the Whitby Badminton Club had been killed en route to the event.

Miss Hall was met instant death when the car in which she was travelling was involved in an accident near Port Hope early Saturday morning. Players and officers paid tribute to her memory with a minute's silence prior to the start of the final matches.

Play and prayer-wise the tournament was voted the best m ever staged by sponsoring club by host Garrison Club. It attracted a record number of players. The calibre of play was high and many keenly contested matches featured the tourney throughout.

Clubs represented were Belleville, Oshawa, Bowmanville, Picton, Trenton RCAF, Cobourg, Orono, Napanee, Port Hope and Whitby.

Play started at 10 a.m. and continued through until after midnight. It was suspended for some time in the early afternoon due to a city power failure.

Official welcomes were extended to the visiting players by Lieut-Col. J. B. Black, commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Captain Ross Hart and Garrison Club president Merv. Potts.

Central Ontario Badminton Association president Fred Jennings, voiced his appreciation of the tournament and play and presented the various winners with handsome copper-plate awards following the finals.

Visiting players were entertained in the officers' mess at a luncheon and dance after play was concluded. A large gallery of spectators was on hand to watch the play.

Top individual star of the tourney was Pat Lucas of Bowmanville who teamed with Peggy Frank to win the ladies' doubles and Dr. Keith Selmon to take the mixed doubles top award.

Visiting players paid spontaneous tribute to Belleville Garrison Badminton Club officials for the fine facilities and hospitality accorded them.

The results:

MEN'S DOUBLES

Joe Starkie and Mel. Burgess, Bowmanville defeated Frank Mohun and Dr. Keith Selmon, Bowmanville.

Consolation — A. Smith and G. Barber, Trenton RCAF won over Red Emerson and Doug Law, Belleville Garrison.

LADIES' DOUBLES

Pat Lucas and Peggy Frank, Bowmanville defeated Doreen Holding and Kay Webster of Whitby.

Consolation — Won by D. Davidson and A. Mason, Oshawa YMCA.

MIXED DOUBLES

Pat Lucas and Dr. Selmon, Bowmanville defeated Peg Frank and Frank Mohun of Bowmanville.

Consolation — Won by Lorraine Bott, Belleville Garrison and Al Sinclair of Napanee.

Red Wings Whip Petes

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It took four games in as many nights to do it but Hamilton Red Wings have finally won a piece of third place in the Ontario Hockey Association's provincial Junior A group.

The Memorial Cup-defending champions have been the hottest team in the group for the last month, winning eight and tying three of their 17 starts, since the New Year.

The victims had been Peterborough Petes, who dropped a 4-2 decision at Hamilton Sunday and also allowed the Red draw level with them. The previous night the Wings lost a 3-2 squeaker to the Black Hawks at St. Catharines.

In St. Catharines Saturday, Black Hawks had a 3-0 edge after the first 20 minutes of play and Hamilton scored single goals in the second and third periods—both when they had a one-man advantage.

John Gofton and Paul Henderson got the Hamilton goals and Doug Jarrett, Jim O'Brien and Ken Hodge scored for the winners.

Henderson scored another goal Monday to give him second-league-leading total of 39.

Bryan Campbell led the winners with two goals and Henderson and John Savage got the other. Jim Pierson and Bryan Watson scored for Peterborough.

In Metro Junior A action Sunday in Toronto, Toronto Knob Hill downed Oshawa Generals 4-1 and Toronto Marlboros defeated Brampton 5-2.

Braves Have Scoring Sensation

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Louis Braves continue to go nowhere in the Eastern Professional Hockey League, but their scoring wonder, 24-year-old Alain Caron is collecting goals in bunches.

Caron scored eight times in two weekend games, both of which the last-place Braves lost. He scored all five goals in a 9-5 loss Saturday to Kingston Frontenacs and three more Sunday when his team lost 9-5 to Hull-Ottawa Canadiens.

Caron has 29 goals in 28 games and shares the goal-scoring lead with Sudbury Wolves' Marc Dufour who has scored his 29 goals in 46 games. Caron, a right winger from Dolbeau, Que., started the season with Greensboro, N.C., in the U.S. Eastern League.

Caron started out in professional hockey two years ago, scoring 12 goals and 15 assists in 15 games with Quebec Aces of the American League. The Aces farmed him out to Sault Ste. Marie of the EPHL, where he got seven goals in nine games.

He boasts one of the hardest shots in the circuit. Saturday, three of his five goals came on blistering slap shots past Kingston goalie Bruce Gamble.

GILBERT GETS FOUR

Jeannot Gilbert, the top point-getter in the league, had four goals for Kingston, giving him 27 for the season. John Paul Parise, Billy Knibbs, Red Ouellette, Dick Cherry and Ron Willy scored other Kingston goals.

Sunday at Hull, the Canadiens scored almost at will, Charlie Hamilton and Keith McCreary hitting two each and Billy Carter, Norm Beaudin, Bob Courcy, Doug Senior and Bill Inglis getting the others.

Campaigns Are Underway For Oscar Nominations

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The 2,325 Motion Picture Academy voters are fighting their way through the blandishments of hopeful nominees for the annual Oscar awards.

All this is supposed to be done with dignity. For the second year, the academy's governors issued this statement:

"The academy wishes to call to the attention of all potential nominees for achievements during 1962 the importance of maintaining a standard of dignity in any and all media of advertising . . .

"This policy, however, in the past years a few resorted to outright, excessive and vulgar solicitation of votes. This became a serious embarrassment to the academy and our industry. . . .

The governors felt constrained to act after the 160 campaign, an onslaught of vote-seeking such as hasn't been seen since the heyday of Tammany Hall.

This year daily Variety and Hollywood Reporter ran campaigns with about $250 a page —extolling the merits of pictures and performances.

STANDARD FORMULA

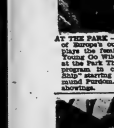
The formula for the ads is fairly standard. There is a large photograph of one of the most dramatic moment of the film, plus a quote that runs something like: "Performance by ... deserves an Oscar nomination for his performance in Drums Along the Los Angeles River—Field and Stream."

Never are so many critics quoted in search.

A glance over the trade papers tells you who are the spenders: the studios that have the advertised actors are not always responsible for the campaigns in their behalf. Often the ads are paid for by the producing company, which hopes to profit from the midas touch of Oscar.



Columbia is spending a bundle on its full-color insert ads for Lawrence of Arabia. Warners has a considerable full-scale campaign for Days of Wine and Roses and stars Jack Lemmon and Lee Remick. Fox is in there plugging for The Longest Day. The repeat treatment is being granted also for Long Day's Journey Into Night, Freud, and To Kill a Mockingbird. Considerable is also being sought for a dozen others.

With only five possible nominations, many will be bound to be disappointed.

Among the stars being touted are Jackie Gleason and Rosalind Russell, Shelly Winters and Burt Lancaster for Bobo Darin appears to have spent a few bob to promote himself for Pressure Point.

AT THE PARK — Heidi Brühl, one of Europe's outstanding actresses takes the leading role in "Young Go Wild", opening tonight at the Park Theatre. On the same program, Terence Stamp stars in "Billy Budd" and Sir Ronald Fenton. Both hits are first showings.

AT THE PARK — Appearing Friday and Saturday with Heidi Brühl in "Young Go Wild" at the Park Theatre, are Terence Stamp and Sir Ronald Fenton in "Billy Budd". Copenhagen is an attractive thriller opening tonight at the Park Theatre. On the same program with "Young Go Wild", starring Heidi Brühl. Both hits are first showings.

King of the Hill

Leo Labelle made another first this past week.

The rule in the contest states that if the King is high in the 5-game qualifying match he automatically retains his title and Labelle did just that.

He had 241-290-336-279-263 for a total of 1409.

His nearest competitor was a newcomer in the Duke of the Hill contest, Ted Aikins with 1270. Jack Canning had a 323 and Ron Saylor a 313.

The 8-in-a-row pot came close to being won twice last week. Cec Hinchcliffe had seven, missed the head pin on the eighth and came back with two more for a 323 game. Ted Aikins had six consecutive, left a corner pin in the seventh and struck the next one for 225.

BEAT YOUR AVERAGE

The new champ is Carolyn Cox, who finally took the measure of Madeline James. Madeline has been champ for most of the season, but fell down badly with a minus 21. Carolyn beat her average in the qualifying roll-off by 30, edging out John Ruttan and Eva Bellis who beat theirs by 21 and 30, respectively.

In the challenge match Carolyn improved her average by 28 per game.

Italians Win Sled Titles

IGLS, Austria (AP)—Italy's daredevil bobsledders have emerged as the 1964 Winter Olympics favorites after their trophy-sweeping triumphs in the world championships.

The Italians completed their conquest Sunday...by capturing first and second places in the four-man event. The Italians also finished one-two in the two-man championships last weekend.

Italy's No. 1 sled, piloted by Sergio Zardini, had a combined time of four minutes, 19.34 seconds for the four heats. The Italians' No. 2 sled was clocked in 4:20.56 with Angelo Frigerio the driver.

Sixteen teams from nine countries competed on the 1,500-metre course, built for the 1964 Winter Olympics.

Canada's No. 1 sled of Victor Emery, Douglas Anakin and David Hobart of Montreal and Peter Kirby of St. Jovite, Que., finished ninth in 4:24.37, just behind the two United States sleds. The second Canadian entry was 12th in 4:26.64.

Personnel Manager Resigns

Another Lark Leaves Nest

MONTREAL (CP)—J. I. Albrecht, personnel manager of the Montreal Alouettes Big Four football club, has joined Oakland Raiders of the American League.

Albrecht said Sunday night he has accepted a position as assistant to the head personnel manager and coach Al Davis.

Alouettes owner-president Ted Workman said Alouettes had granted Albrecht "tendered his resignation to me on the phone Saturday morning."

Workman added the Alouette board of directors met during the weekend and he informed the directors "about 10 applications" had been received for the head coaching post, including assistant coach Leo Cahill.

General manager and coach Perry Moss "resigned" Wednesday following differences with the club directors.

Workman said no formal application has been received from Hamilton Tiger-Cats coach Jim Trimble, said to have lost interest in the position after Alouettes decided to sep rate the coach-general manager positions.

Sweeps Quebec Spiel Playoffs Unbeaten

Kirkland Lake Rink Sets Record

By GEORGE FRAJKOR

QUEBEC (CP) — No one who played in the Quebec International Bonspiel will forget it for a long time, although a number of Quebec province curlers would probably like to.

The 50th anniversary of Eastern Canada's biggest bonspiel was celebrated fittingly by a record entry of 160 rinks and thoroughly dominated by a record rink skipped by one rink from Kirkland Lake.

Frank Rainford's entry from the Northern Ontario gold-mining area not only defeated eight more games than any other rink ever had and matched a trophy-winning performance of Ken Ross, who was credited with winning 12 games, although one of them was a replay ordered because the record entry created an unbalanced draw and gave Rainford the benefit of a bye in the first round.

WON MAXIMUM

Winning one of the three major trophy events, plus the bonspiel championship and the Grand Aggregate, is the most a rink can win.

The bonspiel's top prizes were dominated by Ontario and the Maritime provinces, who quite early eliminated rinks from the host province and relegated them to secondary rounds.

Rainford's victory in the finals of the playoffs was a tense 8-6 win over Jake Creighton of Dartmouth, N.S., who had Rainford tied 5-5 in the 10th end of the 12-end final. Rainford defeated Harold Frye of St. Thomas 10-8 in the semi-finals, in which Creighton ousted Kirkland Lake's Orval Archer 8-4.

Archer's rink was the only one with a possible chance to match Rainford in the Grand Aggregate and his loss to Creighton, his second loss of the bonspiel, ended his hopes.

Minor Hockey

Playoffs continued on the Minor Hockey front over the weekend with plenty of action in the Peewee, Bantam and Juvenile divisions.

PEEWEE

Quinte shaded the Black Hawks 4-3, led by Forbert with two goals. Hubbs and Janitch added the other goals, Brunet and Cobb getting assists. Royea scored twice and Pugh had a goal and assist for the Hawks. McCreary also got one assist.

Barons defeated the Macs 5-3 with Bedard and Cunningham each potting a pair of goals. Buchanan collected a goal and assist. Blatchford and Tulloch an assist apiece. All Mac goals were unassisted, two of them scored by C. Powell and one by L. Vrooman.

Browns edged the Canadiens 2-1 with Bonham and Phillips scoring the winners' goals. Keller and Rosette drew assists. Potts had the lone Canadiens marker.

Red Wings defeated the Maple Leafs 5-3 with two players accounting for all tiye goals. Brian James scored three, and assisted on the other two, while Rolston had two goals and one assist. Baruk earned two assists. Hains, Hutchinson and Ellis tried for the goals, Deveau, Love and Hayes drawing helpers.

Bruins pulled out a tight 2-1 decision over the Rangers on a pair of goals by S. Moore. J. Moore and Lucas assisted. Morrison scored for the Rangers, aided by Cresswell.

All games played in the three divisions were the first in five-game total goals-to-count series, with the second games slated for next weekend.

BANTAM

Red Wings edged the Macs 4-3 led by T. McDonald with a pair and two helpers and by C. Thompson with one of each. M. Ward and D. Prentice added a goal apiece. P. Bedard paced the Macs with a goal and assist while D. Muir and C. Thompson also scored. B. Gibbons drew one assist.

Quinte blanked the Canadiens 6-0 as H. Knott earning the shutout. F. Noble, R. Summers and P. Denyes scored a goal apiece. P. Bedard and Summers also drawing assists.

Browns and Leafs battled to a 2-2 deadlock. A. Bradley and B. LaRue got a goal and assist apiece for Bruins. H.' Wishart also scored and S. Thorne helped on one.

Black Hawks shaded the Barons in a 3-1 decision. S. Fuller and B. Long triggered the Hawk goals, G. Geen and S. Scott drawing assists. G. Cameron had the Barons' marker, helped by S. Lee.

JUVENILE

Area took a healthy lead in their series by shutting out the Comets 5-0. Goals were shared by Jim Hannah, Bob Hannah and B. Hallam. White drew two assists, Moore, McDowell and Riley one each.

Hornets outlasted the Tigers 7-4 in a free-scoring affair. J. Bedard and Bill Lancaster each tied two goals apiece for the winners with. B. Goodfellow, R. Leonard and Bonnell collecting the others. C. Boomhower and Goodfellow each drew three assists, Bennett, Jones, Boomhower and Denard one apiece.

Rathbuns led the Tigers with two goals while G. McMillan had a goal and two assists. Tomko also scored while F. Purcell claimed three assists, Harvey and G. Wood one apiece.

One Nice Thing About TV, Can Turn off Bullfights

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—For a short time Saturday a program called Sports International showed a Spanish bullfight in glorious living color on my television set.

NBC's Red Palmer explained calmly that, whether you like it or not, bullfighting is a national spectacle—not a sport—of Spain. Later some graceful fellows in tight pants and pigtais proceeded to stick darts in the bull, all vividly shown in blood red by the television cameras. That is when this reporter turned the dial.

I will defend to the death NBC's right to show a program about a bullfight—cruelty, blood and all. But that's one of the nice things about television: If you don't like what you are watching, you can turn to something else or even turn off the set.

Just as My Fair Lady on Broadway succeeded a musical of popular interest in George Bernard Shaw (whose Pygmalion will be the Saturday night's NBC drama special) so has the Broadway musical hit, Oliver!, based on Oliver Twist, triggered a revival of interest in Charles Dickens.

CBS will do an hour on Feb. 13 called A Dickens Chronicle, dramatizing the Victorian writer's life and works.

AT THE BELLE — Joan Crawford and Bette Davis appear together for the first time in "What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?" now at the Belle Theatre. Also featured are Victor Buono and Anna Lee. Both are Academy Award winners play acting films caught up in web of terror and jealousy.

Soccer Cup Draw Again Postponed

LONDON (CP)—The English soccer cup draw for the fifth round was put off once again today because of the flood of postponements brought about by England's icy weather.

The first postponement came last Monday. Today came yet another. Postponement of the draw had never before been known in the 92 years of cup competition.

Nineteen third - round cup matches still must be played. Only two clubs—Leeds and Leicester—are through to the fifth round.

Only two of the 16 English League and cup matches arranged for today still were due to be played.

On Saturday the full scheduie of the first and second divisions of the English league was wiped out by the ice and snow. Two games were played in the third division and two in the fourth.

For the second week in a row, a set of experts picked a set of imaginary results for Britain's soccer pool. The panel, named the betting pools, picked 10 ties, 34 home wins and 10 away wins.

(The Canadian Press Saturday reported the choices in the pools were unanimously. The experts called a victory for Blackburn at Tottenham, Ipswich at Liverpool, Leyton Orient at Burnley, Nottingham Forest at Wolverhampton, Luton at Sunderland, Carlisle at Wrexham, Falkirk at Dundee, Raith at Hibernian, Arbroath at East Stirling and Forfar at Stirling.)

Minnow Parasite That Kills Game Fish

By JOE DUPUIS

MONTREAL (CP)—Dr. Gustave Prevost is a 54-year-old biologist who doesn't fish himself, but who has been trying to help Quebec's 40,000 anglers for years by campaigning against the use of minnows as live bait.

The minnow is a carrier and spawner of parasites that kill game fish. Minnows have been known to wipe out game fish in entire waterway systems. They get into "clean" lakes many ways, but mostly through fishermen using them as bait.

A couple of live minnows escaping into a lake from a fisherman's bait pail is all that's needed to start the process of mass infestation, says Dr. Prevost.

An authority on fish preservation and lake rehabilitation, he joined the Quebec water pollution board last year as chairman, after 30 years of field work as a government biologist dealing with the minnow problem.

LONG EXPERIENCE

Dr. Prevost was director of the Quebec biological board for many years, and formerly director of biology for the University of Montreal.

Although no longer directly concerned with the problem, he says he has retained the interest "of an ordinary citizen" in the minnow menace and plans to continue his campaign to educate fishermen about this real threat."

He campaigns for a "sanitary cordon" of live minnow traffic that are already affected, encircling minnow-infested waters to limit the damaged area and restrict movement of disease carriers.

"Any fish hatchery of a town beset by an epidemic allowed to roam abroad as it would their germs? Of course not," he says. "The healthy are protected by restricting the freedom of the sick."

In lakes around Montreal minnows have so many parasites they cause serious losses in fish food to muskies the government raises at laboratories in suburban Lachine. They would kill the muskies.

SEEKS TOTAL BAN

Dr. Prevost says Quebec should impose a ban on sale of minnows without a special permit, but he would not ban with it no strings attached — a ban such as those imposed in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

His worst fears are for virgin waters such as Lake Mistassini in northern Quebec, accessible only by air. Of 21 prize trout in a recent provincial fishing contest 14 came from Assinica, one weighing more than 10 pounds.

Now, if fish in Mistassini from everywhere are conveying on this district," says Dr. Prevost, "every outfitter in the area told him that each trout caught was worth about $10 to him.

"What will happen if there is no control," Dr. Prevost asks. "Inevitably the fish will go some when a small pallful of minnows will be overturned by mischance, and then into the lake by ignorance. The whole district will be ruined because the damages . . . will extend to the whole chain of lakes.

"Now try to figure out the cost to the province of that miserable pallful of minnows."

LOVES OUTDOORS

Dr. Prevost is a rugged outdoors man—he goes skiing three times a week in winter — who carried his own urge to fish by taking up scuba diving.

Underwater, he can follow the fish in their own environment, observe and photograph them and even pick them up.

"There are biologists who fish, I suppose. But I learned early that it's the worst thing that can happen to a biologist. We would just never get any work done."

He says his love of the outdoors comes naturally. A native of Montreal, his family came from St. Jerome in the majestic country north of here.

The St. Jerome Prevosts were known as "lions of the north." Dr. Prevost chuckled, "and I have to live up to that."

Indians Win Pair Over Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

When Eddie Shore was an all-star defenceman with Boston Bruins in the 30s, he treated all forwards with supreme contempt.

So it must have been Shore, now president of Springfield Indians, who hit on the formula that lolled his American Hockey League defending champions out of an 11-game winless streak. The solution: Take three of your best defencemen and throw them together on a forward line.

In two tries, the newly-aligned trio of Bob McCord, Bill White and Ted Harris accounted for four goals. Shore's chastened and full-time forwards provided a hatful more and the Indians skated off with a 9-4 victory over Buffalo Bisons Saturday night and a 9-3 triumph over Pittsburgh Hornets Sunday.

The double victory boosted the Indians past Baltimore Clippers, to fourth place. Baltimore, Saturday, into fourth place in the AHL's Eastern Division and left them within striking distance of a playoff spot, six points behind Providence Reds and Hershey Bears, co-holders of second place.

BEARS SPLIT

The Bears split a home-and-home series with Rochester Americans, winning 6-2 Saturday night before 10,000 fans. The Reds were beaten 5-2 at home Sunday by the resurgent Cleveland Barons, who climbed to Quebec Aces 5-0 the previous night. Quebec and Buffalo played to a 3-3 tie Sunday in the remaining AHL game.

McCord, White and Harris had a good night in the Indians' conquest of Pittsburgh, Springfield's other marksmen were Brian Kilrea with two, Gerry Anderson, Wayne Larkin, Dave Amadio and Bobby Ash. Goalie Larry Jeffrey fired two for the losers, whose third goal came from Howie Menard.

But 9,000 of the faithful just in stunned silence at Portland 24 hours later as the Totems turned around and clobbered the Buckaroos 7-1. It was the worst shellacking the Bucks had taken at home in three years.

On other fronts, Los Angeles Blades nipped Spokane Flyers 1-0 in overtime and San Francisco Seals edged Calgary Stampeders 4-3.

Gerry Leonard, Bob Barlow and Bob Sabourin contributed two goals apiece as Seattle's Saturday night while vet-eran Gayle Fielder completed the total. From Saturday was the lone Portland marksman.

Farms, Forests and Gardens Will Use 33 Millions Worth Of Pesticides This Year

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — This year Canadian farmers, foresters and backyard gardeners will spray or dust at least $33,000,000 worth of chemical pesticides over orchards, field crops, lawns, pastures and trees.

The tons of poisonous chemicals will kill billions of weeds, grasshoppers, aphids, cutworms and a host of other insect pests, protecting more than 2,500,000,000 worth of agricultural production.

They also will kill some beneficial insects, birds and wildlife. Some of the chemicals will be eaten on food and find their way into human bodies.

A year ago there was little or no public concern about the situation. Today a controversy is erupting, triggered by the publication of reports—almost all from the United States—about the dangers these chemicals pose to man and animals. Notable among them is Rachel Carson's best - selling Silent Spring.

One of the men most involved in this public furor is Dr. Harry Hurtig, an associate director in the federal agriculture department's research sector here, whose special field is pesticides.

SEES NO DANGER

He argues that federal controls in Canada have reduced the hazards of pesticide poisons to a level so low there is no chance of a public health crisis.

"There is a constant watch on this problem," he said in an interview. "The safety factors are so great that, if anything, we might be accused of being too cautious."

DDT has been used in Canada for more than 15 years and today almost everyone has some in his body. But recent tests of about 60 samples of body fat, collected in biopsies across the country, showed levels far below long-term harmful results on rats, mice, dogs or other sensitive test animals.

"Most important, all these limits are set on the assumption that the chemical will be used universally," he added.

As an illustration, he cited the case of a pesticide accepted as a control agent for cabbage insects in certain eastern regions. The "speed limit" was set on the effect which the chemical would have if used on every head of cabbage consumed annually in Canada, including imports.

MAY DESTROY FOOD

"The chances of getting above the safety limit are so remote that they can hardly be considered," he contends.

The agriculture department and the federal Food and Drug Directorate, which enforces food laws, work together in this field.

Sometimes the intake limit is set at zero. This means the Food and Drug Directorate may seize or destroy any food supplies which have absorbed such chemicals.

Dr. Hurtig remarks that the use of pesticides in Canada is on a much smaller scale than in the United States, particularly the southern states where food crops are grown the year round.

"We have a colder climate and a much shorter growing season. There are fewer types of crops and insects."

Although most of the pest-killing chemicals are imported from the U.S., Canadians use them in weaker solutions than Americans.

One of the most recent Canadian pesticide problems cropped up last year on the Prairies. It concerned dieldrin, a highly effective agent against the grasshopper outbreaks which grew serious in some regions in 1961.

SEEK SUBSTITUTES

In past years dieldrin was used to kill grasshoppers on cereal crops. The chemical is one of the chlorinated hydrocarbon family which can in time build up to poisonous levels in the human body. It is eliminated, however, through the cereal milling process.

During 1962 the grasshopper outbreaks moved into some cattle areas and dieldrin followed. Federal and provincial researchers later began discovering tiny amounts of dieldrin in milk and beef fat. Federal food laws on milk are so strict that no chlorinated hydrocarbons are tolerated.

This year a severe grasshopper outbreak is expected in the major cattle regions which straddles the Saskatchewan - Manitoba border. But dieldrin won't be there unless farmers defy the latest recommendations of federal and provincial officials.

Since 1959 the agriculture department has been doing research on a replacement for dieldrin and has licensed three substitutes for this year's grasshopper spraying program. They are known as Sevin, Malathion and Dimethoate. They will kill grasshoppers on forage growth but are eliminated naturally by the animals which eat the forage.

EXPEC SUBSIDIES

One problem in getting the switch from dieldrin carried out is cost. Dieldrin costs under 20 cents an acre, the others at $1.60. Federal laws cannot force a farmer to use one type of chemical over another; they only give authority to keep food stuffs off the market if they contain illegal amounts of chemicals.

But it's expected that provincial subsidies will be taken off dieldrin and used to lower the prices of the preferred chemicals. Then increased use will follow, Dr. Hurtig says.

Eventually, Ottawa officials hope to license a better, safer control agent than DDT or dieldrin. The three now licensed are considered temporary remedies.

"But they will answer the problem for the short term," Dr. Hurtig adds. "The provinces and our department will be out of the grasshopper field this before the season starts."

The entire pesticides issue will be discussed at a conference in Ottawa Feb. 11, 12 and 13 of the National Committee on Pesticides in Agriculture, headed by Dr. Hurtig and attended by representatives of federal and provincial agricultural departments, universities and the chemical industry.

HARNESS NATURE

Despite high safety levels, federal scientists are constantly evaluating such new chemicals to find ones that can do the same job but have greater safety tolerances. This research already has eliminated many pesticides that had high toxic effects on animals and humans, Dr. Hurtig says.

Another research field is biological control. This involves the introduction of parasites, predators and natural diseases to control harmful species of insects. A force of nearly 100 specialists is studying biological control problems at a federal centre in Belleville, Ont.

"Some people assume that biological control should replace pesticides," Dr. Hurtig says. But it did not appear possible without some major breakthrough in biological control, something not even in prospect.

"Without chemicals our agriculture industry just could not exist at today's levels. Several of our major crops would be practically eliminated and some foods would vanish from the fruit and vegetable counters."

Dr. Hurtig contrasted today's pesticides with those used before the Second World War. The old sprays leaned heavily on mercury, lead, arsenic and nicotine sulphate, far deadlier poisons than those the modern chemicals contain.

APPLE MARKET HIT

"During the 1930s Canada almost lost its markets for apples and tobacco because of arsenic which accumulated on the produce."

Referring to the concern over pesticides killing birds and wildlife, Dr. Hurtig said there have been no major problems in Canada, at least in the agriculture field.

Not long ago a high mortality rate among woodcock in New Brunswick was blamed on the use of hexachlor to kill maggots attacking root crops. The chemical was found in dead birds. But investigations showed that hexachlor had been practically abandoned in the province, at federal urging, in favor of less toxic compounds.

"It turned out that the woodcock had picked up the hexachlor during their winter migration in the southern states," Dr. Hurtig explained. The chemical is used extensively in Louisiana.

BLAMES GARDENERS

He admits that some deaths of birds and other wildlife have been traced to farm use of pesticides. But he says it is ridiculous to suggest that chemicals are threatening to wipe out some species, as Miss Carson's book does.

"Five per cent of the land area in Canada is devoted to agriculture. That leaves 95 per cent for wildlife. It just isn't reasonable to suppose that a species can be wiped out."

Dr. Hurtig thinks the most serious areas for concern is in the home garden. Some amateurs ignored warnings on pesticide container labels.

"A spray designed to kill aphids on roses isn't meant for use on tomatoes. You'll find that warning right on the can. Some gardeners go right ahead and spray poison on their tomatoes anyhow just to save buying something else."

A farmer won't do the same thing, he insists, because the farmer is concerned for the reputation of his produce. He could be ruined commercially if inspectors found illegal chemicals on his tomatoes.

Scoharie

SCOHARIE — The annual congregational supper at Bloomfield United Church was held in the Sunday School rooms on Tuesday evening with a good attendance in spite of stormy weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Loewen and small son, of Picton, were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Simpson and Larry.

Mrs. Wilfred Simpson and Larry spent a day last week in Belleville with Mrs. Dale Armstrong.

Mrs. Rosa Foster and baby son returned home from the hospital on Monday afternoon.

A flock of blue jays visit the feeder most days. It is interesting to watch them pick up a sunflower seed or a kernel of corn, hold it with their feet and hull it. They also like squash seeds and suet. Wish the chickadees and nuthatches would come for the suet hung in the tree for them. Saw some last year.

Due to the stormy weather most folks stayed at home this past week. Party telephone lines were so busy it was hard to collect more news items. Many Belleville residents would find it hard to believe the amount of snow there is in central Prince Edward and southward.

A nice letter was received today from an Oriole neighbor of the Hearthstone Circle of the Farmer's Advocate, whose administrator was also at the picnic at Rice Lake last summer. It was doubly appreciated as she hadn't been well and had to send it to Janet Jean to forward as "Scoharie" was double postage on it, when through illness and accident she has received the envelope twice before spending. Janet also sent a note. It is pleasant to meet and make new friends as the years pass, many of the old friends have slipped away, never to return. The old ones cannot be replaced, but new ones are nice also and make life more interesting on the last half of the journey through life.

Science at Work

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics this week: Whale sounds, Russia's Mars probe and the fever of a volcano.

UNDERWATER GOSSIP

W. E. Schevill of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts is pursuing an unusual scientific research—recording the sounds made by whales. He now has a phonograph record of about 50 different species.

The underwater sounds made by various types of marine life drew attention during the Second World War when scientists were devising equipment to detect enemy ships. Schevill later decided to learn who was "talking" down there, and launched his whale study.

Back in the days of whaling ships, when there was no racket from machinery, ship captains knew of this underwater gossiping, he writes in the institution's publication, Oceanus. One British captain in the 19th century, sitting in his cabin in a becalmed ship, heard such noises he thought the crew had broken into the rum supply, but was actually hearing white whales shouting under his quiet ship, Schevill says.

MARS SPY

Russia's space probe heading toward Mars is almost halfway along its stupendous journey, and is reporting on cosmic rays originating somewhere in the Milky Way, says the Soviet news agency, Tass. No details were given.

On its long trip, the Mars-1 station, as the Soviets have named it, will approach the so-called belt of asteroids or tiny planets, believed to be the remnants of a planet destroyed in collision with another planet or other object.

Some meteorites falling upon earth are believed to come from this belt, directed earthward by collisions between asteroids.

VOLCANO FEVER

The Hawaiian volcano Kilauea is showing new signs of restlessness, and its fever is being analyzed in a new way by research engineers of the University of Michigan's Institute of Science and Technology.

They are making daily flights over the volcano to measure heat differences under the surface with infra-red or heat - measuring instruments provided by the U.S. Army.

ONTARIO BUDGET TO BE BROUGHT DOWN THURSDAY

Premier Robarts Makes Statement

TORONTO (CP)—A draft bill on medical health insurance and the report of a royal commission on crime are likely to provide the hottest debates in the session of the Ontario legislature which resumes today.

Members returning from an extended Christmas recess are braced for a spurt of activity that, according to growing speculation, will precede a provincial general election.

Premier Robarts added fuel to the speculative fires by announcing that the province's budget will be tabled Thursday the earliest since 1944.

Much of the legislation forecast in the Speech from the Throne last Nov. 29 was cleared up before Christmas, as was the usually-prolonged debate on the legislative address. A quick election if the premier so decides.

PENSION BILL PENDING

Among items likely to the fall session left in abeyance are a final bill on portable pensions, which has already been aired in two earlier draft bills: creation of an Ontario arts council and a guarantee of fair wages on all government highway and building contracts.

But heading the list is the question of medical care insurance.

The government announced last fall that it planned a draft bill—to be studied by a special committee and perhaps put into effect next year—on such insurance, based on coverage through private insurance firms backed by government protection for those unable to care for themselves.

Both the Liberal opposition and the New Democratic Party have come forward with programs of their own, the Liberals recently adopting a combined private - government approach and the NDP opting for a government-run plan similar to Saskatchewan's.

Also expected shortly is a report from Mr. Justice Wilfrid D. Roach on his lengthy inquiry into organized crime in the province. Since Liberal leader John Wintermeyer pressed the government for such a probe a year ago into making an inquiry and since several politicians testified or were named at the inquiry, the report when it comes may provide ample scope for debate.

The government resumes the session with 66 members in the 98-seat house, 39 Liberals have 24, the NDP five and there are three vacancies.

Harkness Says P. M. Not Expert on Nuclear Arms

OTTAWA (CP)—Former defence minister Harkness said in a broadcast interview Monday night he believes the great majority of Conservative party members support his pro-nuclear weapons stand and that Prime Minister Diefenbaker "is not an expert in these matters."

Mr. Harkness, interviewed on a CBC television press conference, said he believed a week ago and last Thursday that Prime Minister Diefenbaker's statements in the House of Commons meant he had come around to Mr. Harkness' view that nuclear warheads should be obtained for Canadian NATO and NORAD forces.

"I took it he had accepted my position. . . . I found that was not really the case. I discovered definitely that his views and mine were as far apart as ever."

Mr. Harkness, who handed in his resignation Sunday and announced it Monday, was asked if he intends to lead a caucus rebellion on the issue, but said what goes on in caucus is secret and he would not discuss it in public.

Sparing Fat On Patties Brings Death

LONDON (Reuters) — A court in Sverdlovsk has sentenced two restaurant men to be shot for skimping on fat in the frying of meat patties and pocketing money saved.

Moscow radio said today the two men were the director of the government body of a restaurant at Sverdlovsk, 850 miles east of Moscow, and the manager.

It said the director invented an automatic fryer which cut the amount of fat needed for each patty below the amount specified in the regulations.

The saving was shared out among the director and 55 accomplices, the radio said. The inventor pocketed 400 rubles (about $440) a month.

Other accomplices received prison sentences ranging up to 15 years.

Band of South African Negroes Stabs 5 White Campers to Death

ENGCOBO, South Africa (Reuters)—Five white campers, including a married couple and their two daughters, were stabbed to death by a band of raiding Negroes 20 miles from here early today.

The survivor, Douglas Bridger, said the victims were camped for the night in trailers when the attack occurred.

He said the trailers were set on fire and as the sleepy occupants stumbled out they were backed to death.

He identified the victims as Norman Stewart, a farmer; his wife, Natalie, and two daughters, Edna, 14, and Dawn, 12, and a young man named Thompson.

Police also investigated the attack said the victims were stabbed with "sharp instruments" and the bodies had been mutilated.

Engcobo is in the Transkei section of South Africa, a huge rolling reserve in the southeast which is earmarked as the republic's first native state.

The South African government has promised the Transkei "independence" and elections may be held this year to choose a Negro government.

The chief of the 250,000-strong Tembu tribe, Dalindyebo Sabata, is strongly opposed to the proposal and has called for a multi-racial society instead. The statement has produced considerable friction in the area.

Tshombe Leaving Katanga, Pleased 'My Work Ended'

CP from AP-Reuters

ELISABETHVILLE — President Moise Tshombe announced today he is leaving Katanga for Rhodesia to be treated for eye trouble.

Tshombe said he will leave Wednesday. He could not specify how long he will be away. "The doctors will decide that," he said a press conference.

Tshombe said his eye trouble had gradually become worse since 1947. The president wore dark glasses behind which his eyes were watering slightly. He seemed tired.

Last August, and in October, 1961, he was treated in Switzerland for heart trouble.

Tshombe said he would rest for several days on a farm in Rhodesia and then might go to Europe if his doctors advised the trip.

Tshombe said his Katangan government now had "totally implemented" UN Secretary-general U Thant's plan for reunification of The Congo.

"It is now up to the three governments who guaranteed the application and who are responsible to the world to see that the other side will also implement the plan," he said, adding "so far the implementation has been unilateral."

He pleased to have ended my work and have done my duty although I have been suffering from ill - health," Tshombe said. "I did not want to abandon my people before I was certain that the U Thant plan was implemented."

The police force of Katanga today was formally taken over by Joseph Ileo, resident minister in Katanga, on behalf of the Congolese central government.

Congolese money was issued for the first time in Katanga today and small groups of Katangans stood outside banks and post offices examining the new bills.

Katangan Gen. Norbert Muke arrived by air in the central capital of Leopoldville with 24 of his gendarmerie officers from Elisabethville Monday night to take the oath of allegiance to Congo President Joseph Kasavubu. The date for the ceremony has not yet been announced.

Ileo expressed hope that Katanga's once-thriving economy would be on its feet within three months.

No Surface Missiles in Cuba Threatening U. S. Says Chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defence Secretary McNamara says "there are undoubtedly missiles in Cuba" but not of the type that would menace the United States.

"Based on the information available to me," he said, "I believe there are no surface missiles in Cuba threatening this country today."

Thus McNamara put his views on the record in an exclusive interview with The Associated Press as a congressional source said the Soviet military strength on the island 90 miles from the American coast.

One issue of the controversy is just how many Soviet troops are in Cuba. President Kennedy has estimated 17,000. Some legislators have expressed belief there are many more.

McNamara, however, would not be drawn into that question.

But he said that one reason for the maze of persistent reports on ballistics missiles in Cuba may be confusion over the various kinds of missiles that are there.

Of this latter category, McNamara ticked off five kinds:

"1. Air defence missiles.

"2. Anti-ship missiles carried by fighters to attack other fighters.

"3. Surface - to - sea missiles used for coastal defence purposes.

"4. Missiles for coastal defence purposes fired from patrol-type boats.

"5. Ground - to - ground missiles for short range use against

Inquiry Hears of Company, SIU Doing Business by Mail

OTTAWA (CP) — Shipowners' Federation Chairman Howard Hindman and Canada Steamship Lines Union chief Hal C. Banks conduct their labor relations by mail.

The 46-year-old president of Hindman Transportation Company of Owen Sound said Monday the Seafarers' International Union of Canada mails him the contract for his sailors and engineers and he signs it and mails it back.

"It has been our policy over a number of years that when the lawyers and businessmen sign their contracts, we sign the same contract," Mr. Hindman testified before Mr. Justice T. G. Norris' one-man investigation of waterfront labor strife on the Great Lakes.

"Have you ever sat down with the SIU and fought out a contract?" asks Charles Gavsie, lawyer for the federal inquiry commission.

"No," said Mr. Hindman.

He said the SIU sent him a contract by mail a few years ago for the engineers on his ships—part of which was tied too, even though he already had an agreement with the rival National Association of Marine Engineers.

He said he felt the NAME was on its way out, so he agreed to the SIU as bargaining agent, without any reference to the engineers or to the Canada Labor Relations Board.

Mr. Hindman said his company has enjoyed labor peace since the SIU came to Canada in 1949—no strikes, no wildcat

Says Native Indians Have Slim Diet

KIRKLAND LAKE (CP) — A veteran Anglican missionary says the native Indians in northern Manitoba often live on a diet of tea, bannock and lard and that's why they have poor teeth.

"We find an average of one tooth from to death in the snow," Rev. W. O. Straw told Kiwanis Club members Monday. Mr. Straw, who has been at Norway House, Man., for 31½ years, is visiting in Kirkland Lake.

He termed the conditions among Swampy Cree indians in northern Manitoba a "scar on the nation."

But he denied recent reports that the Indians there were starving. He and the 80 other white residents of Norway House, among a population of 2,000 had been astounded to learn that food and other necessities were being collected and rushed to northern Manitoba for the Indians.

Parliament At a Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tuesday, Feb. 4, 1963

Douglas Harkness announced his resignation as defence minister because "the prime ministers views on nuclear arms and my own are irreconcilable.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said he found the resignation "difficult to understand in view of the former ministers Commons speech last Thursday.

Opposition Leader Pearson moved a motion of non-confidence in the government claiming a lack of leadership and a breakdown of cabinet unity.

Robert Thompson, Social Credit Leader, also moved a non-confidence motion, citing government failure to "give a clear statement of policy on national defence.

Mr. Diefenbaker announced the appointments of Robertson G. MacNeill as chairman of the Civil Service Commission and Dr. Bristow Guy Ballard as president of the National Research Council.

David Lewis (NDP — York South) criticized liberal and conservative defence policies but did not indicate how the NDP will vote on non-confidence.

Kennedy Urges Program to Aid Mentally Ill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy today urged "bold new" programs he said could reduce the hard hospitals of thousands of mental patients from U.S. hospital beds and lighten the tragic toll of mental retardation.

The cost for the first year would be $31,350,000, but it might cost many millions more when the programs accelerate.

His proposals were in a special message to Congress on mental illness—the first such message sent to Capital Hill by a president.

They are designed for an across-the - board legislative program for:

New community mental health centres, the centrepiece for bringing the mentally ill back into useful life, and preventing new cases earlier;

More pre - natal care for mothers-to be to help ensure their infants will not be doomed to mental retardation;

More trained personnel and teet and treat threatened cases earlier;

More trained personnal and facilities for training and rehabilitation of the mentally ill and retarded;

More research centres to get at the causes and, hopefully, the cures.

STATE SECTY. RUSK CLEARED OF BUNGLING

U.S. Calls on P.M. To Clarify Position

WASHINGTON (CP)—A Senate subcommittee has cleared State Secretary Rusk of charges of bungling because of his departments criticism of Canadian nuclear policy and the chairman has called on Prime Minister Diefenbaker to clarify his own position.

Senator George Aiken, Vermont Republican, said Diefenbaker's policy appears to require clarification in view of findings by the U.S. government that nuclear weapons are essential for the defence of North America and the NATO alliance.

Aiken, heading a 90-minute secret hearing by his foreign relations subcommittee Monday, told reporters later the States doesn't want to meddle in Canadian political affairs but that Diefenbaker appeared to have provoked the departments public reaction by disclosing confidential information at a meeting of the Canadian Parliament Jan. 25.

Aiken said that time the Prime Minister stated the two governments were engaged "forcibly in negotiating for Canadian acquisition of U.S. nuclear warheads. The state department denied this Jan. 30, saying the negotiations had been confidential, exploratory and inconclusive and that Diefenbaker's government hadn't contributed effectively to North American defence.

QUESTIONS METHOD

Aiken said he still is at a loss to know why the state department resorted to a public statement to make his view known, instead of employing normal confidential channels. But Rusk, who testified before the subcommittee, took full responsibility for the method employed, Aiken said.

"I am sure the secretary of state meant no offence to Canada," the Vermonter said, "but I think we should tell our friends to come out—when it comes up at 8:15 p.m. EST tonight.

Non-Confidence Motions Ready For Presentation

Linked With Issue Of Nuclear Weapons

* * *

OTTAWA (CP) — The embattled minority government of Prime Minister Diefenbaker faces its stiffest test tonight in a Commons decidedly more hostile than at any time since the session began.

Whether this hostility will be translated into hostile votes when the House divides on a question on which the life of Canada's 25th Parliament hangs precariously.

Facing the government are two non-confidence motions proposed Monday by the Liberal and Social Credit parties at the start of a two-day supply debate.

Both allege indecision on the part of the government and are directly linked with the raging controversy over nuclear weapons, though their terms go beyond it.

This controversy took a dramatic new turn Monday with the resignation of Douglas Harkness, chief exponent in the cabinet of equipping Canada's armed forces with nuclear weapons, from the defence ministry.

GIVES LENGTHY SPEECH

The Liberal motion, moved by Opposition Leader Pearson at the end of an hour-and-40-minute address in which he said the Canadian people should be given the chance to choose a better administration, reads:

"This government, because of lack of leadership, the breakdown of unity in the cabinet, and confusion and indecision in dealing with national and international problems, does not have the confidence of the Canadian people."

The Social Credit motion, technically an amendment to that of the Liberals, says the government has "failed up to this time to give a clear statement of policy respecting Canada's national defence."

It further charges the government with failure to organize the business of the Commons in such a way as to permit introduction of 1963-64 budget and spending estimates, and failure to outline a comprehensive plan of follow-up action respecting many things for which this Parliament has previously by-laments have already given authority."

There appeared to be every chance that the Liberals will encourage the Tories to be voted on—when it comes up at

Hees Denies Ministers Want P.M. to Quit

OTTAWA (CP) — Speculation on Canada's political crisis took a new turn today with reports that eight cabinet ministers would have a private conference today with the intention of seeking Prime Minister Diefenbaker's resignation.

The story, widely originated with usually well-informed political sources, was that the ministers would seek a meeting with the prime minister after the conference and ask him to poll the full cabinet on the idea.

After the conference, held in Trade - Minister Hees' parliamentary office, Mr. Hees was asked whether the leadership of Mr. Diefenbaker is threatened.

"Certainly not," he replied.

He said the meeting was held to discuss the "pretty serious situation" faced by the government in the Commons.

That's a pretty good topic of conversation for any government," Mr. Hees said.

DENIES REPORTS

He said there was "absolutely no truth" in reports that some cabinet ministers were trying to unseat Mr. Diefenbaker.

An informed source said the ministers included Mr. Hees, Finance Minister Nowlan, Transport Minister Balcer, Revenue Minister Hugh John Flemming, Justice Minister Fleming, Senator Wallace McCutcheon, Mines Minister Martineau and Acting Defence Minister Sevigny.

Mr. Nowlan was mentioned as a possible replacement for Mr. Diefenbaker as prime minister pending a party leadership convention.

NDP Will Vote Against Govt.

OTTAWA (CP)—New Democratic Party Leader Douglas announced after a caucus today of the 19-member group in the Commons that they would vote against the government on both non-confidence motions before the House.

The votes are to begin in the Commons not later than 8:15 p.m. EST tonight.

Mr. Douglas' announcement meant that the three opposition parties will unite against the government.

Spanish Officials Shying Away From Talks on Renewing U.S. Pact

MADRID (AP) — Reliable informants here indicated today the States is having difficulty getting negotiations started for renewal of a U.S.-Spanish aid-for-bases pact expiring in September.

These sources said there has been trouble in arranging desire meetings with Spanish officials for Roswell L. Gilpatrick, U.S. deputy secretary of defence, on a two-day active from 14 for a four-day visit to kick off the defence treaty talks.

The U.S. government among observers here that Gilpatrick may postpone or cancel his visit unless the Spanish officials become more co-operative.

The reported difficulties in arrangements for Gilpatrick contrasted sharply with official Spanish statements that Gen. Francisco Franco's government is anxious to renegotiate the defence pact "without asking for a new noon and on the basis of a firmer friendship with the United States."

Gilpatrick's meeting has been the official visit here of the French chief of staff, Gen. Charles Ailleret.

The Spanish press prominently published reports from political correspondents in Paris that the French general:

1. May be bringing help to get Spain into NATO.

2. May be arranging a close military collaboration with France's armed forces, and

3. May be planning a series of joint manoeuvres on the Pyrenees mountain frontier.

A high Spanish official declared last week that Spain has no intention of joining de Gaulle's campaign to restrict U.S. and British influence on the continent.

Fire Chief Orders Building Sealed Off After Blaze on Victoria Ave. Early Today

Fire Chief Gerald Vance early today ordered a Victoria Avenue barbershop-cum-apartment building sealed off while his officers made a full investigation of an upper-storey fire.

The fire last night was caught by firefighters in his early stages as it burned through an upstairs apartment at 18 Victoria Avenue.

The fire chief ordered the building closed off after his men put down a blaze that broke out 12 minutes after midnight.

The fire was centred in the upper floor apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Speros Kristos. The building's ground floor housed a barbershop and a large rear apartment rented by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brown. In the Brown's apartment as tenants were Mrs. Brown's son Russell Summerville, and Russ Van Slyke.

Smoke and water damage was caused to the ground-floor apartment and barbershop.

Mr. and Mrs. Kristos and their two young sons were out-of-town at the time of the out-break. They were reported to be either in Montreal or Ottawa. Mr. Kristos is a chef at a Front Street restaurant — the Cozy Grill.

The blaze was centred in their apartment, badly damaged—but not gutted, by the fire.

The alarm was turned in at 12:12 a.m. simultaneously by four passersby.

CLIMBED PORCH

Within minutes fire - reels from two city stations were at the scene.

Firefighters climbed a porch overhang on the building and smashed windows in the Kristos' apartment with their helmets to get at the blaze as quickly as possible.

Moments later the fire chief himself arrived on the scene. He entered the building and shortly after called for two fire captains to join him at once.

Afterwards, he was non-committal to reporters.

"I am closing off the entire building," he said, "and have ordered a full-scale investigation into the cause of the fire."

Calvary Temple Host Church to Large Assembly

The mid-winter convention of the Eastern and Quebec district of the Canadian Assemblies opened Monday night at Calvary Temple with a large attendance that included delegates from the Maritimes and various points of the United States.

Speaker for the opening rally was the Rev. A. S. Bursey general superintendent of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Newfoundland. Mr. Bursey who is a close friend of Premier Joseph Smallwood, has a consistency of one hundred and twenty churches, as well as fifty-two day schools with an enrollment of four thousand pupils.

"In this so-called space age," said Mr. Bursey, "people are planning travel to the moon, Mars and Jupiter. I don't know much about space travel, or whether there is life on any of these planets, but I do know that Jesus Christ, the God-man, left His footprint on the shores of Galilee and that His cross of sacrifice was planted on this earth for my redemption. Because of that I'm going farther than the moon one of these days.

"Some people say we are too noisy, we get too excited and don't act reverent. God help the Pentecostal church when we always act natural. Isn't salvation something to get excited about, when a soul passes from death unto life? The Bible tells us that there is more heaven rejoice over one sinner that repents and comes to God. If the Lord gets excited about us can I, and I have a better right because angels cannot experience the wonder and joy of redemption."

Mr. Bursey decried the social gospel as a substitute for the Gospel of the grace of God that transforms and saves the soul. "If isn't new clothes we need but a man," declared the speaker. "It's a new man in the clothes."

The Rev. Gordon Cresswell of Belleville, district superintendent for Eastern Ontario and Quebec is in charge of the convention, which continues until Friday night. There are morning and afternoon services in addition to the evening services. On Wednesday morning at 10.30 his wife, Mary M. McLean Haig, will bring greetings to the delegates from the City of Belleville.

During the morning and afternoon sessions the Rev. Dr. W. S. Barham of Dallas, Texas will lecture on subjects dealing with the gifts of the Holy Spirit and the fruit of the Spirit. Dr. Barham, a former Methodist, is said to be one of the oldest Old Testament expositors on the continent. During recent years he has been specializing on teaching relative to the gifts and acts of the Holy Spirit. All meetings are open to the public.

Steps Being Taken to Ensure Voters' Lists Being Correct

City hall personnel have been underway which are intended will eliminate much of the confusion which arose last autumn in connection with the city voters' lists.

Yesterday a report from City Manager J. R. Reynolds covering steps being taken to eliminate errors in the lists, was presented to council.

The report indicated that the following steps were being taken:

1.—The assessment department is making a monthly list from the county registrar of property transfers.

2.—The city clerk submits to the assessment department monthly the names of deceased persons.

3.—Voters' list to be proof read against the assessment roll before printing.

ONUS ON TENANT

The report pointed out that the assessment department could not ensure that all tenants would be listed on the voters' lists since the department inspects and assesses properties once a year with tenants coming and going more often by the property at that time.

It was therefore quite probable that some tenants would not be listed and would require a clerk's certificate. In such cases the responsibility or onus was on the tenant to see that his name was on the voters' list.

The report noted that school boards were considering the feasibility of asking ratepayer trustees by general vote rather than by wards.

The report is very unlikely that school boards will agree to a general vote as the number of trustees would be reduced from 15 to eight," the report said.

NOT RECOMMENDED

Assuming that the school board will not agree to a general vote, the only alternative to eliminate the possibility of persons voting more than once for the general municipal election would be to prepare a separate school voters' list.

"This is not recommended since it would not only be costly but, I feel, unnecessary," as it could be controlled by the deputy returning officers.

Another recommendation of the report council members discussed the relative merits of voting by a show of hands rather than by general vote.

"Looking over the recommendations, I still have the feeling that we could still get into the same schmozzle," Alderman Les Digby said. "There still could be people left off the list."

Mr. Reynolds said, however, that the list of owners and deceased persons would be correct as far as possible.

WANTS WARD SYSTEM

He pointed out, however, that there was no way of definitely determining if all tenants were on the list.

He emphasized that it was up to the tenants to check to see if their names were on the list.

Alderman Jack Allin felt that Belleville had been big enough to have a ward system for the election of aldermen and said we should have a motion to this effect.

On a question from Alderman Frank Ramsay, the city manager replied that Belleville was taking all the normal safeguards for a correct voters list that are being taken in other municipalities.

Alderman Jack Ireland wanted to know if it would be feasible for school boards to change to election of trustees by general vote.

"Why shouldn't they?" returned Ald. Ellis. They have few elections for school board anyway and there is no reason why trustees shouldn't represent the city as a whole".

Foxboro Canning Factory Going to Be Closed Down

The Foxboro canning factory which for the past 15 years has provided a local market for employment of up to 100 persons, is going to be closed down.

This was announced today by plant manager Eric Hiltz who said that closing of the plant was the result of the company's program of consolidation and reorganization.

Operations of the plant will be transferred to other company plants in Leaside and Quebec with senior employees at Foxboro being given the opportunity to transfer.

"Studies revealed that the same company production could be achieved with one less plant" Mr. Hiltz said.

HARD DECISION

"It was a rough and hard decision to make, but the company felt it must be done for the sake of economy and to meet today's stiff competition."

Mr. Hiltz said company fieldmen were sent out to purchase rounds notifying growers in the Foxboro area that there would be no further growing contracts let.

Closing of the Foxboro plant, however, does not affect the company's Frankford operation where frozen foods, mainly peas, are processed.

The Foxboro plant was built back in 1947 by Foxboro growers which operated it until four or five years ago when it was purchased by the present company. Originally it was a pea factory only, but in recent years, with the increase in the area will be held up pending possible sale by public auction.

This was the decision reached by council yesterday when the offer of Mr. McInroy came back to council after being held up for a week.

The house at 100 North Front Street is one of a dozen which must be either sold or removed to make way for the new City Hall and the new North Front Street bridge which will have double tracks.

When the offer of Mr. McInroy was submitted to council acceptance was held up pending information on whether the house could not be located further back on the lot and whether only more money could not have been obtained through sale by public auction.

In a report to council the city manager said the entire area on which the house was situated was necessary for when the bridge was built there would be no access for vehicular traffic.

City Manager Instructed To Get Price on Properties

City council yesterday authorized City Manager J. R. Reynolds to negotiate with the owners of the Y.M.C.A. Thompson, Salvation Army and Doyle properties with the view of purchasing them as a site for off-street parking.

The recommendation authorizes negotiation only and any decision to purchase would have to come back to council.

The above properties are included in the long range plans of the city parking authority for additional off street parking in the downtown area.

QUESTION OF COST

The question of whether the purchase of all the properties would be economically feasible was raised by Alderman Les Digby, who said he would like to see each property treated individually.

He agreed that more off-street parking was necessary but asked that council make sure it was getting an economical proposition before acting.

He said he would like to know what each property would cost and have this compared against the number of parking stalls and the estimated financial return to the city.

Mayor Haig replied that this matter had already been gone into and plans were in his office.

Alderman Jack Ireland said the closeness of the Y.M.C.A. and Stobie properties to the Front Street area was just as important as the cost per stall figure.

"We shouldn't lose sight of the convenience of the property", he said.

Last week the possible sale of the YMCA property to a private individual was discussed but council decided to turn it into apartments, was of considerable public concern.

An application by the prospective purchaser for relief of parking requirements, to make the apartment project possible, was turned down by the Belleville committee of adjustment.

Sergts.' Mess Presented With Painting

One of the last British Army fortifications in Canada now appears on the wall of the sergeants' mess of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in an original oil painting of the "Blockhouse" on St. Helen's Island, Montreal, presented to the mess by an American member, Colour-Sgt. (ret.) Edmond A. Milroy, Governor-General's Foot Guards, Ottawa, now a Belleville resident.

Built in 1849 of square timbers, and obsolete before it was completed, it dominates a granite hilling, flanked with masonry walls. Two stories high, it presents an odd appearance because the upper storey is skewed to an angle of ninety degrees to the lower, so that each face of one floor overlaps the upper under or over the corner of the room above or below.

For many years it was allowed to deteriorate, but around the turn of the century it was restored, and is now a military museum.

Seen from the courtyard inside the walls, the blockhouse is dwarfed by the huge Jacques Cartier bridge towering behind it, but from the bridge, it is still an impressive sight against the sky.

Ambulance Service Could Be Provided by Health Bd.

Creation of a franchise for the operation of an ambulance service within the city is still a matter to be decided.

Last December council deferred action on a recommendation to create a franchise for the operation of an ambulance service and that tenders be called for the operation of such a service.

Legal opinion is to the effect, however, that city council has no authority to operate an ambulance service, but that it can be provided by the board of health.

The city solicitor suggested that a committee of council should discuss the matter with the board of health.

SERVICE NOT ADEQUATE

Alderman Ross Bailey, chairman of the city council finance committee, said that his committee felt that the present ambulance service in Belleville "leaves much to be desired".

This, he said, had been indicated last fall as result of an accident at the Bakelite plant in the east end of the city.

He said there was a feeling that something should be done, the big question being whether an ambulance service should be provided.

In his own opinion he felt it would be easier for the city to subsidize an ambulance service than to start one itself.

The matter was accordingly referred to the board of health for further action.

Council Directs That Fence Be Erected

City council yesterday directed that a fence be erected in the Bayview Heights area between North Street and Dundas Street East, to prevent children sleighriding down the incline onto a travelled roadway.

Erection of the fence was recommended by a coroner's jury at the inquest looking into the death of five-year-old Loric Chapman who was fatally injured while sleighriding some weeks ago.

The sleigh on which the child was riding went onto the street and under the wheels of a passing truck.

Council Confirms Change of Name Of Two Streets

There are two fewer streets in East Belleville today that go under the name of "Meadowvale".

Yesterday city council voted to have Meadowvale West Avenue and Meadowvale East Avenue be changed to Meadowvale Avenue and that the street formerly known as Meadowvale Avenue changed to Park Lane.

Council was told that the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board had no objection to the name changes.

Want to Hold Council Meets In Evening

Belleville city council will consider returning to evening meetings instead of the late afternoon sessions which have been in vogue for several years.

Yesterday Alderman Les Digby presented a notice of motion, seconded by Alderman Jack Allin, that he would move that future regular council meetings be held in the evening beginning at seven o'clock.

The motion in all probability will be presented for discussion at the next council meeting.

Belleville city council has switched from afternoon meetings to evening meetings at least twice in recent years.

The policy of afternoon meetings is favored by Mayor A. M. Haig.

The feeling of some members is that they would have more free time to attend evening council meetings, while evening sessions would also be more favorable for delegations and citizens to attend.

Memorial Arena Now Community Centre

The Belleville Memorial Arena is to become an official community centre.

City council yesterday passed the necessary by-law establishing a community centre in Belleville, the purpose of the by-law being to enable the city to take advantage of provincial grants provided for such centres.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds said that a grant of up to $5,000 could be expected for the arena.

Driving Club Plans New Track Lights

Encouraged by the favorable reception of the Parks Board to a recent representation requesting control of the track on the Belleville Fair Grounds for a 16-night racing season in 1963, a number of members of the Quinte Riding and Driving Club committed themselves to backing a loan for the amount necessary to provide a new lighting system at the track.

The pledges were made following a report by club president Gerald Vance at the club's monthly meeting yesterday evening at the Hall on West Moira Street. About 45 persons were present and a number of items concerning the coming season were discussed.

The members appointed Oscar Fenwick of Enterprise as presiding judge for the coming season. The club also accepted the offer of Evan Wills of Morton for starting gate services.

The problem of providing associate judges and timers for the season was discussed and a number of members put their names into a pool for duty on rotational basis.

A new odds board and result board, together with a new communications system between the judges' stand, the parimutuel rooms and the odds board, are also anticipated as new features for the coming season, it was learned.

The club's members approved the purchase of a two-year-old colt which will be used as a club promotion project during the racing season.

It was announced the annual dance would be held on April 19th at the Club Canada.

A new program, featuring a new format and expanded size, is to be created for the forthcoming season.

Police Report Inadequate, Efficiency Not Questioned, Cost Is Issue--Council

TRENTON — Hard on the heels of the publication of a report on operations and administrative procedures at Trenton Police Department came the charge at a town council meeting last night that the report was "unsatisfactory" and "inadequate".

The report, prepared by a special OPP investigator, speaks of the department as "one of the most efficient in Ontario" for town the size of Trenton.

Trenton council claims that the "efficiency" of the police department was never in question. What the report fails to do, councillors say, is answer the question posed by council originally: "How much does it cost per capita for police protection in Trenton?"

Councillor Gerald Weaver rose up with some figures of his own. He said that in Whitby, Barrie and Orillia, the cost per capita for police protection was $5.50. In Trenton, he said, it was $8.94. Councillor Weaver said that it cost roughly 40 per cent more in Trenton for police protection than in the other three communities mentioned. And he said that he was sure the people in Trenton were not interested in paying the extra per cent.

DISLIKE COMMISSION

Councillors, by and large, expressed themselves as dissatisfied with the set up of the Trenton Police Commission. Members are Judge J. C. Anderson and Magistrate T. Y. Wills of Trenton and Mayor James MacDonald of Trenton.

Veteran councillor Rossi Burtt said that Trenton's police chief, F. J. Taylor "got to" the Belleville members before Mayor MacDonald even learned of the issues at stake.

Councillor Weaver agreed and said that the mayor was "outnumbered two to one" on the commission when it came to making decisions concerning Trenton.

Upshot of last night's discussion was that council called for an early meeting between the commission and council to iron out their differences.

The discussion was sparked by clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry who asked direction as to paying a car allowance to Chief Taylor and Inspector R. C. Rutherford. In a statement to the press yesterday, Magistrate Wills, chairman of the police commission, recommended that council pay the allowance as these items had been included in the 1962 police budget, and, he said, the 1962 mill rate was struck on the budget. Council deleted the car allowances before passing monthly accounts last year.

Inspector D. V. Whiteley, the OPP staff inspector who compiled the survey on the police department, also recommended that the car allowance be paid, as he said the chief and inspector used their private cars in their work.

BOUGHT CRUISER

Last night, Councillor Weaver said that a second police cruiser had been bought two and a half years ago when the fact the chief was using his own car had become a "source of annoyance" to council.

Mayor MacDonald reminded council that the police commission had recommended paying the allowance on the grounds that a car allowance was provided for town employees.

"That's a straight dig," said Councillor Burtt. "There's no car available for the town employees. The chief and inspector have a cruiser. In 1961 the chief asked for and got $300 from council in lieu of taking annual holidays. Now, he wants $300 for a car allowance for 1962. It seems very funny to me. Where are we going? Every year $300 is shot."

When accounts were passed last night, car allowances for the chief and inspector Rutherford were again deleted from the list of bills.

OFFICE COLD

Chief Taylor had written to council to say that it was "very cold" in the chief and inspector Rutherford's office. He said that temperatures ranged between 60 and 65 degrees on cold days and asked that something be done about the heating system in the police building.

A lengthy discussion ensued, with Councillor Weaver suggesting that water pipes leading in from the boiler at the back of the police building to the offices at the front, be wrapped. Mayor Macdonald was for moving the boiler to a point halfway up the building and behind the cellblock. He said that gas heat could be supplied for the back room on market days.

Called on for an opinion, Charles Hilton, PUC commissioner, said he thought the trouble lay in using cast iron radiators in some parts of the building and baseboard convector heaters in the two offices under discussion. He recommended calling in an independent engineering advisory council before remodelling the heating system.

Town engineer Eric Aldersey reminded council that a local plumber had been called in last year to provide "adequate heating" for the police building. Councillor Weaver then called for re-examination of the original contract with the plumber to ascertain "if council had got what it asked for."

CLEANING BILL

Chief Taylor was back in the news again when Mr. Larry told council that he (the chief) had sent in a bill for a cleaning woman for his (the chief's) office and that of the inspector. Since council recently engaged a man, John Blight, to clean the police building at the Larry said that he had sent the bill back to the chief. Then the chief had sent the bill back to the town office.

Mayor MacDonald told council that the chief preferred to have the offices cleaned by the woman. He said that he had talked with John Blight and that Mr. Blight had confessed that Mr. Blight, the mayor could find time to clean the office that he didn't know when he said, worked from 7.30 a.m. to 4.30 p.m. six days a week and couldn't clean and wax the office floors during these hours because of traffic through the police station.

"Well, when Blight was hired, you agreed to pay him $500 more than the previous man, with the understanding that he take the place of the woman when it came to cleaning the offices", Councillor Weaver reminded his fellow councillors. "If we pay Blight the extra $500 and pay the cleaning woman another $500, that makes $1,000. I suggest we tell Blight if he can't do the work we'll cut off the $500".

Councillor Burtt, as chairman of the protection to persons and property, committee, will discuss the matter with Mr. Blight.

CARS IN FOUND

Last night, council couldn't seem to get out of the police department. Councillor Burtt asked town solicitor Roderick Campbell what, if anything, had been done about six old cars in the pound. Mr. Campbell said that he had written to Chief Taylor to ask what procedure the police took about the old cars, impounded by police and parked, fad infinitum, says Councillor Burtt, in the pound.

The chief, said Mr. Campbell, had replied that cars left in the pound three months were sold.

Councillor Burtt felt that there had been a slip-up as he said one car there had a 1958 license.

Councillor Burtt then questioned the implementation of a recently passed snow removal by-law. He said that while he understood the by-law called for the removal of cars from town streets during early hour snow removal operations, there were "cars snowed in all over town," where snow removal equipment had literally covered them.

Mr. Aldersey said that the police refused to tow cars away as they felt the cars might be damaged.

Mr. Larry said that the town was covered by insurance for any cars damaged during the towing operation.

The by-law, Mr. Aldersey said, only applied to cars parked in certain specified downtown areas, where no more than one hour's parking is allowed between the hours of one a.m. and seven a.m. during the snow removal months.

DAYLIGHT SAVE FIXED

One of the few items discussed last night which evoked little if any argument was a council vote to implement daylight saving in the town from 12.01 a.m., April 28 to Oct. 27 at 12.01 a.m. This in answer to a request from Canada's railways which have set up their spring and summer schedules along these lines.

Council also voted amiably to direct Chief Taylor to call for the first steps towards providing an urban renewal study for the town. The planners will charge $350 to contact provincial and federal authorities with a view to getting available grants for such a study. If the grants are forthcoming, the planners will only put in a bill for their expenses.

Council wouldn't agree to sell a block of land (198 feet by 460 feet) off Sidney Street to a Toronto developer. The land in question lies adjacent to the Sidney Street well, and the PUC will have to be consulted. Besides that, the developer would want the land re-zoned if he bought it. It is zoned for single family and duplex housing now, so council's conclusion was that the developer probably wants it for multiple housing.

Mr. Weaver, as chairman of the Industrial and Economic Development Committee, asked that council get down to a definite program and work this year. He suggested that a target be reached would be: (1) the reconstruction of Sidney St. from North Murray to the town limits; (2) widening Dundas Street East from Gilmour Hill to Byron Street; (3) reconstructing Dufferin Ave. from the Downs-Coulter plant to Dufferin's intersection with Trenton Street E.; (4) move the railway tracks west of Division Street over enough to permit street widening.

Another project suggested by Councillor Weaver won't get off the ground this year. Councillor Weaver wants the heads of all town organizations called together to discuss amalgamating fund-raising under a Community Chest type of campaign, rather than holding individual tag days. The heads may be called together for discussion but groups will be permitted to hold tag days and canvasses this year, at least. It is a little late in the season to expect organizations to change over, thinks council. The women's auxiliary at Trenton hospital is said to have collected 7,000 in canasm poses for Hospital Week day.

Councillor Weaver did get council to agree to ask the town solicitor to prepare a by-law by the terms of which police would "tag" cars parked on private property if the property owners complained.

At Councillor Weaver's insistence, too, council resolved that in the future, when town equipment was to be bought, local dealers would be asked to tender by mail. Tenders in the past have been called for by newspaper advertisement. Councillor Weaver claims that this isn't effective as some dealers fail to see the advertisements.

Council sanctioned the building of a 300 square foot room in the basement of the town hall. This would be used for Emergency Measures Organization heads in the event of a national emergency. Quinte area civil defence co-ordinator Col. Angus Duffy has asked that the room be made ready.

Zone Meeting Of Legion Is Success

Reports from the various Royal Canadian Legion Branches in Zone F3, were heard by Dr. D. C. McViker and the zone committee at a meeting held in the Belleville Branch 99, Legion Hall, Sunday afternoon. The two Belleville branches, 99 and 587, togeiher were hosts to over 90 Legion members, the first such meeting to be held in this city in recent years.

An outstanding report came from Bancroft, whose lady president, Mrs. Norma Powers, told of the Ligion Branch spending $4,000, in 1962, for welfare work. With 56 members they sponsor: the Boy Scout and Girl Guide movement, a children's club, a public park used for both winter and summer esorts, aside from the usual Legion aid to veterans.

In 1962 the final installment of a $1,000 a year pledge for the past ten years to the Prince Edward County Hospital was made, beside supporting other community activities.

All the presidents from Stirling, Wellington, Consecon, Marmora, Madoc Tweed, The Col. Phay Wills Belleville reported good financial standings, high membership and supporting community work, while Branch 99 Belleville, with Deseronto, reported new halls being erected during the past year. Deseronto's new hall was built mainly by volunteer labor. Coe Hill was the only branch not represented. The largest delegation was from Deseronto, with many First War veterans in attendance.

Dr. McViker commended the branches on the high membership throughout the district and the fine turnout.

Should School Administration Be Reorganized?

Prof. Stewart Fyfe of the department of local government at Queen's University and some of his colleagues have been studying municipal government in Europe. They have been impressed by much that they found. Prof. Fyfe believes "the dilution of power which comes through the existence of boards" should be ended. Duties discharged here by school boards and planning boards are performed in Europe by committees of council.

If European methods can be applied here, then the results of Prof. Fyfe's studies may be of considerable practical value. But nobody needed to go to Europe to hear independent boards and commissions denounced. Leslie Frost did that when he was Premier of Ontario, respecting the role of such boards in provincial affairs. If similar boards at the municipal level are more easily defensible, it can only be because it is more difficult to suggest satisfactory substitutes.

It ought to be easier for ministers of the Crown, whether provincial or federal, to incorporate the duties of boards in their departments than it would be for a municipal council to provide similar supervision through committees. No matter what is done in Europe, we have to remember that council members here already are heavily burdened and their remuneration is relatively small. Existing boards serve to divide up the essential work amongst more public-spirited citizens. The chairmen of the municipal scene would suggest achieving this same result by enlarging the size of councils.

Nevertheless, as long as any of these boards spend tax money which they are not responsible for raising, they are open to valid criticism. School boards are the most frequent target, because they spend such a large share of the tax dollar. Surely, though, it would not be a fair remedy to give councils control over the amount of money spent on education, as some have suggested, while leaving to school boards the responsibility for the results obtained.

One remedy suggested in the past has been that school boards should levy their own taxes, just as councils do. There always was some grave objection to such a procedure—duplication of work would increase tax-collecting costs. Now, with appointed high school boards taking the place of boards to which members are elected, there is an additional and unsurmountable obstacle—nobody to suggest that taxing powers should be given to a body which is not directly answerable to the taxpayers.

It may be argued, with considerable logic, that this situation exists today. The appointed boards decide upon a budget and then require councils to levy taxes to raise the required money, without any elected official having any direct control over expenditures. True, the members of the boards are appointed by bodies whose members are elected—by municipal councils, public school boards and separate school boards—and equivalent expenditures are subject to close supervision by the servants of another elected body, the Ontario Legislature. But is this good enough?

With regard to supervision of expenditures, we think there is much to be desired. For instance, would not an alert regulatory body long ago have standardized school plans, thereby reducing cost? No doubt architects would have protested bitterly against such a move, first proposed almost two decades ago, at the end of the war. They would have been within their rights to argue that use of their plan by boards other than those which had paid for them was a form of theft, or akin to, infringement of a copyright. But the Department of Education could easily have silenced such objections. It could have established its own planning and architectural department—and, we do not doubt, have saved the taxpayer considerably in money.

One way to give the taxpayer a direct say in school expenditures would be to make the office of high school trustee elective, rather than appointive—and then to give these boards taxing powers over the whole high school district. Assessments in the various municipalities in the district could be equalized, in the same manner in which county councils equalize assessments for the levy of county rates. Then the board could levy and collect a uniform rate over the whole district.

Auditor General Capable Keeper of Public's Funds

By RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — Front and centre these days, as he always is at this time of the Parliamentary year, Auditor General Max Henderson, appearing before the Commons Public Accounts Committee, has revealed himself as a bit of a Midas.

FINGERING THE LOOT

One of his more intriguing, even romantic responsibilities, it turns out, is to make an annual pilgrimage down to the Royal Canadian Mint and check the coin on tap there.

It was somehow reassuring that on his trip to the Mint the other day, he found $12,272,000 in silver, $275,000 in nickel and $286,501.07 in copper -bronze . . all of it is shining new coin of the realm.

(What's that odd dollar and seven cents doing there in that great $286,000 heap of coppers?)

Picture him, letting all that lovely loot trickle and tinkle through his fingers as he plunged his hands into stacks of the stuff like some modern-day Midas.

Nice work, if you can get it.

HIS BITES, TOO

Famed as "The Watchdog of the Treasury," the Auditor General roots out cases of bureaucratic bumbling, sharp practice and even, infrequently, plain dishonesty in the spending of the $7 billion it costs the Federal Government (and you and the rest of the taxpayers) to run the country for a year.

Most of the time, what he finds is simply waste and extravaganza — like the flying dress from the west of an RCAF construction unit to build a luxury home for a Brass Hat on one of the eastern bases . . and he digs rewards it for Parliament's perusal.

In years past, the Auditor General's reports of financial hanky-panky threw a chill into the various Government departments caught in the act of frittering away the taxpayer's precious dollar. But nothing much, really, was ever done about it.

Parliament's "Watchdog of the Treasury" would bark, but there never seemed to be any real bite.

Until this Session.

Suddenly, and quite unexpectedly, the Auditor General and the Common Public Accounts Committee have started checking back.

Government departments affected Brass Hat bloodpressure this year found themselves named in the Auditor General's report for wastefully or needlessly spending money like it was going out of style, are being asked what they've done about it. And if they've done nothing to mend their spendthrift ways, the Committee wants to know why.

It is turning out to be a rather awkward question. Who would have ever thought that the "Watchdog" could bite as well as bark?

CHECK AND DOUBLECHECK

Parliament takes nothing for granted, and as a matter of course the Auditor General who runs a check on everybody else in the Federal Government's immensely complicated "tax-and-spend machine".

Like the restaurant owner who eats across the street, or the barber who gets his hair cut in the shop around the block, the Auditor General himself must submit to an audit.

And who keeps the Auditor General "honest?"

Reds Turn To Bowlers

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

A little thing like a bowler hat may do more to further world peace than half-a-dozen conventions on the shores of Lake Geneva.

Certainly it is comforting to read that the male residents of the Soviet Union are being advised to discard their old bell-bottom trousers and hand-painted ties in favor of Ivy League suits and bowler hats.

Somehow it is impossible to suspect a bowler-hat wearer of warlike intentions. This may stem from the British Army phrase that a retiring soldier is getting a bowler hat. But it is an odd sort of fact.

Meanwhile, in a city where the temperature was 16 below zero this past weekend, may doubt the utility of the suggested headgear. But as something to inspire international confidence they have hit upon just the right item.

Ivys in the Ivy Look may hold out more hope for the easing of global tensions than anything Premier Khrushchev can say or do.

Strictly Personal

Fictive Names Can Become New Words

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

While looking through a "biblical paper entitled "Words of Fatherlessness on the Pre-adolescent Female," I ran across the unexpected sentence: "It is not possible to say that the five 'Lolitas' is this study would have developed in this manner but . . ."

The startling appearance of the word "Lolita" in this serious paper confirmed my earlier feeling that author Vladimir Nabokov has indeed joined the small band of literary immortals who have provided the language with a new word taken from a character in a book.

The list is not a large one. Shakespeare has given us "Romeo." Byron provided us with "Don Juan." Sinclair Lewis added "Babbitt." Dickens has given Conan Doyle gave us "Sherlock Holmes" as a synonym for the shrewd private investigator.

"Lolita" evidently fills a real need in the language to describe a certain kind of girl, although the "nymphet" is the generic term, but a proper name seems more vivid and definite.

Not many fictional characters become fixed this way in the speech and culture of a people. Dickens, most prolific of all with pungent names for his characters, has made it only with "Fagin."

Dean Swift provided us with "Yahoo" in "Gulliver's Travels," but the word is used mostly by intellectuals, and has never made its way into the great stream of speech. Likewise, Gilbert's "Pooh-Bah" from "The Mikado" did a great vogue 50 years ago, but has not maintained its popularity.

Karl Capek did much better in his play, "R.U.R.," when his name, "Robot," for a mechanical man, soon gained international usage. And, of course, Mrs. Shelley's "Frankenstein" is securely lodged in the English tongue — but in a curiously inverted fashion. "Frankenstein" has come to mean the monster itself, when it was really the name of its student creator. Mrs. Shelley gave the monster no name at all.

Stevenson rang the bell twice with one stroke in his "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde," which we still use to describe a wildly split personality; and even so minor an author as P.G. Wodehouse filled a real verbal need with "Jeeves," whose name embodies the quintessence of the British servant, a species fast vanishing from the contemporary scene.

Sheridan's 'Mrs. Malaprop' still lives, and so does Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe," for any man stranded alone. Rabelais' giant, "Gargantua" has become a standard adjective, and Rowe's "Lothario" is all we remember of that author's mediocre output. "Lolita," if she lasts, will be joining a small and select company of fictional characters.

Belleville Hospital authorities are penning about a letter received recently from a debtor. They do not seem to be able to figure out whether they are due for a "talking down", legal action, or payment of the account. The letter says:

"Just a few lines to let you know we received your letter. It was very peeved. You are very stricked in your letter, but when I come up it will be a different story altogether.

"If I have the money, you would had it long before this, but I haven't had it, so you can wait for it. If you don't, I will see you in the next future and it won't be funny.

"You can be dirty, but when I start dirtying you are kidding for I am not satisfied with the way we was treated.

"We had to pay you when we get ready to pay you, and then you will get your money as soon as we get it."

"Guess I will close now till we hear from you and see you".

(signed).

"P.S. — We are always home anytime you wish to come and see us."

Today, Trenton lost one of its oldest and most faithful servants when the old horse-drawn fire engine, which has served the town well, left on its journey to the scrap pile to be turned into ammunition to fight Hitler and his gang. Some 70 years ago this engine, the very latest in fire equipment at that time, was purchased for the town during the time when the late R. J. Weddell was Trenton's Fire Chief of the volunteer fire brigade. The engine was almost spick and span then, and seconds after the fire bell would ring one could see a prancing team of horses in bad weather) bounding from fire hall, pulling the engine, the driver perched high on the seat, and the fire chief beside him. As a fire fighting apparatus it has been used very little since 1916, at which time the Trenton Fire Brigade was motorized in order to give quicker and more efficient service to the then growing town which had in its midst a large munition factory.

Robot Revolt Plagues CBC

Vancouver Province

The CBC Head Personnel is searching for the voice that told callers to "Shut your big fat mouth" when they protested about cutting short a CBC late movie last week.

The protests were put through the switchboard correctly, and then the insult rang loud and clear for some startled viewers.

We don't know who owns the voice, but we knew this time of year, when it's the machine taking vengeance on mankind.

This is an age of the "tape" in which men's voices can be taken out of context, or words inserted, and the speech reduced to mockery.

It is a day when electronics, supposedly the servant of man, has become the master.

There are dreadful possibilities if the machines' rebellion is not crushed. Already, we're might be talking to Mr. Khrushchev with kindly vigor, and a voice might speak with fearful suggestions, and in Russian, too.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker might be talking to Buckingham Palace, or Premier Bennett talking to Wall Street, or a secretary talking to her boss, or a man talking to his banker, and the vengeful machines would decided to bring down the world about our ears.

The awful words "Shut your big fat mouth!" could be the last words heard in the universe.

And there might be some who would consider it a fitting epitaph for a civilization that has put too many words into the atmosphere, and set too many electronic brains to work.

Those electronic servants won't stay for ever. The rumble of revolt has already been heard.

To Your Good Health

Quite Often Alcoholics Are Saved From Disaster

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

I have a letter — in fact I have several startlingly like it — from a wife whose husband insists that he isn't an alcoholic because he never drinks in the mornings. Only in the evening.

He insists that he can stop any time he wants to. But he never, wants to. Every night it's the same story: A series of double shots of liquor, after which he becomes sensitive to any remark he thinks is critical. He argues, becomes positive that he is right about everything, and everybody else is wrong.

Now I can't say that such a man necessarily is an alcoholic, but the personality changes and the touchiness, and the assertions that he "can stop" but doesn't, aren't good signs.

Alcoholism doesn't necessarily mean falling down drunk in the gutter, although that often is the end of the story.

It simply means dependence on alcohol. For some, it is dependence at night. For others, it is a periodic dependence. Sobriety may continue for days, weeks or even months, but time after time the person is at last propelled by some crisis to a liquid crutch. Many of these alcoholics keep insisting that they can "stop any time I want alone," and cite the periods of sobriety as "proof."

But the real proof isn't the occasional or even the frequent "dry periods." The proof is in the repeated "falling off the wagon."

It is, candidly, of scant use to tell this to alcoholics. They refuse to believe it. They continue to kid themselves. They think the advice applies only to "the other fellow."

They can't be convinced that there are potential drinking problems. Overindulgence: Brain deterioration, liver disorders, loss of work accuracy.

They have to encounter some real catastrophe, such as disaster to themselves or someone else; a lost week or lost weekend; loss of job; gradual ostracism from friends; loss of friends; alienation of family.

They often (but not always) are unaware of the misery of their families. They are particularly self-centered, self-deluding, and don't remember this after they sober up.

Alcoholism is a disease, a mixture of physical and emotional factors, but alcoholics are salvable.

However, you can't preach them into sobriety, and they have acknowledged their problem. Usually this means reaching some form of disaster or crisis before, at last, genuinely making up their minds that they have to stop.

Dear Dr. Molner: I would appreciate information on "a large aorta, with possibility of an aneurysm." — M.V.C.

The aorta is the main artery carrying blood from the heart. Mere enlargement might or might not indicate a serious condition — it would depend on other findings.

The aneurysm — if there is one — is another matter. I might best compare it to the inner tube of a tire, with a weak place in it, which bulges.

Should this weak place — the aneurysm — rupture, obviously the result would be highly dangerous. Therefore your doctor will make every effort to determine whether it really exists, and how severe it is. If it is present, he doubtless will take steps to reduce your blood pressure if it is too high, and precautions to keep it normal if it is that way.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it harmful to use magnifying glasses that are advertised nowadays for close work and reading? I am in my 80's. — A.L.

No, they're not harmful. They do not, however, correct for other faults in the eyes, such as astigmatism, or old age vision.

Queen Victoria instituted the order of the Victoria Cross 107 years ago today — in 1856 — toward the end of the Crimean War. It is the highest British decoration for "conspicuous bravery or devotion to the country in the presence of the enemy." The decoration is a bronze Maltese cross bearing in the centre the royal crown surmounted by a lion, and with the scroll "For Valour." The decoration has been awarded to 80 members of the Canadian forces and to 23 Canadians serving with British forces.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARE

Next time you are in a bus, take note of the number of women of around fifty and up who wear a thoughtful expression. There is a surprising number of them. You may come to the conclusion, after studying the problem a few times in buses or on the streets, that the better dressed they are, the more disgruntled looking so many of these middle-aged women appear. What's the matter with them?

Are their shoes too tight? Or could their "foundations", as they call them, be causing them discomfort? What have they lost? Who are they mad at?

You will of course see the odd disgruntled-looking middle-aged, man, but in the main the proportion is the average than the women. Even at the end of the day, most of the men wear the faintest vestige of expression. Very few young women appear disgruntled. There is only one group comparable to the middle-aged women, and they are the quite young men. A notable proportion of men in their early twenties wear the disgruntled look.

What a perfect word disgruntled is.

Harry Rollins Ineligible For PUC Due Bailiff's Job

The 1963 Belleville Public Utilities Commission is illegally constituted with one of its members, Harry Rollins, disqualified to sit because he also holds the position of city bailiff.

This was the story brought into the open yesterday at city council with a question whether any action was being taken on the matter.

Alderman John Ellis introduced the subject during the council question period stating that on different occasions he had been told that the utilities commission this year was illegally constituted.

Mayor A. M. Haig replied that a meeting of the commission had been called on January 7th to discuss the qualification of Mr. Rollins.

He quoted legal opinion to the effect that Mr. Rollins had not been qualified to stand for election therefore he was ineligible to sit on the commission.

"I have no intention of attending a commission meeting until the matter is clarified," stated Mayor Haig.

He said, however, that as of yesterday (Monday) afternoon, there had been no action by the Utilities Commission to clarify the matter.

Alderman Les Digby pointed out that it was up to some private individual to take action to unseat Mr. Rollins.

"Our solicitor made that plain," commented another alderman.

Today Mr. Rollins told The Ontario Intelligencer that he had no intention of voluntarily resigning his seat on the commission.

"I have been sitting as a Utilities Commission member since I was appointed bailiff a year and a half ago," he said.

Mr. Rollins felt that the municipal act making it illegal for a bailiff to sit as a member of a municipal body was outdated and should be revised.

"I thought there would be some action to have this done," he said.

Must Remove Ice From Roofs Near Sidewalks

Removal of ice and snow from roofs overhanging sidewalks is now to be made compulsory by a city by-law.

City council yesterday passed the by-law which provides for a penalty of up to $300 for property owners who fail to comply.

Alderman Jack Ireland asked how the owner of a three-storey building was going to remove snow and ice from the eaves. He said that in the past city fireman had removed the ice.

"You might still be able to get the firemen to remove the ice, but they would undoubtedly bill you for it," commented the alderman.

Council Concurs In Resolution

Belleville city council yesterday went along with a Wentworth county resolution asking that the government of Ontario take immediate steps to pass legislation prohibiting the use and sale of mineral based detergents.

In doing so, it followed the lead of Hastings county council and the Moira River Conservation Authority.

The trouble with mineral base or "hard" detergents is that they do not break down following use and tend to encourage the growth of algae in water supplies and in lakes and streams.

Residents Want to Preserve Herchimer Hill for Children

Residents of the East Belleville district want to preserve the Herchimer Avenue Hill near Station Street as an outdoor playground for their children instead of it being turned into a housing sub-division.

And they want city council to take the necessary action to preserve the hill which they say is the only one east of the Moira River which can be used for sleighriding and tobagganing.

Yesterday a delegation of mothers from the East Belleville area waited on council and presented a petition bearing 1,300 names.

Spokesman for the group, Mrs. George Maybee of 127 Hastings Drive, told council the land on which the hill is situated has been sold to a local sub-divider, who planned to build houses.

A TRAGIC LOSS

But she said it would be a tragic loss to build houses on land of this nature as it was the only hill east of the river, which could be used for sleighriding.

She said the group had approached the city parks board, but this board had advised that city council also be approached.

Alderman Les Digby said it actually was a parks board matter, adding that it was a question of purchasing four or five lots.

He did not feel that preservation of the hill would necessarily prevent Pine Street from being extended through to Herchimer, although he said a fence would be necessary for the safety of the children.

"It is a question of whether the city or the parks board is going to buy the property," he said.

The hill in question is at the north end of Herchimer Ave., about a block south of Station Street.

Sloping off to the north the hill is a mecca for district youngsters during the winter, who turn out in droves with their sleighs and toboggans.

Changes in Agriculture Subject of Rotarian Talk

The amazing changes which have taken place in agriculture in the past 300 years, the importance of efficient nutrition in the world today and the problems which will face mankind in the future in regards to the two preceding subjects were interesting food for thought provided by Dr. G. R. Morrison, nutritionist for Maple Leaf Mills, during his address to local Rotarians yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Quinte.

In colonial North America nine out of every ten people were farmers. By 1860 one farmer produced enough food for three others and in 1958 the food required by 18 people was produced by one farmer. This advance in agricultural productivity released people to work in other fields and allowed the development which has taken place in North America over the past century, Dr. Morrison said.

He noted that in Canada only 10 per cent of the population were engaged in agriculture. In the USSR 48 per cent of the population are employed in agriculture. This fact, he suggested, can well explain why the USSR has made the development in other fields have been running into difficulties.

Dr. Morrison also took a swipe at the practice of paying people in the United States not to produce any food when people in the Far East were dying due to lack of adequate nutrition and food. Four out of every five deaths in the world today are because of starvation, he stated.

"Economics dictate the actions of man much more so than is good for mankind", commented Dr. Morrison. He suggested that it might be better if billions of dollars were spent preparing to feed the present and predicted population of the world rather than on trying to get to the moon.

The speaker advised that world productivity in goods and services were suffering from its nutritional problem. Animal protein is required for good health and helps to ensure that the individual achieves a state of maximum efficiency, yet a person in the Far East gets only 8.2 pounds of meat each year as compared to the average Canadian's annual meat consumption of 171 pounds, he emphasized.

Currently there are 2.6 billion people in the world and it is estimated that there will be six billion by the year 2,000, Dr. Morrison said. Either they will have to be fed or else there will have to be a war which will kill off 100 million people every three years in order to keep the world population static, he suggested.

The speaker also spoke on the recent research findings and development in agriculture and his important role which agriculture would have to play in the future.

"Agricultural research is not only an interesting field but a necessity," he concluded.

Congregational Meetings

ST. THOMAS' CHURCH

A well attended vestry meeting was held on Tuesday evening in St. Thomas' Church parish hall with the rector, Ven. A. E. McConnell in the chair. Following prayer by the rector, the vestry clerk, Mr. H. R. Frink, was appointed by the wardens and the minutes of the previous meeting read.

Reports were presented by Archdeacon McConnell and the Rev. W. D. Sinclair as to activities in the life of the parish. The rector thanked all those who had assisted in any way during the past year. He also noted the fact that the addition to the parish house was nearing completion and that new furnishings had been added to the sanctuary and chancel through the medium of family memorials and the St. Thomas' Church Memorial Fund.

TRIBUTE PAID

The assembly stood as mention was made of those who had passed away in the past year and prayers were said by the rector.

Mr. Sinclair gave a report of his duties in the parish and in particular of his work among the young people.

The financial statement presented by the church wardens, Mr. Mac Smith, and Mr. A. J. Fort, showed the parish in good financial condition, having met their responsibilities of a local nature as well as paying $7,075 on Synod assessment; $3,000 on church extension, and $722 to the Centennial fund of the diocese. The annual report of all parish organizations were also passed at the meeting.

The rector paid tribute to Mr. Mac Smith, retiring rector's warden, who had worked so faithfully for St. Thomas' Church for the past two years. He assured the meeting that he was happy to ask A. J. Fort to act as rector's warden for 1963, stating that he and his whole family had been a tower of strength to him in the life of the parish.

1963 OFFICERS

The report of the nominating committee was read by Mr. Ronald Keel and was as follows:

Wardens — rector's warden, A. J. Fort; people's warden, Dr. P. G. Loder; junior wardens, R. W. G. Freestone and R. F. Morton; lay delegates, A. S. Lewis, Ronald Keel, R. W. G. Freestone, A. A. Blake, Mac Smith, W. S. Stone, Brig. J. E. Genet, H. C. Carruthers and A. L. Staedinger. Executive, E. W. Athey, J. L. Clarke, G. Hume, H. Jones, F. J. Lancaster, G. M. Miller, Murray Workman, F. H. Bellstedt, L. A. Kells, J. A. Pringle, F. P. Clarke, W. S. Wills, T. B. Morden, J. A. Snetsinger, S/L L. J. Minion, D. Ivison, D. Holmes and R. G. Lamming.

With no further nominations from the meeting these men were unanimously chosen to represent the parish for the coming year.

REPORTS

Reports of the parish visitation were given by the chairman, Mr. R. F. L. Jones, and, in the unavoidable absence of Mr. K. A. Kells, chairman of the building committee, a report of progress on the addition was given by Mr. Mac Smith. The presentation of the budget for 1963 brought about considerable discussion but was approved by the meeting with a recommendation to the wardens that there should be a survey of all church salaries.

The nomination of Mr. W. S. Stone and Mr. P. J. Leach as auditors; the re-appointment of Mrs. Thomas E. Smith as representative on the Y.W.C.O., and the announcement by the rector that Mr. J. A. Pringle would act as secretary of the Belleville Rectory Committee brought the meeting to a close.

Archdeacon McConnell brought his report to the vestry to a close in these words. "I have been over seven years in the parish and they have been happy years for my wife and myself. I believe we are truly trying to be a 'fellowship' in Christ which is the hope of every rector of a parish. You have shown me much loyalty and we have dwelt together in harmony in the past and I plead with you for a continuance of both loyalty and harmony in the years that lies ahead and I pray that God, even though He has touched some of you very deeply with sorrow, may continue to bless you and your loved ones wherever they may be."

Previous to the vestry meeting a dinner meeting of the Brotherhood of Anglican Churchmen was held with the president, Mr. W. W. Davenport, in the chair.

Following the meeting a social hour was spent with refreshments being provided by members of Evening Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary.

Three-Piece Ensemble

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

Three parts get together for a nice costume story.

The navy blue sweater-like knit vest is piped in red and has gold buttons. The skirt is of white worsted, with a center inverted pleat and gathers from the waist to ease the line.

Red arnel crepe makes the skirt, but a white blouse or one in pale blue would give quite another look.

Great with tube or for that crisp red, white and blue look.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mrs. W.R. — A boy of 17 shouldn't leave dishes for me to wash when I get home from work.

Bruce R. — My kid brother should do the clean-up. He doesn't have the homework I do.

Mrs. W.R. — I'm a widow and work for the telephone company. For the next few weeks I must be on the late shift, and I've come to dread getting home at midnight and finding the mess left by my two sons.

They're 17 and 12 and I think I have a right to expect them to clean up after their supper instead of leaving dishes for me to do, and food for me to put away. I leave the house nice for them, and they should do the same for me.

They go to school and have homework, of course. But that's no excuse. Yet that's the answer I get when I scold them. Or else, each one blames the other for refusing to help.

Bruce R. — If my mother could see what goes on here each evening she'd get real tough with my brother and leave me alone.

I'm all tangled up with preparations for five Regent's Exams in June, plus college entrance worries, plus a Senior paper I must write on Land Erosion. But Larry is only in junior high and he's not done with his arithmetic and Spanish in about 20 minutes. Then all he has to do is eat and watch TV. In between he starts up fights with me and won't quit till I paste him one.

He's the one who makes all the mess in the kitchen and the living room. My one dish and glass make no difference.

The Council: The trouble in this home springs from the fact that the mother is looking at the boys, but the boys aren't looking at her. They're looking at each other, and beyond . . . which certainly won't get the supper dishes washed or the floors done, and to accept griping and yapping as s.o.p. (standard operational procedure) in a household of adolescents.

How to go about it? We recommend the "easy" feeling in the home, rather than the opposing factions as at present. And this is achieved by a calm sitting-down, possibly with an outsider present, to assay the burdens and duties each member of the family faces. The "outsider" should of course be a trusted friend, relative, teacher, or pastor. Then, with Mrs. R. and the boys hearing each other out respectfully, a simple work schedule can be worked out in writing with specific household chores assigned to all three. These will be in line with their available time, their skill and energy, their other responsibilities and commitments.

A formal inkling of the "agreement" may be a neat touch, even though you and we know, Mrs. R., that some of the clauses will be honored more in the breach than in the performance. But if matters should slip back to the sloppy stage they're in now, the family council must be re-convened in fairness to all. In other words, the boys must contribute more than a lick and a promise. At present they're not even contributing those!

Not only their mother, but they themselves, will feel better to be carrying some share — even a pygmy-sized one — of the load.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E.Q.?

A courteous and considerate hostess senses what her guests need and does her best to provide it. Are you perceptive in these sensitive matters? Answer True or False to the following:

1. A house guest prefers being told what time to arrive for breakfast and how to dress in the morning.

2. A guest who refuses a snack is just being timid and really needs to be coaxed.

3. A new arrival who doesn't know anyone is more relaxed if the hostess introduces her around so she doesn't have to introduce herself.

4. A woman guest who arrives alone would prefer that her hosts make no effort to see that she's escorted.

5. A week-end guest enjoys having quiet periods just to rest, rather than having every second energetically organized.

6. House guests want to know in advance what's scheduled for them, so they can bring the proper clothes.

7. Guests engaged in a deep discussion welcome being interrupted by the hostess to be steered into other groups.

8. Week-end guests should be told what train they're expected on, and if they will be met.

9. House guests should be made to feel they can retire when they want to, even if the host and hostess still stay up.

10. When guests want to leave a party on time, the hostess, out of courtesy, should insist they stay longer.

Answers

1. True.

2. False. It often annoys and embarrasses a guest to have unwanted refreshments forced on him.

3. True.

Cocoanut-Honey Filling In Cookies

by Mary Moore

(Second Instalment, continued from last week.)

Last Wednesday I gave you here a recipe for a Cocoanut-Honey Filling to be used in Pastries: double-crust squares, tarts and turnovers. I was (and am) so enthusiastic about this delicacy that I promised to give you more ways of using it in your baking today.

This time our products are cookies: one is a covered cookie and another is a "dream" bar (layered) type of thing. In this latter we have tried, between the shortbread bottom and cocoanut-filled top, lemon marmalade, crabapple jelly and blueberry, strawberry and raspberry jam. The lemon marmalade filling was the best in my opinion.

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

Lamb Stew with Dumplings; Carrots; Celery and Apple Salad with Mayonnaise; Lemon Meringue Pie; Tea.

COVERED COOKIES WITH COCOANUT-HONEY FILLING

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup shortening (room temperature), 2 tablespoons butter (room temperature), 2/3 cup light brown sugar (firmly packed), 1 egg, 2 tablespoons table cream, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Sift together sifted flour, baking powder and salt. Cream and combine shortening, butter and brown sugar, then add egg, cream and vanilla. Cream well. Add flour mixture in two amounts, mixing well after each addition. Chill. Roll out half of dough to ⅛" thickness. Cut out with 2¾" round cookie cutter with fluted edge and place on ungreased cookie sheet. Place 1 measuring teaspoon of cocoanut-honey filling (given last January 30th—last Wednesday) in centre of each. Cut out remaining dough and cut a 1" cross in top of each with sharp-pointed knife. Place on top of filling with filling on, on cookie sheet. Press edges with fingers then seal with tines of fork. (Note: These covered cookies require less than half the filling recipe given last Wednesday.) Bake 10 or 11 minutes at 375 deg. Fahr. Makes 2½ dozen.

Please remember that for DREAM BARS — THREE VARIETIES USING COCOANUT-HONEY FILLING FOR TOPPING

Base: Four tablespoons (¼ cup) butter, ½ cup unsifted flour, 4 tablespoons (¼ cup) light brown sugar. Add butter to flour and sugar in bowl and cream together until blended. Pat evenly into ungreased 9½x 9½" pan (or one of equivalent area). Bake 5 minutes at 350 deg. Fahr. Remove from oven and cover with ½" thick layer of lemon (or orange) marmalade or crabapple jelly or strawberry or raspberry or blueberry jam. (Or cover half with one of these preserves and the other half with another one.) Carefully spread remaining cocoanut-honey filling evenly on top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 15 to 20 minutes longer. (Do not overbake or jam filling will boil out and stick to pan.) Cut into squares while warm. These are a delicious, chewy confection that I hope you will try.

A drain-pipe look can be stopped for years by wrapping layers of cloth and wet plaster around the leak. Let dry thoroughly.

ELEGANT DESSERTS

Everyone likes to try a new and different dessert. This week's recipe Elegant Desserts now obtainable for the first time in Canada from the Ontario Intelligencer is your answer to this problem. Here is a delicious middle-of-the-road recipe — not too rich but extremely tasty. Originally created by Escoffier, master of French cuisine, he named it after the famous operatic singer Nellie Melba. So easy to make. Try it soon.

PEACH MELBA

Mix in saucepan 1 cup sugar and 1 cup water.

Place over medium heat and bring to boiling, stirring constantly. Cover and boil 5 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in 1 teaspoon vanilla extract.

Rinse, pare, cut into halves, and pit 3 large (about 1 lb.) firm peaches (fresh or canned.)

Quickly blot peaches, if necessary, on absorbent paper.

Set syrup over medium heat. Add peaches, two halves at one time, and cook gently 5 minutes. With a slotted spoon, carefully remove peaches from syrup; allow excess syrup to drain into saucepan. Repeat, the above cooking process for the remaining four peach halves. Chill peaches in refrigerator.

Meanwhile, blend gelatin and force through coarse sieve or food mill 2 cups (1 pint) raspberries. Add ½ cup sugar. Chill in refrigerator.

When ready to serve, spoon into a large glass serving dish 1 pint vanilla ice cream.

Place chilled peaches on ice cream, cut-side down Top with raspberry sauce.

Two Schools Hold 'Open House' Meet

The extremely large attendance of parents to both Bayview and Harry J. Clarke Schools' "Open House" was most gratifying to the teachers, and Home and School executive who planned the two evenings.

The inclement weather did not hinder approximately 800 parents from seeking a short interview with the teachers and inspecting school work on display. Parents were loud in their praise of the work teachers had produced for inspection and a big word for their patience in enduring three hours of questioning, was expressed.

Mr. Stewart Howell, president of the association, noted many favorable comments on the manner which room mothers officiated and handled the heavy turnout of parents.

Judo More Than Womanly Art of Self Defence Says Saint John Women

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—For 20 Saint John women, judo is more than the "womanly" art of self-defence.

They find it gives them confidence as well as physical and mental conditioning.

"You act differently if you know you can fight yourself, even though you don't need to," says Carolins Wade, 15-year-old judo instructor.

"Most girls come into the sport to learn self-defence but they stay with it as a conditioner," says chief instructor George Stears.

Saint John has about 150 judo enthusiasts, including 20 women, in two clubs—the Saint John Judo Club formed eight years ago and the Shimpokai Club established three years ago.

In addition there are clubs in Moncton, N.B., Camp Gagetown and the University of New Brunswick in Fredericton.

"It's fun to throw your body around," said one girl member.

"Along with physical development judo has a tremendous mental stimulus," Mr. Stears says. "When two people are of equal skill physically, mental faculties come into play—that is, outthinking and outguessing the opponent."

He says members of both Saint John clubs regularly meet visiting Japanese ships in hopes of finding a judo expert aboard.

"Often in such an expert but often, too, we are dismayed to find crew members are more interested in golf or baseball and they are quite amused to find an Oriental type judo room here."

The Japanese, who originated the sport and who regard size as unimportant, are also dismayed. The present world champion is a Dutch giant, Anton Geesink, who weighs 240 pounds and stands six-foot-four.

AMONG THE FIRST SIGNS OF SPRING—COATS AND SUITS

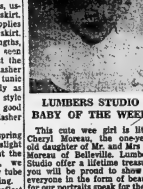
"Lightly shaped" best describes the silhouette of this season's coats and suits. A suggestion of the princess style line is seen in slight shaping at the waistline or just under the bust. The front-curved coat is continuing in popularity, now with a subtle high-waisted look, set off with fly-front fastening from their parents, as well as other gifts.

The Haberdasher look is best seen in the new chesterfield coats and lean overcoats, sometimes out on a trench coat line. A fashion to watch for and to snatch quickly, if you find it, is the right coat and fabric, in the full swinging, hemline coat, which can be either beautifully casual or elegant, depending on the accessories worn with it. We see this coat as the upcoming silhouette for fall 1963 and, therefore, as a good fashion buy this spring.

Suits are getting longer suits, they have become costumes. Many of the newest come with their own matching blouses, usually worn over the skirt. "Lightly shaped" again applies to both the jacket and the skirt. Jackets come in all lengths, with a new, longer length, seen in Haberdasher suits and the thing for the Haberdasher bowler hat. There is a new suit, with a jacket nearly as long as a coat. Very high style now, but it could be a good investment. The Haberdasher look clicks.



Suit skirts for this spring have to be softened with slight gores, pleats or fullness at the hemline. Gone are the days, I hope, are the tight skimpy tube skirts so popular last spring.

Both coats and suits reflect last fall's muffled look, in a revival of small collars and lapels. Some suits come complete with their own stoles. Sleeves have a slimmer look. They are a little longer, allowing for blousing a good three to four inches above the wrist bone — which leads to slightly shorter gloves, four to six button length.

Both coats and suits are best in textured fabrics, the type which is fine for the gal with the perfect figure. Those of us with "problem" figures will have to choose our new fashions with the greatest of care, and either fluffy mohairs, nubby tweed and diagonal weaves are not exactly slimming — so mat-ter how beautiful they may look on the hanger. Because of their blending and construction, they often come in variations of the same shade producing a patterned effect, while we all know that solid colours are best for the "not so perfect" figure. But, these new coats and suits are so lovely, that dieting should be a pleasure!

Widow Wants to Give Up

DEAR DORIS—I have been a widow for the past four years. When my husband died my friends were very good at first, but of course people have their own lives to lead and consequently during the past few years my invitations have been few and far between.

I was therefore delighted when I was invited out by a gentleman. I am afraid that at the time I was so pleased to think that someone was interested in me that I threw myself at the poor fellow unmercifully. Needless to say the romance was short-lived and I have kicked myself ever since.

DORIS CLARE

I decided that life was passing me by. I am now 42, neat, fair figure. I feel that I should make the effort to mix and get out with people, but at times I feel so depressed that I vow that I will just give up.—UNHAPPY.

* * *

DEAR UNHAPPY—It's a big leap from married homemaker to single career girl.

But life does not have to pass you by. Single girls can live worthwhile, satisfying lives and accomplish great things.

Creative energies can be channelled in many exciting directions. Seek out friends with interests like your own. When a woman is denied the natural expression of life with a man, she learns to sublimate.

DEAR DORIS—I am a girl of eleven and have a boy friend. I'm not allowed to go to the dances on Friday and Saturday nights. My sisters are only about one or two years older than me and go to dances.

The other girls in my room are allowed to go to the dance. They ask me why I don't go and they also say I'm a pipsqueak. I hate that. I know I'm a bit young but I hate staying home. What should I do?—LONELY.

DEAR LONELY—You feel out of things. Yet in my book a dance floor is not the proper location for an eleven-year-old girl.

Want to know what is? A group of Brownies or a swimming class at the YWCA. Show them who's the pipsqueak!

DEAR DORIS—Does "frustrated" or any of the "thousands or others" who feel lonely and useless live anywhere near my city? Here we are short of volunteers in every single field of endeavor. Those of us who are willing to work are almost driven off our feet. We have many worthwhile organizations and so few to help. Please send me some of them folding up. Please send us help.—VERY TIRED.

* * *

DEAR VERY TIRED—Without volunteers like you our agencies couldn't hope to cope. Who'll join the ranks? To find out where help is needed, get in touch with the Children's Aid Society, 60 West Moira Street, Belleville.

* * *

DEAR DORIS—Our past president is the worst offender with loose talk at our W.I. meetings. I am not a forward or outspoken person, so I find it hard to do anything, now that I am in the chair.—PRESIDENT.

* * *

DEAR PRESIDENT—Some past presidents have trouble letting go of the reins. Having once run the show, they feel no one else really knows how to do it.

But you are the chief in the hall of the others, say something like: "Thank you. Now could we have some other opinions? We really do have to make decisions which come from the club as a whole. Don't we, Mrs. Past President (naming her)?"

And be firm about it.

Non-Confidence

bloc, that would leave the survival of the government in the hands of the New Democratic Party, since it takes the combined votes of the three opposition groups to topple the government.

The New Democrats, keeping alive the air of suspense which built up all through a day of break - taking developments, gave no clear indication of their intentions.

David Lewis, NDP deputy leader, delivered a non-committal statement towards the end of Monday's debate in which he said the government's defence policy is "exactly the same" as that of Mr. Pearson.

He said this was clear from a reading of Mr. Harkness's letter of resignation and Mr. Diefenbaker's letter to the defence minister accepting it.

The only difference between the Prime Minister and Mr. Harkness was on how a nuclear policy should be implemented.

ATTACKS PEARSON

Mr. Lewis described Mr. Pearson's stand as irresponsible and puerile. The Liberal leader has said Canada should honor its commitments to accept nuclear weapons pending renegotiation of its role in the Atlantic alliance.

The NDP deputy leader blasted the government as "timid manoeuvring" to avoid defeat.

NDP Leader T. C. Douglas did not speak in Monday's debate but in the past he has been among those accusing the government of indecision on the nuclear issue.

If any evidence was needed that the government is in deep trouble it was provided by Mr. Thompson.

Leader of a party whose Common votes have often saved the present regime from downfall, Mr. Thompson had appeared to hint at the afternoon sitting that it was prepared to do so again.

But the election in Canada precipitated at this time by the government's last three days and carrying the anti-American overone would be a tragedy for Canada," he declared.

CHANGES ATTITUDE

Then, to the astonishment of many, he engineered an abrupt change of direction on resuming his speech at the night sitting.

He ripped into the government for failure to "get moving," and said it would be worse not to go to the country than to "prolong the life of this government which is not fulfilling its responsibilities as it should."

Mr. Pearson, leading off Monday's debate, said the defence disputes between Canada and the U.S. is "perhaps the most deplorable and most dangerous illustration we have had" of the confusion and lack of leadership within the administration.

There was confusion within the cabinet, which led to confusion inside Parliament, which led to confusion in the country.

'EXCUSE FOR DELAY'

Referring to Mr. Diefenbaker's announced intention to postpone a decision on nuclear weapons procurement until after the NATO ministerial meeting in May, Mr. Pearson said:

"This is just another excuse for delay.

"This is a government which has had no idea of where it was going and if it had it would have no idea how to get there and if it had it would never have been able to make a decision to start moving there."

The government had so mismanaged its affairs that it was even running out of money. It was therefore ending—"unwept, unhonored, and unsung."

Mr. Diefenbaker: "But returned whenever it goes to the people."

Mr. Pearson: "The Prime Minister says it will be returned whenever it goes to the country. That is a new definition of an optimist."

CHURCHILL HITS BACK

Striking back on behalf of the government, Veterans Minister Churchill blamed the opposition for Parliament's failure to pass spending estimates and a budget.

He ticked off each of the three opposition parties in turn, starting with the Liberals and Mr. Pearson.

"I know of no subject on which he hasn't been on both sides," said Mr. Churchill, government leader in the House. Mr. Pearson's concept of bold-ness was "the card of a rabbit," and his concept of action, "retreat."

He rapped the New Democrats for blocking parliamentary divorce bills and said, dealing with Social Credit's criticism of the way parliamentary business has been managed, that 20 pieces of government legislation have been held up by opposition obstruction.

troops in the field."

Said McNamara: "It is entirely probable that missiles of these classes exist in Cuba, and it seems probable that the reports . . . are based on that probability."

Representative Donald C. Bruce, Indiana Republican, told the House of Representatives he has information from friendly diplomats indicating that 40 or more Soviet intermediate-range missiles — capable of striking U.S. cities—are still in Cuba. These, he said, are in addition to the 42 the Soviet said it put in Cuba and removed after the threatening days of the crisis.

The defence department swiftly disputed Bruce's contention, declaring:

"No friendly government has so informed the United States. There remains no credible evidence to support his statement."

walkouts and no other troubles.

The federal inquiry was launched after Dr. Lawrence Seaway workers refused to handle Silo-unloaded grain last July, a boycott that eventually led to a tie-up in the Welland Canal by the Hindman Hindman of the Hindman fleet.

Mr. Hindman testified that he gave the order to have the Blanche Hindman try to enter the Port Weller lock of the Welland canal—that has blocked the canal to all ships.

He denied that the order was given at the urging of Mr. Banks.

statement was handled.

Mr. Pearson declared he has modified the sharp criticism of the departments actions was the sudden resignation of Defence Minister Harkness from the Canadian cabinet. Aiken said the Harkness resignation was considered by the subcommittee but the subcommittee does not want comment on this because "a very delicate situation exists at Ottawa now.

Asked if the subcommittee discovered who in the department had leaked the story Jan. 29 public statement, Aiken said he did not press Rusk to make this disclosure in view of the secretary's acceptance of full personal responsibility for the operation.

The method in which the statement was issued was "water over the dam. It had caused "temporary irritation at Ottawa and Aiken hoped this would have no lasting effect on Canada-U.S. relations.

Ab Hare Arena Collapses Due To Heavy Snow

PICTON—For close to a century Picton Arena, originally known as Boulter Arena, and for 40 years as Hare's Arena, was the chief centre of sports activity in the town. But for the past four years it has been abandoned and empty, becoming unsafe, and finally closing when the activity was transferred to the new and modern arena equipped with artificial ice at the Fair Grounds.

Heavy snowfalls covered the rounded roof and weekend rain which froze added to the weight. Collapse followed, and today only the two ends remain, the sections which house dressing rooms and which had extra supports.

No one was in the building at the time. Last students and dents were aware of the collapse only when a roaring sound reached all except four of the wooden arches fell with the roof.

Mr. Hare had let the arena be offered as a town tax sale had fail.

The arena was built by a pioneer canner, W ellington Boulter, in Picton, and opened in 1908 and was replaced. Its ice surface was 70 x 125 feet and it contained a balcony on all four sides.

Old hockey players, such as George Hill, Picton, will recall the arena in its heydey, when local stars competed in county hockey leagues, while earlier, still, many OHA teams played there to bring honors to the town.

Small Office Gutted by Fire

PICTON—A small building used as an office at Ross Pearsall's service station on Glenora road was gutted by fire Monday afternoon. A safe was ripped with about $100 and records were carried to safety. The building was located on the same site that the blaze is believed to originated near it. The wall was on fire when discovery was made.

Harkness

Mr. Harkness said his pro-clear position is based on mili-tary factors "in the north," and on Canada's international responsibilities.

"This is the view 'of every military man who has studied the matter," he added.

He was asked how well informed Prime Minister Diefenbaker is on nuclear weapons, and whether Dwight Mr. Diefenbaker was shaping government policy "by intuition."

"All I can say is that the Prime Minister is not an expert in these matters."

The former defence minister said he had not been able to understand how other members of NATO had been able to sign agreements with the United States to accept nuclear weapons and Canada could not.

He was asked if the difficulty was on Canada's side.

"Yes, I would certainly say that."

Some European countries had been slow building up their defence strength, but that was no reason for Canada to do the same.

Mr. Harkness said every Canadian is bound to ask in the manner in which the U.S. state department handled the protest through a press release, but said he believes the United States is getting impatient at Canada's delay in agreeing to acquire nuclear warheads.

It was very hard to have a general election in Canada on the issue, or anything that tends to embitter U.S.-Canadian relations.

He was asked if he thought the government could win an election if it accepted nuclear arms. He replied yes, "other things being equal." He explained he could not predict the outcome of an election on one issue.

"I am convinced the great majority of the Canadian people believe we should have nuclear arms, he said. "Why should you buy the guns without the ammunition?

Mr. Harkness said that if Canada had a nuclear arms agreement with the U.S. similar to those of other NATO countries, Canada would not be at the mercy of the Americans in any way.

The U.S. would retain custody of the warheads until the president authorized their release. Then Canada would make the decision of when to fire them.

Mr. Harkness said he has received encouraging words from many Conservative MPs, and from many people across Canada including his home city of Calgary. He would continue his advocacy of nuclear arms "wherever I have the opportunity to do so.

Bane of Educationists Soon Boon of the Housebuilders

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP)—The bane of the educationists promises to become the boon of the housebuilders.

Thousands of post-war babies have crowded through primary school and high school, flooded into the labor market, and soon will be getting married. Then within a few years they will start looking for homes.

It will mean a revival in demand for housing in Canada. The upsurge will begin in about 1965 or 1966, say the professed optimists in Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

In many parts of the country a buyers' market has emerged. This decline in demand which began to appear toward the end of 1960 has been described by CMHC President Stewart Bates as "not a collapse but merely a pause, a momentary hesitation, in the long-term expansion of the market."

What caused it? CMHC officials have put it down to an easing of population growth and a slackening in the general rate of income increased. Meanwhile, the house supply in Canada had been built up to 4,500 000 units from 3,000,000 in 1943.

Actually the decline doesn't show in housing starts. A preliminary estimate for 1962 is 120,215 starts, 2.9 per cent more than the 125,157 in 1961. This has been partly the result of stimulating demand by lowering down payments under the National Housing Act.

What's ahead for 1963?

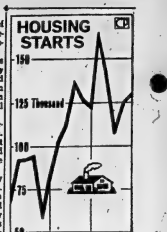
H. W. Hignett, CMHC executive director, gave this outlook on housing starts in an address to the Toronto Metropolitan House Builders Association:



"Any increases will not be pronounced until we reach the latter half of the '60s when they could be fairly rapid, perhaps averaging something in the region of 133,000 to 140,000 annually."

He emphasized that he was speaking of a trend in which there could well be yearly variations.

Mr. Hignett also warned the housing industry that it will be faced with more sophisticated, more demanding, buyers in the future.

He said this market will be extremely difficult for a builder to penetrate unless he starts thinking about it right now.

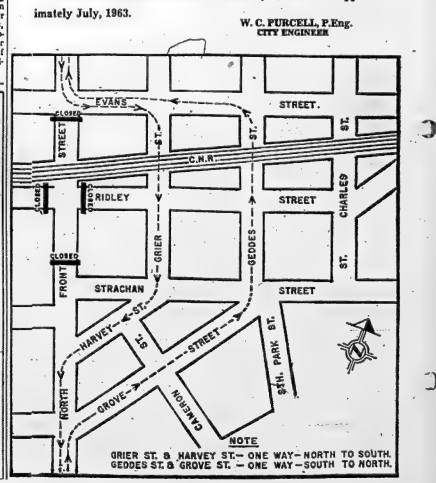
"The home-owners of tomorrow may not want the things of today. You may find they have quite different tastes. The specific features of our homes today will be commonplace tomor-row."

HOUSING STARTS CLIMB—Preliminary estimate shows construction was started on 120,215 housing units in Canada last year, an increase of nearly three per cent over 1961. Graph shows the total number of dwellings including single units of duplexes fourplexes and apartments. (CP Newsmap).

Buyers would be discriminating. The house they look at will have to be a superior product "to complement their intellectual standards as well as their buying standards."

"You will also need to consider quite different methods of construction and mechanical services.

"I am referring to such novel ideas as sealed windows and houses with special heating and cooling systems; stressed skin floor panels; increased use of soundproofing; plastic piping; vapor - barrier type interior paint; individual thermostats in every room and long warranties on the home."



Mr. Hignett raised the possibility of each house having a built-in sewage system.

"This, I suggest, may be one of the most important features in house construction at the end of this decade; indeed it may have the most far-reaching consequences in urban building as well as in rural construction."

The CMHC executive made it clear that he wasn't talking of things many, many years in the future.

"However, strange these features may be to us now, they will be quite acceptable to home-owners at the end of the '60s."

Attacks by Wolves, Buzzards, Wild Dogs New Menace to Europe

LONDON (AP)—Western Europe continued in the grip of the freeze-up today and battled against a new menace—attacks by wolves, buzzards and wild dogs.

Hundreds of villagers were cut off by snowdrifts — from western England to the Mediterranean island of Corsica.

Starving deer in the snowbound Alps of Austrian countryside were fed by helicopter. Elephants in an English zoo were given rum to keep them warm.

The wolves came out in France—for the first time in nine years. Experts said they had been driven by the cold from the mountains of Poland and Czechoslovakia, travelling across Europe at a rate of 60 miles a day.

One wolf was killed in Eastern France. Several others were reported sighted.

The buzzards attacked people in the same area. One bird swooped down on a French farm worker and cut his face seriously with its talons.

Packs of wild dogs, prey sheep and 12 lambs near Rodez, only 90 miles from France's Mediterranean coast.

At least 12 more persons were reported to have died as a result of the cold, making 100 brought Europe's death toll to 550 since the cold spell started.

Five of the deaths occurred in France, two in Italy, two in Yugoslavia and three in Britain.

Two spinster sisters, 71 and 63, died from the cold in their caravan in Kent, southeast England. Police forced their way in and found the bodies of Ellen and May Saunders.

In North Wales, a 61-year-old farmer, Sidney Jones, was killed by a falling tree in a gale and his ice-covered incline. It slid backwards and overturned.

Six Out of 10 Ignorant of Missile Facts

TORONTO (CP) — Nearly 60 per cent of Canadians questioned in a survey by the Canadian Peace Research Institute had the wrong idea about Canada's position on missiles.

In a report covering a survey of 1,000 Canadians across the country, the privately sponsored institute said in a press release today slightly more than half of those surveyed recognized an accurate description of a Bomarc as an "anti-aircraft missile."

One-quarter of those surveyed didn't know what a Bomarc was, one in 10 thought it was a "missile that can fly as far as Russia" and more than seven per cent believed it to be a "Canadian-made military transport."

Most of the subjects in the survey were covered in a question-and-answer form, with the person surveyed being asked to mark one or more correct answers from a list of several.

The survey was taken just after last fall's Cuban crisis.

SOME DIDN'T KNOW

Asked about missiles in Canada, 15 per cent thought Canada had no missiles at all, eight per cent said this country had intercontinental ballistic missiles, 11 per cent believed the missiles at North Bay, Ont., and La Macaza, Que., were armed with nuclear warheads and 24 per cent said they didn't know.

Forty-two per cent recognized as correct the statement Canada has "missiles that can carry atomic warheads, but we have no such warheads in Canada."

Almost 80 per cent believed a strong, permanent United Nations army would protect Canada's national freedom. Told Canada spends about one per cent of its defence budget on the U.N. army, 41 per cent said this was what Canada should spend. About one-third favored spending more.

Less than 14 per cent knew that Canada has fewer than 2,000 men serving with UN forces now. And less than six per cent had an approximate idea of the size of the UN budget, which is about $84,000,000. Most guessed higher on both questions.

Girl Ordered To Stand Trial For Possession

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A 20-year-old Leamington girl was committed for trial by Judge Monday after a preliminary hearing in Magistrate's Court on charges of possession of a sawed-off shotgun.

Miss Jean Goyeau was a passenger in a car which had been reported stolen in Leamington Dec. 18. Provincial police testified the 18½-inch shotgun containing a live bullet, was found hidden under the dashboard of the car.

A charge of car theft and another of breaking and entering were dismissed.

John Biekx, 18, one of 12 other Leamington area youths facing charges ranging from breaking and entering to forgery, testified that at the time of his arrest he was driving Miss Goyeau to Leamington from Windsor.

Eight of the defendants who pleaded guilty to charges of forgery and uttering were remanded until Wednesday for sentence.

All but two of the youths also face charges of having committed a series of breakins in the Leamington and Harrow district since Nov. 28.

Edward Sadlock, 17, of Point Pelee, who pleaded not guilty to charges of uttering, was convicted Monday. He will also be sentenced Wednesday.

Thomas Moody, 18, and Richard Brunet, 18, both of Point Pelee, who pleaded not guilty to uttering charges, will be tried at a later date.

Dr. B. Ballard Named to Head Research Body

By JOHN E. BIRD

OTTAWA (CP) — The new president of the National Research Council firmly believes that Canada's future progress as an industrial national will be measured to a great extent by the effort this country puts into research.

Dr. Bristow Guy Ballard, 60, whose appointment was announced in the Common Monday by Prime Minister Diefenbaker, holds the same views as those of his predecessor, Dr. E. W. R. Steacie who died last year at the age of 61.

For many years both Dr. Steacie and Dr. Ballard stressed the importance of research to industrial prosperity. They were often critical of the amount of research done by Canadian industry, especially Canadian subsidiaries of large United States corporations.

Dr. Ballard said Monday: "There must be more support for research in Canadian universities and greater opportunities for young Canadians to be trained as scientists."

WAS VICE-PRESIDENT

Dr. Ballard steps into the $22,000-a-year post after serving as scientific vice - president of NRC since 1954. He will be succeeded in his former position by Dr. Leo Marion, director of NRC's pure chemistry division.

An electrical engineer, Dr. Ballard was born at Fort Stevenson, Ont., and educated at Queen's University, Kingston. He joined NRC in 1930 and was in charge of electrical engineering research until 1945. From 1946 until 1948 he was NRC officer in charge of electrical engineering and broadcasting research.

In 1948 a full NRC division of radio and electrical engineering was established with Dr. Ballard as director. He held both this post and the position of scientific vice - president until his appointment as president.

During the Second World War Dr. Ballard was engaged in the development of mine sweepers and other means of protecting ships against enemy magnetic mines. For his wartime efforts he was made an officer of the Order of the British Empire.

Overall Dairy Marketing Plan Is Advocated

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Agriculture asked the government today to establish a national authority that would formulate an overall plan for dairy marketing.

In a brief presented to the federal cabinet, the federation also asked that the consumer price of butter be lowered by four cents a pound and returns to producers be maintained through federal support programs.

The brief said marketing problems facing Canadian producers "have been brought about by conditions which prevail on a national basis and . . . solutions to ease problems must be found on a national basis.

PRESENTS SUGGESTIONS

The federation delegation, headed by President H. H. Hannam, informed the cabinet that some of the federation's suggestions were already known to the government. Some of these were mentioned briefly.

A planned policy by the government "on which to base necessary adjustments" and abundant egg marketing were emerging over-resentment of the German-French co-operation pact, sparked by France's rejection of Britain's bid to enter the Common Market.

But a government spokesman said no serious opposition showed at a meeting Adenauer called with 30 parliamentary deputies to press for ratification of the pact he signed with President de Gaulle.

Before the meeting, Erhard, Foreign Minister Gerhard Schroeder and Christian Democratic Party manager Josef-Hermann Dufhues conferred separately, leading to speculation of anti-Adenauer manoeuvering.

Erhard told the newspaper Sueddeutsche Zeitung that, "If necessary to preserve Atlantic unity, he would be ready to join in a coalition with the opposition Social Democrats.

There was no immediate reaction from Adenauer, who has said he will retire next fall at 87.

Colonialism Takes Beating At Conference

MOSHI, Tanganyika (Reuters)—Delegates at the 58-nation Afro-Asian Peoples Solidarity Conference today resumed their deliberations following condemnation Monday night of the anti-Communist Malaysia Federation by a North Borneo revolutionary.

Mohammed Abdullah Salim, self-styled "minister of state in the North Kalimantang government," said his people are "peace and freedom-loving" but are prepared to fight for their independence against "colonialism."

Salim said he represents the "revolutionary government" of Sheik A. M. Azahari, leader of the short-lived December revolt in the British protected sultanate of Brunei, on the north coast of Borneo.

"We do not hate the British or the West, but love them as do members of the world family," Salim told the conference, which is meeting in a town on the slopes of Mount Kilimanjaro. "But these are our enemies in the struggle for peace and independence." . . . . . .

Salim condemned the forthcoming British backed, anti-Communist Malaysia Federation as "colonialism." The grouping, which is intended to link Malaya, Singapore and the Borneo territories of Brunei Sarawak and North Borneo, is expected to come into being formally next August.

Chinese Premier Chou En-lai and India Prime Minister Nehru also said in messages they support the principles of unity and peace for Afro-Asian nations set out at the Bandung Afro-Asian conference in 1955.

The Indian delegation hopes the conference will adopt a resolution favoring a friendly settlement of the border dispute but conference sources believe the Chinese will walk out if openly attacked.

Erhard Says He Will Back Atlantic Unity

BONN (AP)—Vice-Chancellor Ludwig Erhard says he will back Atlantic unity even if it means opposing Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and that he is ready to take over as chancellor if backed by Parliament.

The challenge, the strongest bid Erhard has made for the chancellorship, came Monday amid hints that an anti-Adenauer group was emerging over-resentment of the German-French co-operation pact, sparked by France's rejection of Britain's bid to enter the Common Market.

But a government spokesman said no serious opposition showed at a meeting Adenauer called with 30 parliamentary deputies to press for ratification of the pact he signed with President de Gaulle.

Civil Service Head Will Be R. G. MacNeill

OTTAWA (CP) — Robertson G. MacNeill, a 58-year-old Maritimer with 30 years' experience in defence and finance department jobs, has been given the $22,000-a-year task of running the federal civil service.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced in the Commons Monday that Mr. MacNeill is taking over as chairman of the three - member civil service commission, effective immediately.

The new chairman has been an assistant deputy minister in the defence department, finance, line finance, for 12 years. He fills a vacancy created last September with the resignation of Mr. Justice Sam Hughes, 48, who returned to Ontario Supreme Court bench.

Mr. MacNeill, a native of Petitcodiac, N.B., came to Ottawa during the Second World War on a posting to the army's directorate of staff duties, weapons section. In 1947 he was loaned to the director-general of defence research and became comptroller. Some years later he the administrative machinery for this new branch.

A year later he left the army to become secretary of the Defence Research Board. In 1949 he was loaned to the treasury board, a cabinet committee with a large staff which scrutinizes spending by all departments. He became assistant secretary of the treasury board in 1956, a job he held under his defence department appointment.

Want An Elephant, Fleas? Ask Harrods; They Have It

By JAN HODENFIELD

LONDON (AP)—Harrod's is big, (64 acres), swank, (the Queen does her Christmas shopping there), and inimitable.

Its cable address is "Everything London" and that just about sums up what can be found at Harrod's, the world's department store in London's fashionable Knightsbridge section.

Legend has it that a woman tourist strode up to a floorwalker at Harrod's and declared:

"I want to buy an elephant." Without a flicker, the floorwalker replied:

"African or Indian, Madam?"

You can, in fact, get anything in Harrod's, from reindeer meat to a transistor radio covered in swansdown.

You can buy theatre tickets, get your hair cut, eat in three restaurants, buy a rare book and hire a chauffeur-driven car.

Harrod's will decorate your home for you, have you met eastern potentates — and they will lay down a tennis court for you.

They will arrange your wedding in every detail and they will bury you—in the best of taste both times.

EVEN A BANK

Harrod's will cash you insurance and if they can't get your money any other way, they'll bank it for you.

Tourists stop in at Harrod's after those other two musts, the Tower of London and Westminster Abbey, to stock up on Britain's best cashmere and bone china.

To insure that the sun never sets on Harrod's customers, the store will ship their goodies to any accessible point in the world. And what isn't accessible to Harrod's probably hasn't been mapped.

Specialty stores — made from Harrod's own specially raised pigs—are sent to an old customer in Karachi and there are standing orders for steaks from customers in Moscow and Fiji. Harrod's has sent box-camera stricters to Africa and Persian lambs to Iran.

A man in Los Angeles ordered fresh grouse from Scotland. Because of the time differences, Harrod's just called to confirm the birds the same day they were shot. But anyone who would say they didn't try would say anything.

Harrod's began as a grocery store in 1849 and its biggest turnover is still in the food department. Food crowds the customers into the store and once there they will buy the grand pianos—the store has the largest selection in Europe — and the suitcases—Harrod's makes its own.

SQN MADE CHANGES

Probably all Henry Harrod would recognize about the store today is his name.

It was Harrod's son, Charles Digby Harrod, who started building the store into today's colossus.

He began by adding counters for cooked meat, game, confectionery, patent medicine and perfume. He placed his bargains in the far corners of the store, obliging patrons to pass by everything else in their search for stock.

The store succeeded so well under the younger Harrod's management that when he sold it in 1889, and the business became a limited liability company, he received about 25% times the amount he originally paid his father for it.

Richard Burbridge took over the chairmanship and the store has stands today.

In 400 departments covering 13 acres of selling space, a staff of 5,500 does its impeccable best to see that every customer is treated as though he were the king come to tea.

To avoid any slips in protocol, all customers are addressed as sir or madam. Sales clerks are reminded that a single careless remark could antagonize a top account and all the guests she invites to dinner that night.

To discourage any high-pressure salesmanship, the sales staff is paid a lower-than-average commission and a higher-than-usual salary. The staff is taught to sell what the customer wants to buy, not what the clerk wants to push.

Even though 25,000 customers a day pass through Harrod's, the floors are so heavily carpeted, the ceiling so high and airy and the air of decorum so intrinsic that one American department store magnate was prompted to ask when any business was transacted.

As new supermarkets, discount houses and chain stores spring up in Britain, Harrod's remains serenely above the fray.

Harrod's did succumb to the siren song of big business in 1889, when it was bought up, after a bitter stock fight, by department store tycoon Sir Hugh Fraser.

But changes were small and Harrod's today is, if couldn't have been otherwise. For Harrod's to change would not only be unlikely. It would be unthinkable.

Three Countries Try to Save Halibut Fishing

TOKYO (Reuters) — The United States, Canada and Japan began five days of talks today on measures to conserve the halibut resources in the eastern Bering Sea.

The talks were expected to have considerable influence later this year when negotiations begin for a new fishery treaty among the three nations.

This week's meeting was expected to concentrate on what voluntary restrictions Japan should observe in the interests of conserving halibut resources.

The present halibut fishery treaty limits the fishing season, the size of halibut that may be caught and the methods of catching them. It permits fishing with lines but not with nets.

Japan has pressed for a net fishing since halibut found near the bottom of the sea are bound to be caught with other fish during net fishing.

The Canadian team is led by deputy fisheries minister George Clark.

Russians Seek To Testify Against Nazis

MOSCOW (AP) — The West German embassy said today it has granted visas to eight Russians coming to the capital as witnesses at the war crimes trial of 12 former Nazis at Coblenz, West Germany.

The embassy still withheld visas for five Soviet lawyers who also had applied to appear at the trial, now in its fourth month.

The Russians claim that the 12 defendants in the Coblenz trial are responsible for the slaying during the war of nearly 1,500,000 people, mostly Jews, in White Russia.

The December figures showed a fall of £329,000,000 ($84,000,000) after the payment of nearly $67,000,000 pounds to the United States and Canada for post-war loans.

Drugs Marked To Find if Cuba Trades Them

NEW YORK (AP)—A pharmaceutical manufacturer says some of the drugs sent to Premier Fidel Castro as part payment for the release of Cuban prisoners carry a special marking.

They were labelled this way as a means of learning whether Castro sells or barters them abroad rather than using them in Cuba, the manufacturer says. He asked not to be identified.

Drugs accounted for about half of the $53,000,000 in goods which Castro made the price for releasing 1,113 Bay of Pigs prisoners at Christmas time.

Makers of the drugs, surgical instruments and baby foods contributed their products to make up the payment figure. But some items requested by Castro made them wonder whether the Cuban government planned to use them all in Cuba, or exchange or sell them for other products his economy — or his military establishment — needs, this informant said.

As a tracer, one pharmaceutical manufacturer put a special mark on the packages of drugs he supplied. The mark was not altered in any way, but the packages sent to Cuba bear a number which differs from the customary legends and markings on them.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Conversational aftermath of the recently-concluded Bay of Quinte Bonspiel is that the success of the club competition constitutes a challenge to similar curling functions of Eastern and Central Ontario for top honors in events of this nature.

Officials of the three spon-soring clubs—Quinte, Trenton, and Trenton RCAF—and the committees in charge of the district bonspiel, might be excused for some slight chest expansion after the "smoke" of competition had cleared away.

There is no doubt that the 1963 edition of the three-club bonspiel was an unqualified success. After all, 256 stone-happy curling addicts, and heavens knows how many non-playing buffs, ranging from twelve to eighty cannot be wrong.

There is a lot of back-slapping, hand-shaking and other half-fellow-well-met gestures at curling events of this nature—in fact fh any curling competition—but don't let that misguide you. When those broom-wielding, stone-twisting sportsmen—and sportswomen too,—get down to the business of competition, all friendship, so to speak, ceases.

The camaraderie, good fellowship, and hospitality that are some of the main characteristics of curling do not in any way affect the curler's desire to win when he is on the ice. Rivalry, though extremely friendly in the great majority of cases, is keen and in no other realm of sport is the "May the better man win" more evident or more sincere.

This was clearly apparent in the 1963 Bay of Quinte Bonspiel. These curlers from all parts of the district and some from the far, faraway places, clad in flamboyant sweater, gay Glengarry and colorful tam, a lot of them proudly wearing the crests and other insignals of former curling conquests and triumphs, went out on the ice with one thing in mind—victory—if possible.

A keen, competitive spirit was apparent from the "get's" down to the finals. Some pre-spiel favorites fell by the wayside. Gradually, as one curling official said, "the men were separated from the boys." He did not mean this literally but spoke, I believe, as the fortunes of the curling "war" swung to and fro.

But for every winner there must be a loser. Lady Luck may have had something to do with some of the more closely-fought matches but top-flight curlers are the last to admit it—audibly.

The ultimate winners of the many beautiful trophies are worthy champions of their classes. And the first to admit it were those fine sportsmen who went down to defeat. Curling, I believe, is unique in one sense of the word. It is one of the more grudge-free sports. Perhaps in no other sport is a winner more valiant in victory and the loser more gallant in defeat.

But there is more to a bonspiel of the nature of the Bay of Quinte's annual tri-club event than vieing for trophies and enjoying the fine hospitality provided by each of the three clubs.

Events of the magnitude of this nature call for much pre-spiel work and effort. Plans must be made weeks in advance. The draws, social functions, looking after the inner man, etc., all for the closest cooperation of officials of the clubs. Bill Riley, general chairman of the bonspiel and his committee associates are to be highly commended.

Meets Dick Tiger, Feb. 23

Win Title,-Or Quit--Fullmer

Written for The AP
By GENE FULLMER

WEST JORDAN, Utah (AP) —I am fighting Dick Tiger at Las Vegas, Nevada, on Saturday, Feb 23, not for money but for the simple fact that I feel that I can regain my title.

This was not a sudden decision. I have been fighting professionally since 1951 and long ago made myself the promise that when I saw my skills go, that's when I would retire. Naturally, I discussed my decision for the return fight with Riger with my manager, Marv Jenson, and my wife. They would be the first to stop me if they believed I didn't have it any more.

I don't want to take any credit away from Tiger. He's a real good fighter who will get better because he holds the championship. He is tough and courageous. He is as good a body puncher as I have ever fought and is smart in that ring. He fought a great fight against me on a night when I fought the wrong kind of fight. I didn't think he was as rugged as he proved and his punches hurt. But I know him now and I know I can do better.

I have no alibis for losing but I can readily point out that it was a long time between fights for me. From December to October is much too long.

DISAGREE WITH STORIES

I am a little puzzled by the stories which said I took a fearful beating from Tiger. Unfortunately I have the kind of face that lumps easy and things look a lot worse than they really are at times. I was bleeding badly from a cut over my left eye, which was almost closed. And I bleed, I do a good job. I was a mess to the people looking on.

Again, I don't want to detract from Tiger's victory. But let's look at the result. The Associated Press score was 11 as seven rounds for Tiger, five for me and three even. And I took three of the last four rounds including the last one. Does that constitute a fearful beating?

As to the strategy for this coming fight, I'm convinced the Tiger camp doesn't think I can change my style. I'm glad they may be in for a bit of surprise.

I'm 31 years old. That's two years younger than Tiger and, as fighters go, still young. I've only had 61 fights an since 1958 have only fought 15 times, less than four fights a year. I've never been a dissipator. I don't smoke or drink. I've made every sacrifice asked of me to be a dedicated fighter. It has borne fruit and it will do so again.

I've won the middleweight championship twice. I'm going to make it three times. I'll quit if I don't.

COMMON ILLNESS

The American Medical Association has revealed that almost 2,000,000 persons in the United States suffer from epilepsy in some degree.

Happy With Change

'Birds' Sign Aparicio

NEW YORK (CP)—The baseball trade that sent Luis Aparicio from Chicago White Sox to Baltimore Orioles last month already is paying off as far as the speedy shortstop is concerned.

There's nothing like a change of uniform and a new contract to make a discontented player happy. Aparicio showed his satisfaction by signing his 1963 American League contract Monday.

It was reported the 29-year-old Venezuelan will receive about $37,500, the same salary he drew from the White Sox last season.

Luis was miffed when the White Sox threatened him with a sizable pay slash before the trade. He was quoted as saying he would quit the game if his salary was cut.

Aparicio, the American League's leading base - stealer for seven straight seasons, went to the Orioles with Al Smith in a trade for Hoyt Wilhelm, Ron Hansen, Dave Nicholson and Pete Ward of Montreal, son of former hockey Star Jimmy Ward.

Aparicio joined Chicago in 1956.

Other signings Monday included:

Milwaukee Braves — shortstop Roy McMillan.

Los Angeles Angels—pitcher Jack Spring.

Philadelphia Phillies — second baseman Tonylor, pitcher Jack Hamilton.

Boston-Rangers Swap

McKenney For Prentice

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Rangers and Boston Bruins, in a bold move between clubs going nowhere in the National Hockey League race, have swapped star players. Don McKenney moved to New York and Dean Prentice to Boston.

The trade Monday broke up the Rangers' No. 1 line of Prentice, high - scoring Andy Bathgate and Earl Ingarfield.

McKenney, a 28-year-old centre, has scored 20 or more goals in each of the last six years. He has 14 goals and 19 assists for the last-place Bruins this season.

WAS BOSTON CAPTAIN

The Lady Byng winner for sportsmanship in 1959-60, McKenney Bruins' captain, has spent only two minutes in the penalty box this year. In nine seasons in the NHL, he has scored 195 goals with a career high of 32 in 1958-59.

Prentice, a 30-year-old left winger, has been a 20-goal man for the last three years. He has been in the NHL for 11 years, scoring 186 goals. His high was 32 in 1959-60. Prentice has 13 goals and 25 assists for the fifth-place Rangers during the current campaign.

The move was the Rangers' latest in an effort to acquire more strength at the centre position. Last week they got Bryan Hexall Jr., a centre, and Leon Rochefort, a right winger, from Baltimore Clippers and demoted centres Jean Ratelle and Ted Hampson to the Clippers, of the American League.

The Bruins also have made numerous changes since Milt Schmidt replaced Phil Watson as coach in November. Among Boston's other recent acquisitions is Forbes Kennedy, obtained from Detroit Red Wings.

To Hold Conference March 2-3

Dyson 'Meets The Press'

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — Geoffrey Dyson's first assignment as director on the Royal Canadian Legion's sports training program will be to attend a national conference on track and field to be held in Ottawa March 2-3.

Plans for the meeting were announced Monday at a press conference here to introduce the British athletic coach to sports writers.

The legion also announced that Dyson will preside at a national clinic for track and field coaches in Guelph Aug 12-20. It wra his work at a similar clinic in the Ontario centre last year that prompted the Legion to sign him to a five-year contract to direct their growing sports program. But he'll also be available to other associations who want his help.

Private organizations such as the Canadian Olympic Committee and the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada and several government departments will be asked to help draft a plan to develop higher standards in track and field sports in Canada at the two-day Ottawa meeting.

Dyson said that lack of competition and, the drain on Canada's better athletes to the United States are among the reasons Canada doesn't show up well in the Olympics, Pan-American and British Empire Games.

Competitors and equipment never were important but coaches must provide the inspiration to young Canadians to want to excel in sports. But there should be no attempt to turn out athletes like sausages.

While there are basic principles for all to follow, he would not attempt to dictate methods and techniques to Canadian coaches in his role as "coach of the coaches," Dyson said.

Dyson, coach of British Olympic teams in 1956, 1960, said the Guelph clinic last year "was the best I have ever been associated with."

Kingston Defeats Trenton 20-4

KINGSTON (CP) — Trenton was forced to drop out of the Eastern Ontario Junior B Hockey League two weeks ago because its team was too weak.

League officials decided to allow Trenton to pick up intermediate players to continue the schedule on an exhibition basis.

The new Trentonians played their first such game Sunday night against Kingston Junior Frontenacs.

They lost 20-4.

Nicklaus' 65 Wins Classic Playoff

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (CP) —Gary Player's biggest obstacle in a golf-playoff seems to be his record.

The South African may be one of the world's finest golfers during the regular rounds of a tournament—but he's a bust if has to go any further.

After a brilliant comeback Sunday earned him a share of the lead, Player dropped the 18-hole playoff round in the annual Palm Springs Classic Monday to husky young Jack Nicklaus.

It was the ninth playoff loss in succession for Player since he turned pro.

Nicklaus is $9,000 richer as a result of his win.

"Some weeks you have to work only four days for $9,000," smiled Nicklaus, 23, former United Sikles Open Champion. "But this week I had to shoot six."

The husky young newcomer to the pro circuit carded a sizzling 34-31—65, six under par, in the playoff. Player's 36-37—73 was a nightmare, topped by a three-over par seven on the 12th hole.

HORROR UNFOLDS

Nicklaus birdied the first hole to take a one-stroke lead, was two shots up after nine and then watched, along with the gallery, in amazement, as Player's horror unfolded on the 12th. He had personal contact with three palm trees, a trap, and a missed putt.

It started when his tee shot landed under a low palm to the right of the fairway. He had to stoop over to hit the ball and it sailed across the fairway and came to rest under another palm.

Player had to hit the shot left - handed. The ball hit a third palm and bounced back 30 yards. He pitched into a trap but came out fairly well, five feet past the hole. Then he missed the putt.

That left Player six strokes behind and Nicklaus finished him off by holing 35-foot putts on the last two holes for a birdie and an eagle.

Marshall Takes Over Score Lead

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Marshall probably didn't appreciate it at the time, but the assist he got on Hershey Bears' lone goal in their 10-1 drubbing by Rochester Americans Sunday made him the scoring leader in the American Hockey League.

Bill Sweeney of Springfield Indians, who did not play last week because of a broken toe, fell out of first place for the first time in 13 weeks.

League statistics released today show Marshall, a 155-pounder from Kirkland Lake, has 61 points on 24 goals and 37 assists. Sweeney is second with 60 on 18 goals and 42 assists.

Two Buffalo Bison marksmen, Art Stratton and John McKenzie, are tied for third with 58 points. Hank Claxton of Cleveland Barons rounds out the first five with 56.

Denis DeJordy of Buffalo and Charlie Hodge of Quebec Aces continued their hot race in the goaltending race at mid-term. By carrying the averages into an extra fraction, DeJordy gained a slight edge. He has a goals-against average of 2.822 to Hodge's 2.826.

CAHA To Promote Puck Leadership

Gets 'Fitness' Grant Of $50,000

TORONTO (CP)—With a $50,000 bankroll provided by the Canadian Council of Fitness and Amateur Sport, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has received final approval for what it hopes will be a program to promote hockey leadership.

The CAHA drafted plans for simultaneous courses at the University of Alberta in Edmonton; the University of Saskatchewan at Regina; either Royal Military College or Queen's University, both at Kingston; a French-language course at the University of Montreal; and at the University of New Brunswick in Fredericton.

Each course will be conducted by a staff of four drawn from among coaches and physical educationists in leading amateur hockey and university positions.

CAHA officials said each course will be attended by up to 300 coaches whose transportation, board and lodging will be paid. Most will be between 23 and 30 years of age so they can be expected to contribute from 12 to 15 years of experience toward developing hockey.

The courses will emphasize coaching techniques, with instruction in character development, behavior patterns, physical conditioning diet, amateur philosophy, equipment, treatment of injuries and public relations.

A budget of about $9,000 has been set for each course.

Tommy Williams Says

Americans Can Make NHL

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Williams has more than the usual incentive to reach the 20-goal plateau in the National Hockey League.

"I want to set an example for the youngsters in this country and show them that an American can make the grade in the NHL," the Boston Bruins' right winger said Monday.

Williams, from Duluth, Minn., is the only American - bred player in the big league. He has 17 goals.

There have been fewer than a score of American - developed players who have starred in Canada's national sport. Among them were Boston's Frank Brimsek and Chicago's Johnny Mariucci and Mike Karakas. All were from the Minnesota area.

"There will be much more of a chance for American kids to make it in the NHL in the immediate future," Williams said. "There are more rinks in the midwest and New England. I've seen quite a few good young players around."

Williams, who scored six goals in 26 games for Boston last season, said he expected to be sent to Kingston of the Eastern Professional League, a Bruins farm club, shortly after the start of the current campaign. "Then they put me on a line with Johnny Bucyk and Murray Oliver and what a break that was."

The trio has developed into the League's No. 1 production line, having accounted for 39 tallies.

Kingpetch Is Boxer Of Month

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—Thailand's Pone Kingpetch, the recrowned world flyweight champion, Monday was named Boxer of the Month by the World Boxing Association and undefeated Cassius Clay was boosted to No. 2 heavyweight contender.

Pone became the first 112-pound champion ever to regain the title when he outpointed Japan's Fighting Harada at Bangkok Jan. 12.

The cocky, talkative Clay was elevated from third place to second among the contenders for Sonny Liston's heavyweight crown. He replaced Sweden's Ingemar Johansson, who was dropped from second to third.

Doug Jones, of New York, maintained his fifth-place ranking among the heavyweights. He will meet Clay at New York March 12. The No. 1 contender is Floyd Patterson and Cleveland Williams of Houston, Tex., is fourth.

May Foil Pole Vault Dream Meet

NEW YORK (AP) — The ream pole vault competition, bringing together eight members of the exclusive 16-foot club, may be foiled later this month by the still unsettled U.S. track and field civil war.

The Amateur Athletic Union announced Monday that seven of the eight men who have attained 16 feet in the pole vault, are expected to shoot at the 16-foot mark in the U.S. National AAU indoor championships here Feb. 23.

The absentee may be K. G. Yang, the Nationalist Chinese star from UCLA whose 16 feet 3¼ inches is second only to the 16-8½ recorded last Saturday by Finland's Pentti Nikula. Col. Don Hull, executive director of the AAU, said the other seven had indicated they would be on hand.

UCLA announced that Yang would not be permitted to compete unless the AAU sought sanction from the rival U.S. Track and Field Federation. The AAU has no intention of doing that.

The others to crash the 16-foot club are Rolando Cruz (16-4½), Dave Tork (16-2½), Don Meyers (16-1½, John Uelses (16-1), John Belitza (16-1) and Ron Morris (16-1).

Cobourg Nips Lightfoots In Hoop Play

Cobourg moved a step closer to a playoff spot in the Bay of Quinte basketball league by defeating Belleville Lightfoots 62-57 in a game played at the RCAF air station last night.

The win was a big one for Cobourg since Lightfoots is the club that Cobourg must catch to grab a playoff spot. Cobourg has won two games and lost four since entering the league at Christmas. Lightfoots, in all year, have won three and lost 12.

Cobourg led 37-25 at the half way mark last night and while the Lightfoots cut the margin in the second half they were unable to overtake the winners.

Gord Harris paced Cobourg with 18 points, closely followed by John Gradish with 16 and Garry Quinlan with 14.

Don Skinner was best for the Belleville crew, hooping 18 points, while Don Smith had 15 and Gord Mutter 13.

Cobourg (62): G. Quinlan 14, G. Harris 18, D. Clarke 8, J. Gradish 16, J. Moorhouse, B. Ward 6.

Belleville Lightfoots (57): D. Smith 15, G. Mutter 13, B. Marner, G. Reynolds 7, D. Skinner 18, T. Ewing, C. Allenby 3, D. Morden 8.

Canadian 'Cassius' 'Bullet' Jones Turns Pro

MONTREAL (CP) — Ron (Bullet) Jones, the Canadian version of Cassius Clay, the Louisville Lip, has decided to leave amateur boxing and start campaigning as a professional.

Promoter Regis Loves us of Trois - Rivieres, Que., said Monday night Jones and his manager, Jimmy Caruso, have agreed to a six-round bout set for a pro card here Feb. 25.

Jones is the Montreal middleweight who proclaimed an amateur alive could beat him and then lost a preliminary round bout at the British Empire Games in Australia last November.

The decision against him by a team of international judges drew a protest from Canadian officials and Ron said later he didn't really feel too bad about it "because in my heart I knew I had won."

Apart from the B.E.G. setback, Jones is unbeaten. He lists his record as 14 knockouts, two decisions and "one robbery."

His opponent Feb. 25 will be Win Mayer, an unknown from the New York area.

Levesque also said Canadian heavyweight champ Bob Cleroux of Montreal will meet Garvin—Sawyer of the New York area in a non-title 10-rounder on the card.

Top Hawks Use Less Players

Quality Over Quantity In NHL?

MONTREAL (CP)—That old maxim about quality over quantity could be applied to the National Hockey League at this stage in the current schedule.

Take the league-leading Chicago Black Hawks for example. The Hawks have used only 19 players so far, compared with 20 or more at this time in the five teams in the league, and it is starting to pay off.

Chicago now has a four-point edge at the top of the standings, and individual Hawks are also the biggest stars in the scoring race last week — an average of 7½ points for each of the four Chicago players in the top 24.

This compares with an average of a little more than three points each for the five top Montreal Canadiens, a mere less than three points each for the four Toronto players who rank among the top 24.

Montreal and Toronto are tied for second place in the standings with 30 points each.

MIKITA MAKES JUMP

Official NHL statistics released today show Stan Mikita has ranked highest among Chicago gainers. The scrappy centre picked up eight points on five goals and his highest assists and moved from a seventh-place tie with Dean Prentice, Murray Oliver of Boston. Both have 52 points.

Other Chicago gainers include Bobby Hull, last season's 50-goal scoring leader who picked up seven points; Ab McDonald, six; and Bill (Red) Hay, seven.

Leading the scoring race is Johnny Bucyk, the Detroit Red-shelling Boston Bruins, credited with one goal and three assists in his week for a total of 55 points.

Big Frank Mahovlich of Toronto had no one goal and three assists, ranks second with 54. Bobby M leads in goals scored with 27.

Fifth spot is held jointly by Jean Beliveau, Montreal's Jean Beliveau, both with 31-point totals, Beliveau, big Bill Gadsby and Bobby Hull leads the league in that department.

HULL TAKES LEAD

Chicago also gained ground in the goaltending division as Glenn Hall took over the leadership in the Vezina Trophy race from Montreal's ailing Jacques Plante.

The trophy goes to the goalie who plays most games for the team with the fewest goals scored against it. Chicago has allowed 118 goals in 51 games for a goals-against average of 2.31, while Montreal has a 2.42 average on 121 goals-against in 50 games.

Leadership in the penalty department also belongs to the Hawks, who have served a total of 629 minutes.

Ted Young, Detroit defenceman whose individual penalty total of 171 minutes is top in the league, has broken a team record already and is well on his way toward setting a new mark for the NHL.

The former Detroit team record was 161 minutes, set by Ted Lindsay in 1952-56. In that same season, the NHL record of 202 minutes was set by defenceman Lou Fontinato of Montreal, then with New York.

The leaders:

Pit Martin Ups Junior Race Lead

TORONTO (CP)—Pit Martin of Hamilton Red Wings has increased his edge by three points in the Ontario Hockey Association Provincial Junior A scoring race. He has 31 goals and 46 assists for 72 points.

Wayne Maxner of Niagara Falls Flyers is second with 69 points on 23 goals and 46 assists.

The scoring race has been a two - man struggle for some time. Three weeks ago the rivals were tied for first, Martin led by a single point two weeks ago and they were tied again last week.

The standings, compiled after Sunday's game, show Paul Henderson of Hamilton in fourth with 59 goals and 24 assists for 83 points. Henderson is the league's leading goal getter. Bill Inglis of Montreal Canadiens holds down fourth place with 32 goals and 51 assists for 56 points.

Peterborough Petes' Chuck Gallant remains the league's top goalie with a 2.51 goals-against average.

Plans Russ Yank Series

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States Eastern Hockey League called for stricter officiating for the rest of the season at a meeting of team representatives and league officials Monday.

Tom Lockhart, president of the amateur league, said referees were told to crack down on the season at a meeting of team representatives and league officials Monday.

Lockhart leaves for Moscow today in an attempt to arrange an exhibition series in the 1963 next season between a Russian team and six EHL teams.

If the tour works out, Lockhart hopes an EHL all - star team will tour Russia for a series of games the following year.

Minor Hockey Week

Picton, Scarboro Split

PICTON — Around seven hundred brewed inclement weather and slushy walking to attend Minor Hockey Week's attraction, a double - header between Scarboro and Picton teams. They were rewarded by two sparkling games with each centre coming up with a win. However, the classy Scarboro teams were playing teams above their own class, the bantams taking on Picton midgets, while their midgets took on Picton Juveniles. The latter game saw two evenly matched teams and a brand of hockey comparable to that played by juniors gave the fans plenty of action and thrills. Scarboro took this one 2 - 1.

Picton midgets took their game with Scarboro bantams, 9 to 2, in another good game.

More important than the points were the friendly competition, good sportsmanship and experience, and Picton players were anticipating a visit to Scarboro.

Bob Brown and Ken Hasenal were referees. Don Duffy is coach and Edgar Keep, manager of the Juveniles and Brian Beatty, coach and K. Hasenah, manager of the midgets.

Assistant coaches of the Scarboro Bantams is Rosalind Edwards. Many Toronto parents motored the players to Picton. Members of the Bantam team remained overnight, guests in local homes.

Summary of Picton midget, Scarboro Bantam game:

Scarboro — Terry Frain (goal); Davy Boyle, Dave Rowan, Bruce Darmley, Mike Keeler, J. McNulty, Dave Edwards, Steve Cuddie, David Paulikol, David Rae, D. Landell, Bill Pitfield, S. Pryzanski, Paul Regan, Brian Jensen.

Scarboro Juveniles — Dave Clinton (goal); Armand Giroux, Bill McLean, Larry Hughes, Dave Hamilton, Tom Gorfitte, Doug Mitchell, Dave Chalmers, Brad Park, Syl Apps, Dave Brown, Pete Bunyon, Roger Landell, Wayne Hambly.

GOLFER HONORED

CHICAGO (AP)—Dick Sikes, winner of the United States National public links title the last two years and a member of the 1961 Walker Cup team in the Walker Cup matches in Scotland this spring, was named golf's Putter of the Year Monday. # No Longer Sammy Swinger I'm Domesticated - - Davis

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It was just a little more than two years ago that Sammy Davis Jr., a Negro, married Mai Britt, a Swede, in a Jewish wedding.

It was a wedding filled with controversy — and glamor. Frank Sinatra was best man; Peter Lawford, brother-in-law of the president, was an usher and Mrs Lawford, the president's sister, kissed the groom and asked:

"How do you feel, Chicky-baby?"

Today Sammy says:

"Man, if anyone could have told me two years ago I would be this happy, I wouldn't have believed it.

"I'm a changed man. I love my wife. I love my home. I love my babies. I'm no longer Sammy the swinger. Man, I'm domesticated.

"Mai never tried to make me change. But not asking me to, I became a model husband."

The trim blonde actress takes no credit for the change but makes no secret of the fact that she is glad it happened.

"I'm changed too," says Mai. "I don't care if I ever act again. All I care about is my husband and my children."

ADOPTED NEGRO BOY

The Davises are parents of a daughter, Tracy Hillevi, age 15 months. Recently they adopted a Negro big brother for Tracy — Mark, 2½.

Davis and Mai explain why they adopted a Negro boy.

"If people like us don't adopt Negro children, who will?"

Davis has only one regret with his new image as family man.

"I'd love to make it here in town on television or the movies but, let's face it, there's no steady market for me.

"They told me I'm not commercial in the south. I argued that southerners are only interested in whether I entertain them. When I play Florida, I have white people drive in from Alabama and Mississippi to see the show.

"So I got to make my living in the saloons. Sometimes Mai and the kids can join me — in Las Vegas and San Francisco — but most of the time I'm holed up alone in a hotel room."

Both Sammy and Mai say the first year of marriage was the hardest.

HATE LETTERS

"Man, it was the threats. You wouldn't believe it. I used to get as many as five or six a night every time I appeared in a club.

"And the mail — the hate letters. Th ngs got so bad I had to hire a bodyguard.

"Fortunately, I got the brunt of the attacks. Then, all of a sudden, they stopped We haven't had a hate letter in months."

Tracy is the only explanation. "A baby is a miracle," says Sammy, "and a baby can work miracles."

Somehow all the threats and letters stopped when people saw pictures of Tracy. Even the haters realized that Mai and I had the right to bring up our children in human beings."

How about friends? Did he lose any because of his mixed marriage?

"Sure. There have been so-called friends, show business people, who used to invite me to their homes. I haven't heard from them since our marriage.

"The good friends I had before my marriage are better friends today."

Firemen Money-Raising Brains Behind Carnival

By REMI D'ANJOU

QUEBEC (CP) — Two enterprising firemen are the money-raising brains behind the annual Quebec Winter Carnival.

Jean-Paul Couture and Roger Beaule direct a squad of 50 firefighters who spend many hours off-work hours this time of year selling lapel-size models of Bonhomme Carnaval, the traditional symbol of the carnival which this year runs from Feb. 6 to Feb. 24.

The money finances the lively carnival festivities.

"We sold 183,000 bonhommes last year and hope to sell 240,000 this year," said Mr. Couture when with Mr. Beaule works about 15 hours a day organizing the sales operation.

Starting a month before the carnival and continuing until its final day, firemen, after finishing their day's work, walk the streets of Quebec selling the lapel pins for 25 cents each.

The campaign brought in $37,000 last year and firemen hope to hit $50,000 this year. They're helped by the fact that the pins are lighter in weight than those of a year ago when many women firefighters who spend many hours off-work hours this time of year because they pulled their collars out of shape.

The money pays for the big parade through the city as well as such events as the canoe race across the water and feet of the St. Lawrence River.

Bonhommes are not only sold in Quebec. "One load in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., ordered 100 bonhommes to distribute to Canadians taking winter vacations." Mr. Couture says.

While his effigy is being sold, the real Bonhomme Carnaval prepares for his big role. The oversized walking, talking snowman's arrival in the middle of the long parade marked by many floats signals the official opening of the internationally known carnival.

Parents Delay Boycott of School Board

JARVIS (CP)—Fifty parents of 292 children attending North Walpole Township schools have agreed to postpone a boycott of the school board slated for Monday.

But they have given the board only one more week to stop shuffling pupils from one school to another.

A petition signed by parents Jan. 3 but made public only on Friday, said starting Feb. 4 children will be sent "only to those schools where they would normally attend."

It also stated that they will keep their children off the one bus provided by the board to transport pupils from one school to another in the township.

Pupils are shifted about the township's eight schools by bus because some of the schools are overcrowded, said John Carter, secretary of the board.

Emerson Phillips, of Hagersville, spokesman for the parents, said the boycott will be postponed until after parents meet with the school board in Garnet Thursday.

Needful for Singers, Pianists To Add Strings to Bow

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Once upon a time when audiences sought out entertainment, the figures beyond the footlights were accepted or rejected almost completely in terms of their talents.

But talent—as a singer, as a pianist—just isn't enough now, when the entertainment, via television, seeks the audiences.

"If a performer makes a successful record album or two, people become interested in seeing him," explained pianist Peter Nero. "But after they've seen him once they can get back to playing his records."

Thus it has become necessary for singers and instrumentalists to add other strings to their bows. Nero, like many others, is developing a side-line of icebreaking talk.

TALK STILL SECONDARY

"Every musician wants to communicate through his music," the Brooklyn-born pianist admitted. "If I can make people understand my music better by talking, I must certainly do it. But I will not sacrifice artistic integrity — I'll talk, smile, kid around, but the music will be there."

The 25-year-old keyboard artist is kept busy with guest appearances on most of television's top variety shows. One of his worst problems is persuading writers to give him some time.

"The writers think the musicians can't talk. Last season I was on a Bob Newhart show, and was hoping to have a chance to exchange some remarks with him. But they had Bob come out with his drums and ask if I'd play with him. 'Love to,' I was to say.

"Exactly a year later, I was doing a George Gobel show, and he came out with his guitar and asked if I'd play with him. 'Love to, George,' was my line. That's about all it was to say."

Greer Garson will play Mrs. Disraeli to Trevor Howard's prime minister in The Indefensible Mr. Disraeli, the Anvil Hall of Fame drama on NBC - Gary Moore, singing tenor with Dick Martin presiding over the audience warmup for Lucille Ball's program.

International Commodity Pacts Sought

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP)—Two representatives of British agriculture flew to North America yesterday to press a plan for international commodity agreements.

Harold Woolley, president of the National Farmers Union, and Asher Winegarten, chief union economist, left London Airport for the U.S. on the first leg of a journey that will take in Washington and Ottawa.

In Ottawa, Woolley and Winegarten will hold talks Thursday with H. H. Hannam, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture.

Woolley said one of his main aims will be to discuss the union's world food program, outlined last August, which stresses the practical aspects of international commodity agreements.

NEED STABILITY

"The ability of primary producers to continue to buy industrial products is entirely dependent on a reasonable stability of prices," said Woolley. "There is no surer way of ending the inhuman and potentially dangerous situation of too much food in one section of the world and too little in another."

Woolley said that up until now the program has been "hamstrung" by British negotiations at Brussels on entry into the Common Market.

"Once they are over, we can go ahead with talks on our commodity plan," he said.

He said the plan is "an alternative to the Common Market" and the British government should take the initiative and call for an international agriculture conference.

The Farmers Union represents some 200,000 members, about 80 per cent of the farming population in England and Wales.

Talented Austrian Actor To Be Featured in Western

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Achtung! Head 'em off at der cross-roads."

This will not—repeat, not—be included in the dialogue of an upcoming Virginian television show. Bought it might well be. Guest star on the 90-minute western is Karl Boehm, handsome and talented Austrian actor.

The realization of a childhood dream—playing in a western," says Boehm. "Like every European, I was wild for western movies. High Noon was my special favorite. And now to be in a western! It's great, even if 85 per cent of the show is indoors."

He plays an immigrant carpenter who gets involved in a murder trial. He's allowed one minor gunfight, but the rest is mostly dialogue. Even though the breakneck schedule is the equivalent of shooting a feature film in eight days, he is pleased. And he sees no reason to apologize for having an accent in a western.

"The movies takes place in 1890, when many of the people in this country were first-generation Americans," he says. "If westerns were really authentic, 60 per cent of the actors would speak with accents."

SON OF CONDUCTOR

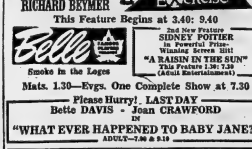
Boehm, son of famed musical conductor Karl Boehm, started in the cinema theatre and rose rapidly to star in plays in films throughout Europe. He came here two years ago to play the young Nazi in The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, which he terms "a failure, but an important one."

He followed with the more felicitious Wonderful World of the Brothers Grimm....

Boehm is not like some European stars who sniff at Hollywood and its product. His opinions are good for local morale, which has sagged of late.

"There's no reason why Hollywood should feel bad," he says. "It is doing much better than the European film industries.

"Of the 12 best films made last year, I would say all but three were American-made. The French industry is in terrible shape. Five years ago when the New Wave was at its peak, any man under 22 could say, 'I believe in film for a film,' and producers would say, 'make it.'



"Last year there were 70 French pictures, some with names like Jean Gabin, that couldn't even get released. No producers are in bad shape, and they aren't helped by the fact that the government is against the film industry.

Gross Tops Senior A Score Race

GALT (CP) — With three weeks left in the regular schedule, only two players in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League have scored more than 30 goals. Eight others have scored more than 20.

Bobby Brown of league-leading Windsor Bulldogs is the top goal scorer with 34, but trails linemate Irwin Gross in total points. Gross, with 24 goals, has 80 points, three more than Brown.

Tommy Walker, another Windsor winger, is the other player with more than 30 goals. He has 32 and is in fifth place in the scoring with 56 points, league statistics released today show.

Ted Power of Chatham is third in scoring with 29 goals and a total of 63 points. Fourth is Lou Bendo of Windsor with 25 goals and 38 assists for 63 points.

Players with over 20 goals are Gross, Power, Bendo, Carl Hymer, Jerry Theberge and Art Sullivan, all of Woodstock Athletics; George Usitalo of Chatham Maroons and Jack Costello of Windsor.

The league's top goalie continued to be Chatham's Al Bennett, with six shutouts and an average of 2.65 goals-a-game allowed. Wayne Rutledge of Windsor is second with 3.17.

Man-in-the News

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—Hon. Douglas Harkness the man in the middle, has declined to be squeezed any more.

Soon after he became defence minister in October, 1960, Mr. Harkness blurted out to a reporter that it would be "foolish" for Canadian forces not to have nuclear weapons.

Ever since then—up to Monday when he made public his resignation from the cabinet—Mr. Harkness had been caught between military and political forces not of his making.

Long before Mr. Harkness took over the defence portfolio the government announced acquisition of two nuclear weapons carriers—the Bomarc antiaircraft missile and the CF-104 low-level jet bomber—and said it was negotiating with the U.S. to acquire the nuclear warheads for them.

Mr. Harkness, now 59, had no need to force the nuclear pace as long as the weapons carriers weren't in service.

CAME INTO SERVICE

But as these carriers — the Voodoo jet interceptor and Honest John artillery rocket, besides the Bomarc and CF-104—gradually came into use in the armed forces and no nuclear warheads were provided for them, his position became more and more difficult.

The Honest John battery was sent to Europe in December, 1961. The RCAF took over the first Bomarc squadron at North Bay, Feb. 1, 1962. The Voodoo came into service last spring and the first CF-104 squadron was formed in West Germany in December.

Mr. Harkness kept advising—in the privacy of cabinet—that nuclear agreement with the U.S. should be signed.

The government declined to accept this advice. The pressure on the minister began to tell. His voice almost cracked several times in the Commons last Thursday night as he argued that there was no contradiction between his stand and Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

But something happened Friday or Saturday. "I am afraid I can't tell you," he told reporters later—which caused him to write out his resignation Sunday.

"I feel I made the best fight I could," he said. "I regret only that I didn't succeed."

SAVED TRAPPED MEN

Mr. Harkness won the George Medal July 5, 1943, when he helped save the lives of men trapped in a torpedoed troopship in the Mediterranean. He was an artillery major at the time and later became a lieutenant-colonel.

Mr. Harkness was born in Toronto March 28, 1903, and was graduated from the University of Alberta. He joined the militia in 1928. He bought a ranch near Red Deer, Alta., and taught history in high school to help keep it going.

He was nominated Progressive Conservative candidate in Calgary East while participating in the final battles west of the Rhine as commander of the 5th Anti-Tank Regiment. He won election in that seat in 1945 and 1949 and, after the 1952 seat redistribution, in 1953, 1957, 1958 and 1962 in Calgary North.

He was appointed Northern affairs minister when Prime Minister Diefenbaker formed his first cabinet in 1957. He was later agriculture minister for four years.

He plays good bridge, better poker, takes soda with his rye and shoots "erratic"—his word —golf.

He never get mad at the game of golf," he says.

Former PC Member Against Govt. Stand

TORONTO (CP) — Frederick M. Stinson, former Progressive Conservative member of Parliament, made a strongly worded attack Monday night on the government's stand on nuclear arms for Canadian forces.

Mr. Stinson, member for York Centre from 1957 until his defeat last June by Liberal James E. Walker, said he cannot support the recent statements on defence by Prime Minister Diefenbaker, nor his "anti-American sentiments."

He said he will not run for Parliament again.

"It appears that these sentiments will be part of his proposed election campaign," Mr. Stinson told the riding's Conservative Association.

He said he believes Canada is committed to acquiring nuclear weapons for certain defensive systems and that having the weapons would contribute to Canada's defence.

POLICY IMPRACTICAL

"I do not believe that having such weapons available in the United States for use by Canadian-based carriers in case of emergency is a practical policy," he said.

"Since the Second World War the policy of this country has depended on the military power of the United States. To change this it seems to me to be perfectly proper for the state department to make public the views of the U.S. government when it believes a quite erroneous impression has been given in the Canadian Parliament of defence arrangements between Canada and the U.S."

Mr. Stinson said he intends "to remain within the party and to work for the adoption of policies which I believe will be of benefit to Canada."

PIRATES HIT BORNEO

JAKARTA (Reuters)—Seven pirates shot and killed one man and raped several women during a raid on Balikpapan, Indonesian East Borneo, the official Indonesian news agency Atara said Monday. The pirates escaped with loot worth about 4,000,000 rupiahs ($889,000 at the official rate).

Document Says Pilate Tried To Save Christ

LIVERPOOL, England (Reuters)—Liverpool University historians are studying a document 15 centuries old which tells a story about Pontious Pilate trying to save the life of Jesus Christ, even calling for 2,000 reinforcements when ordered too late.

Roman Catholic scholars say the document is of doubtful authenticity but the story it tells may be true.

Liverpool University's professor of history, D. B. Quinn, said Monday night the document, purporting to be a translation of a letter from Pilate to Tiberius Caesar, was found by a Liverpool woman among a bundle of old documents.

He gave it to Catholic scholars who sent it to the Vatican for examination. The document and an extract of a report from the Vatican archives recently were sent back to the woman by Msgr Gerald Tickle, rector of the Vatican's English College.

According to the Vatican report the document is not what it claims to be because it was written in the fourth or fifth century.

FACTS MAY BE RIGHT

The report added, however, "it is quite possible it contains historical facts because it was because it was written so close to the time of the event."

The document quotes Pilate as being desperate to save Christ but being unable to do so because of the hatred of the Jews. His reinforcements of 2,000 men arrived only a day after the Crucifixion, it says.

Pilate questioned the officer in charge of Christ's grave after the Resurrection and was told it was not true that the guards had fallen asleep or that the body had been stolen, it says.

Quinn said the document probably was not a forgery in the modern sense of the term and could be a genuine attempt to set down what people believed or wanted to believe.

TOPS NOMINEES

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Soviet Premier Khrushchev has predictably topped the list of nominations for Supreme Soviet (Parliament) candidates published in Soviet newspapers in recent days. A cross-section of nominations gave the Soviet premier 23 with 15 for Frol Kozlov, regarded by some western observers as chief heir to the Soviet leadership.

Wellington Dairyman Says Industry Maligned by Govt.

CALGARY (CP) — The federal agriculture department was accused today by President J. M. Hartwick of the National Dairy Council of a "defeatist and alarmist" publicity campaign and of maligning the dairy industry.

It is entirely probable that a sharp sag in per capita butter consumption can be reversed by those responsible for determining price and policy will immediately cease their defeatist and alarmist publicity campaigns, stop passing the buck to the provinces and maligning the industry, and get busy and get a worthwhile (dairy) promotion program instituted by way of restitution for the near disaster their 1957 policy created."

Mr. Hartwick was addressing the annual convention of the Alberta Dairymen's Association.

His remarks reflected the opposition of the council, which is the spokesman for the dairy processing industry, to warnings by Agriculture Minister Hamilton that dairy surpluses may have to be countered with lower support prices.

TALKS DEADLINED

An industry - government conference is scheduled for Ottawa later this month.

Mr. Hartwick's remarks were contained in a partial text of his address issued to the press before delivery.

He said farmers, processors, distributors and manufacturers are opposed to any suggestions for a national dairy board.

No part of the industry wanted to be "pushed around."

As an alternative there should be a board "which would have no authority" but which would maintain a continuous study of dairy problems.

The whole dairy situation was capable of simple solution if butter consumption was increased. He blamed the government's 1957 increase in the butter floor price for the resulting surplus, now at record levels.

The policy increased last May—trimming retail prices 12 cents a pound while farmers continue to get 64 cents a pound

Scubadivers Study Submarine Scenics

Canadian Oceanographers in Their Element

Oceanographers who go down to the sea in ships and pursue scientific studies in Canada's deep and shoal waters will get a closer look at their element in future. Following the lead of geologists who last year made underwater seabed studies off the east coast, a group of Canadian oceanographers are practising skin-diving in icy water in preparation for future research in arctic seas. In sub-zero temperatures half-a-dozen men—oceanographers, hydrographers, technicians—leave their warm Ottawa offices to cut holes in frozen lake ice, swim deep into freezing depths and observe, under working conditions, the oceanographic instruments they use in northern research. With safety first, the scientists accustom themselves to ice-cold water and adapt the technique of scuba (self - contained underwater breathing apparatus) diving to the needs of their profession. In future seasons of research work, the skills they learn will pay off in first-hand observations of physical-biological aspects of the ocean floor and the correct functioning of delicate underwater research instruments and cameras. This innovation in Canadian oceanography is but a small part in a growing field of operations. In addition to research programs to gain knowledge of sea areas on Atlantic and Pacific coasts and in the Arctic Archipelago, Canada is joining a dozen other nations in a scientific assault on the Northwestern Atlantic. In this operation Canadian oceanographers are to be responsible for processing and analyzing all the research data obtained – a proud indication of Canada's international interest in the new science of the sea.

Blake Kelly (left) of Chelsea, Quebec, and Charlie Sauer of Ottawa keep warm inside single-skin suits despite sub-zero temperatures.

Board anchors rope which skindivers use as safety factor when down in icy depths testing instruments and examining lake bottom.

More usual winter work for technician Blake Kelly and oceanographer – geologist Charlie Sauer (seated) is in data analysis office, Dept. of Mines and Technical Surveys.

As the fascinating study of oceanography in Canada expands it brings together men of widely-varied interests, backgrounds and professions. Most of their work, despite close associations with the unpredictable sea and the ice-breaking ships and research vessels which are their floating workshops, consists of pure research and the evolved processes of scientific discovery. Though observations are made from wind-swept decks in stormy seas or in the stillness of a flat calm, much more time must be spent in the laboratory to digest the information recorded at sea. This winter, a number of oceanographers, through the use of scuba-diving equipment, are preparing to spend some time deep in the element they study. Though commonplace in warmer waters, skindiving in Arctic seas—where ordinarily a man lost overboard is given but minutes to live—calls for added precautions and a stricter diving drill. Already, by practising in frozen winter lakes near Ottawa, a group of oceanographers have learnt at first hand much about possible northern skin-diving operations. Not intended as a large-scale operating technique, scientific scubadiving will yet have an important part in research work by inspection and study of sea bottom formations and marine life and through checking the correct functioning of underwater scientific instruments. In icy salt-water seas (which can remain liquid below freezing temperatures because of their mineral content) the scubadiving oceanographers and technicians expect to be able to stay underwater for useful periods and keep reasonably warm in their single-skin diving outfits. Clad in specially-made rubber space suits for exploring the inner space of the vast water regions of the earth's surface Canadian oceanographers swimming the chilly depths will be as one with their subject, will gain an affinity with their later research work in office and laboratory that would hardly be gained by remote study alone.

Biculturalism Will Be Subject For Conference

By ALAN DONNELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker says a call is going out at once to provincial premiers for a Dominion-provincial conference that will restate the goals of Confederation for Canada's second century as a nation.

The goal will be to contribute to unity and harmony among Canada's people, Mr. Diefenbaker said in a Commons announcement Monday.

He suggested no date for the conference, but indicated its discussions will cover a wide scope.

They would include government employment of French-speaking Canadians, the method whereby Canada alone can amend its constitution, and "the choice of a national flag and other symbols of our national sovereignty."

Spokesmen for the three opposition parties, while not opposing the conference proposal, all said there should first be a commission - type inquiry into the problems of Confederation.

Liberal Leader Pearson said that in the relationships between English- and French-speaking Canadians, "partnership was never more important and separation never more disastrous than in this age of interdependence."

Quebec should not "withdraw in any respect from her place as a province in Confederation," Mr. Pearson said, and those in other parts of Canada should do nothing "to make her wish to withdraw from that place.".

New Democratic Party Leader Douglas said French-Canadians feel that modern events are threatening the survival of their language, culture and the spiritual values they cherish.

"While we may deplore separatism, we cannot afford to ignore the sense of grievance and injustice of which separatism is a symptom."

Gilles Gregoire (SC — Lapointe) said a Dominion-provincial conference could not achieve the results of a royal commission.

Speaking in French, he said Social Credit Premiers Bennett of British Columbia and Manning of Alberta would attend the conference but would "understand less than we in this house understand." The four parties in the Commons should be represented at the conference.

This Tuesday evening the public is invited to visit the local school for Retarded Children on John Street, Belleville, where the annual Open House will be in progress. Above is a section of the Kindergarten class whose progress and work will be displayed along with the other three groups at the school. There are now over 88 such schools in Ontario.

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP)—A fire that started late today in the basement of a shoe store here was extinguished after it had destroyed four business establishments in a two-year-old brick building. Firemen from four Annapolis Valley fire departments confined the blaze to the single-storey Balcolm Block. There were no injuries.

U.S. Is Pleased At PM's Defeat But Still Uneasy

Fear Anti-Americanism May Be Campaign Issue

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. officials linked with the Canadian clear controversy breathed easier today with the defeat of the Diefenbaker government but there was new concern over the issues on which the forthcoming Canadian election might be fought.

While the state department declined to comment, a qualified source said there will be a great deal of anguish in the Kennedy administration if the central issue of North American defence is drowned in an emotional fight over anti-Americanism.

This informant said the Kennedy administration will be prepared to adjust its own defence strategy in the light of what defence role Canadians want to play.

But if the Canadian electorate should reject nuclear weapons in favor of conventional defence, the U.S. will move to revise its North American air defence agreement with Canada with a view to tightening American security to the point where no clear weapons may have to be added to the American border.

MAY REAPPRAISE

The informant said this would mean, in the words of the late John Foster Dulles, an "agonizing reappraisal" of American defence in terms of the Soviet threat which Defence Secretary McNamara believes still comes mainly from the Arctic.

In this context, President Kennedy, at his press conference Thursday, will not spell out what he believes Canada's defence role should be. There would be no attempt to "dictate" a policy to Canada, because the state department has publicly accused the Diefenbaker government of not pulling its full weight in North American defence by not acquiring nuclear warheads for Canadian forces.

However, even with a Canadian election campaign on its way, Kennedy still is likely to make some reference to the nuclear issue, to put his own position on the record on the necessity of nuclear armaments for continental defence.

The general diplomatic advice provided for all the government branches is to "play it safe"—to make as little reference as possible to issues that could arouse election campaign reaction.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The political crisis in Canada threatens to maintain for several months the severe strains on U.S.-Canadian relations.

There was no immediate comment here from the White House or state department on the fall of Prime Minister Diefenbaker's Conservative government Tuesday night. But U.S. leaders are sensitively aware that a state department statement just a week ago sparked the tumult which now forces the Canadians into new elections.

Since Diefenbaker had made a major issue of what he called U.S. intrusion into Canadian affairs there is no doubt joint Canadian - U.S. defence activities, nuclear weapons for Canada's armed forces and probably the whole range of political and economic relations between Ottawa and Washington will be hotly debated during the election period and in the new Parliament to follow.

As far as can be determined, neither President Kennedy nor Secretary Dean Rusk had a hand in producing the state department statement that burst like a bomb in the middle of Canadian politics.

EFFECT UNFORESEEN

Indeed the statement was evidently not supposed to be such a bombshell at all, although its authors were reported to have foreseen the possibility of some Canadian government criticism against the United States.

The reaction in Ottawa is known to have been upset the day after the statement came out by the apparent failure of state and defence department authorities to judge its impact. It also was understood to have been shocked by McGeorge Bundy, special assistant to the president for national security affairs.

The statement was designed to clear up for the record U.S. misunderstandings on issues involving Canada's acceptance of rejection of U.S. nuclear warheads for U.S. weapons systems already in Canadian hands.

But the statement's publication appears to have aroused some of these misunderstandings instead.

Diefenbaker, with whose policies on these nuclear arms issues the Kennedy administration has disagreed, therefore by its nature the statement was open to the interpretation that it was a deliberate attempt to influence the Canadian election campaign in favor of the Liberals.

ALONZO BOYD BACK IN JAIL, BREAKS PAROLE

Cannot Adjust To Civilian Life

TORONTO (CP) — Edwin Alonzo Boyd, who became a model prisoner while serving a life sentence at Kingston penitentiary after a blazing career as a bank robber and escape artist, is back in jail after five months on parole.

He is accused of persistent violation of his parole contract and disobedience of orders from his parole officer.

The 43-year-old Boyd, once Canada's most wanted man, was picked up Tuesday night by RCMP on a warrant from the National Parole Board and was placed in a cell at eastend Don Jail.

He was to appear before a magistrate today for formal committal and the start of legal proceedings which probably will end with his return to Kingston.

Released on parole last Oct. 1 amid glowing reports of his change-of-heart after 10 years in penitentiary, Boyd now is accused of having undergone another change—for the worse.

WON'T ADJUST

R. S. Beames, regional representative of the parole board, said Tuesday night Boyd's attitude and behavior indicate he will not adjust to civilian life now, despite the help of parole officers.

Mr. Beames said the parole board found Boyd to be "hostile and resentful of authority," disobeying specific orders from the parole officer and breaking his conditions of parole.

Boyd had told reporters after his release that imprisonment had helped him to mature, teaching him self discipline and willingness to accept authority. His appraisal was backed up by officials of Kingston, who indi-

Owner of Steamship Line Reverses Testimony on SIU

OTTAWA (CP)—Captain John Misener Tuesday gave the Seafarers' International Union of Canada a clean bill of health—then tore it up by admitting that shipowners on the Great Lakes are terrified by irresponsible and illegal tactics of the union.

The 42-year-old marine superintendent of Scott Misener Steamships of Port Colborne dramatically reversed his testimony about the SIU under cross - examination before the federal labor inquiry.

The handsome mariner, whose father heads the $25,000,000 family firm that ranks fourth among the Canadian lake carriers, was the second shipping official to appear as a witness before Mr. Justice T. G. Norris's investigation of labor strife and shipping disruptions.

Commission counsel Charles Dubin asked the witness whether the Misener firm had experienced "bullying tactics, unfair strikes, illegalities and improper pressures" in recent years.

"No sir," said the witness, who under oath, described the SIU as a responsible union.

"Captain Misener," said Mr.

Red Ambassador to Canada Is Recalled to Moscow

OTTAWA (CP)—Dr. Amassap A. Aroutunian has been recalled to Moscow after a somewhat tempestuous four-year term as Soviet ambassador to Canada.

Dr. Aroutunian's recall was announced Tuesday by the Russian embassy, but a spokesman declined to say when he would leave Ottawa. The spokesman also would not say who his replacement would be.

During the period he served as ambassador, Dr. Aroutunian made many speeches urging increased Canadian-Russian trade and greater cultural exchanges. Many of the 60-year-old ambassador's press conferences turned into running gun battles with reporters who challenged Russia's sincerity in advocating peaceful coexistence.

The most controversial issue in which the dapper, witty ambassador was involved broke June 14, 1962, three days before the last federal election. He delivered the Soviet note to the Canadian government protesting against what it described as preparation of Canada for nuclear armament."

Within four hours after he personally delivered the statement, the government sent it back on the ground that it was "an inadmissable interference in Canadian affairs."

Former defence minister Harkness said at the time that the only reason for the statement appeared to be an "attempt to influence people in the election campaign immediately before a vote is taken."

P.M. APPOINTS LT.-GOVERNORS IN 3 PROVINCES

All Are Members Legal Profession

OTTAWA (CP)—Three new lieutenant - governors, all lawyers, have been named for Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and Saskatchewan.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced Tuesday night that Fabian O'Dea will become lieutenant - governor of Newfoundland March 1, the same day that Henry P. MacKeen becomes lieutenant - governor of Nova Scotia and Robert L. Hanbidge becomes the vice-regal representative in Saskatchewan.

In Newfoundland, Mr. O'Dea, a wartime commander in the Canadian Navy, will succeed Campbell L. MacPherson whose term expired Jan. 25 but was extended to Feb. 28. Mr. O'Dea, 44, a St. John's lawyer, was educated at the University of Toronto, Dalhousie and Oxford. He was Newfoundland's Rhodes

Mere Words Cannot Excuse U.S. Intrusion

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Tuesday that last week's press statement by the U.S. state department on Canadian defence policy "can not be excused by mere words."

The U.S. statement challenged several of his own statements "all of them matters of opinion," Mr. Diefenbaker said in a Commons speech.

The prime minister obviously was referring to the subsequent statement by U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk that he regretted the tone of his department's press statement but still felt that its facts were accurate.

Mr. Diefenbaker said that last Wednesday's press statement was an intrusion into Canadian affairs and a projection into a political subject, and a controversial one, that cannot be excused by mere words."

The prime minister noted that in his Jan. 25 Commons statement he declared he had said the purpose of the two Bomarc anti-aircraft missile batteries in Canada was not to defend Canada. The U.S. state department had said they protected Montreal and Toronto as well as the U.S. nuclear deterrent force.

Mr. Diefenbaker referred to U.S. congressional testimony by U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara that Bomarc missiles had a limited usefulness against manned bombers but would be effective against several years because the U.S. had paid for them.

"That doesn't sound as if their defensive properties are very high today."

Parliament At a Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS
TUESDAY, Feb. 5, 1963

The three opposition parties combined on a two non-confidence votes in topple the government, the count 142 to 111 on each vote.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker then announced he would advise the Governor - General and the House was adjourned.

Earlier, Mr. Diefenbaker made an emotional last-ditch appeal for support of the government by Social Credit and NDP members.—

Opposition Leader Pearson rejected this call, urging the minor parties to throw out the government for its inability to act.

NDP Leader T. C. Douglas said Parliament had been reduced to such a state of impotence an election is needed now.

Eloquent Effort Made By P.M. To Save It

Will Meet With Vanier To Dissolve House

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP) — The minority Progressive Conservative government went down to defeat Tuesday night despite Prime Minister Diefenbaker's most forceful and eloquent efforts to save it.

He openly tried to placate an impatient opposition with promises of an early budget, new legislation and an election when the government's program is passed. He also tried to drive a wedge between the Liberals and the two smaller groups of Social Credit and New Democratic MPs.

His appeal fell on deaf ears.

As the day wore on it became clear that all three opposition groups were determined to overthrow the government. Behind them was a tense week of international defence dispute, Douglas Harkness' resignation as defence minister and rumors —albeit denied—of a revolt Tuesday in cabinet ranks.

The end came at 11:42 p.m. EST. The government was beaten 142 to 111 on a non-confidence motion moved by the Social Credit group which had saved the government in seven previous sessions of pressure since Parliament first met last Sept. 27.

MAY BE APRIL 8

Mr. Diefenbaker was to meet Governor-General Vanier today and could then seek a formal order dissolving Parliament. He might announce the date for the expected general election at the Commons sitting scheduled for today at 2:30 p.m. But if dissolution comes earlier, there will be no sitting and the date would be announced outside the House. Most likely date is Monday, April 8.

Thus for the second time in a year Canada headed into political interregnum without a budget, with an open sore in relations with the United States over the nuclear-weapons issue, and at a point where exchange reserves have just been rebuilt after the crisis that reached a head last election day, June 18.

The defeat came on a Social Credit sub-amendment to a Liberal non-confidence motion.

The sub-amendment said:

"The government has failed up to this time to give a clear statement of policy respecting Canada's national defence, and has failed to maintain the confidence of the House so that the 1963-64 estimates and budget could be introduced, and has failed to outline a positive program of foreign policy respecting many things for which this Parliament and previous parliaments have already given authority, and does not have the confidence of the Canadian people."

Between the lines was the U.S. state department's intervention in the political affairs of another country.

Mr. Diefenbaker's reaction to the statement was unified, Senator McCutcheon shot back: "Absolutely."

OTTAWA (CP)—Dissolution of Parliament for a federal general election on Monday, April 8 was announced today by Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

All Cabinet Ministers Endorse PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative MPs and senators closed ranks firmly behind Prime Minister Diefenbaker today at a caucus marked by individual pledges of allegiance from every cabinet minister.

Reliable sources said that Mr. Diefenbaker asked for, and obtained, individual expressions of loyalty from each cabinet minister in the wake of reports of a movement among some ministers to have him step down as leader.

An informant said some of the ministers had tendered their pledge of loyalty in tears.

The prime minister was said to have taken the initiative to bring to the floor of the caucus a rash of rumors about a replacement movement.

Senator Wallace McCutcheon, minister without portfolio said the cabinet is "absolutely" behind Mr. Diefenbaker.

Asked about reports that a group of cabinet ministers had sought to have Prime Minister Diefenbaker step down from the leadership, he said he doesn't know where they have come from.

Asked whether the cabinet was united, Senator McCutcheon shot back: "Absolutely."

Robarts Replies to Election Rumor

Has Legislative Program, Proposes to Carry It Out

ORONTO (CP)—The Diefenbaker government's defeat in Ottawa has stirred up the cauldron of election speculation at Queen's Park, with the Ontario legislature moving into only its second sitting after a Christmas recess.

Premier Robarts, who has turned aside the growing number of questions about a possible provincial election for the province, reemphasized Tuesday night that his domain is Ontario.

Questioned by reporters—at a party he gave for Progressive Conservative members of the legislature and others — about the possible effects of the federal events on Ontario's election prospects, Mr. Robarts replied:

"I have a program in the province of Ontario and the legislature now is in session and I propose to carry it out."

He insisted that Tuesday night's happenings in Ottawa were outside his field. In his brief remarks to the party, he referred only briefly to "Ottawa" rather sad events that have happened this evening over which we have little or no control."

An Ottawa report quoted a Progressive Conservative party official as saying there is a strong possibility Mr. Robarts will call for voting in Ontario before the federal election which is generally expected about April 8.

Liberal Leader John Wintermeyer said he too had heard such rumors, adding: "Two elections within such a short period of time will cause some confusion, but the public is in a political mood and will be able to cope with the situation."

Riff Warrior El Krim Dies

CAIRO (AP)—Abd el Krim, the Berber chieftain who astonished the world with his victories against Spain and France in the bloody Riff revolt of the 1920s, died today.

The legendary warrior, whose exploits inspired such light operas as The Desert Song, was 78 and had not set foot in his native Morocco since he was exiled in 1925.

Although age had mellowed him, he continued to be violently anti-French and warned the United States in 1957 that it should not rely on France to help defend Europe.

Financial Crisis

Herridge of NDP Backs PM As He Blames Opposition

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative government sources say the opposition now has been charged with responsibility for the parliamentary financial crisis, which may form part of the federal election campaign expected soon to get under way.

But Prime Minister Diefenbaker's explanation to his effect in the Commons Tuesday before his government has twice defeated won the support only one opposition MP—H. W. Herridge (NDP—Kootenay West).

Mr. Herridge told reporters after the dramatic adjournment of the Commons that he voted for the government because he believed it should be given a chance to introduce its 1963-64 spending estimates and budget "so the people will know what they are voting for or against."

The nub of the financial crisis is this:

1. Parliament has not yet given definite approval of a single dollar of expenditures for the current fiscal year, expiring March 31.

2. The government has been working on its estimates for the new fiscal year starting April 1, but they haven't yet been printed in English and French.

3. The government needs another month's work to compile its budget for the new year.

Right now, the government lacks authority to pay any of its bills. Its mid-month payroll should start to go out to its employees a week from today. At the end of the month, it has another payroll to meet, as well

Number of Jobless Rises But Still Below Last Year

The number of unemployed in the Belleville area increased quite sharply during January following a fairly encouraging year-end picture. The current picture, however, is still better than at the end of January last year.

Mr. Cecil Hiuser, manager of the Belleville Employment Office reports there were 1915 men and women unemployed at the end of January as compared with 2032 men and 679 women unplaced a year ago. The current figure is six per cent under that of a year ago.

Absence of winter works programs comparable with those underway last year, was given as the main reason for the sharp increase in unemployment during January.

As of the last of January only four municipal winter works programs were in operation in the district. In all 13 such projects have been approved but most will not get underway until later in the winter.

FEMALE HELP STEADY

Some of the approved projects are in Belleville, two in Tyendinaga, one in Marmora, and three for the Moira River Conservation Authority.

Last year there were 21 projects approved with 16 in operation at the end of January.

The claim load totalled 2,343 at the end of January as compared with 2,469 a year ago.

One bright phase of the January employment picture was that job opportunities for women held steady with the big increase in unemployment being among the men.

Mr. Hiuser said there had been no lessening in the demand for female help.

And fewer carpenters are out of work this winter than were jobless last winter. Last month there were 106 carpenters looking for work as compared with 128 a year ago.

Children Will Have Holiday Next Monday

District high school students and public school children in the city of Belleville will be having a holiday next Monday, February 11th.

The reason for the schools being closed is that the Belleville Public School Teachers' Federation convention and also the Bay of Quinte District Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation meeting, are both being held in the city.

Public School teachers are meeting at the Harry J. Clarke School, while district high school teachers are meeting at Belleville Collegiate.

Public school teachers will visit the Ontario School for the Deaf during the morning and later in the day at the Harry J. Clarke School will hear special speakers Miss Norma Bjarrison, supervisor of special education at Scarboro and W. C. McClure, principal of Peterborough Teachers College who will talk on modern mathematics.

Moira, Geddes Crossings To Get Lights and Gates

City council Monday gave its approval to the provision of protection at the East Moira and Geddes Street CNR crossings at an estimated cost figure of $33,570.

City Engineer W. C. Purcell said it was his understanding that the crossing protection to be provided would include both lights and automatic gates.

Installation of the crossing protection equipment will co-incide with the closing of the crossings on Grier and Charles Streets where present signal equipment will be taken out.

Council some time ago agreed to the closing of the Grier and St. Charles Street crossings.

Original estimates from the Board of Transport Commissioners for provision of the protection at the East Moira and Geddes Street crossings was $171,900, but council withheld approval and the estimate was sent back for revision.

According to the present Board of Transport formula the city will be required to pay 12½ per cent of the $33,570 cost of the installation and 50 per cent of the annual maintenance cost of $850.

Next week it would be subject to completion of the North Front Street overhead bridge.

Olympian as Ever, de Gaulle Engaged in Big Poker Game With Macmillan, Kennedy

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP) — In bars and bistros across France, comfortably well-fed men with cigarettes clamped in their jaws and pernod glasses conveniently within elbow range all hunched around zinc tables, dedicated with quiet passion to a game of cards.

The name of the game is la belote, and it is practically France's national pastime. It is played with fanatical devotion, employing a 32-card deck, and it teases conventional rules out of the window.

The trump suit, for instance, is headed by the jack, with the nine next and then ace and king. The non-trump suits assume primacy to the ace, but the 10 is next, ahead of king and queen.

HIGH-STAKES GAME

Today, as ordinary French men deal the cards for another round of la belote, the man to whom they have entrusted their destinies plays a different game for higher stakes.

Olympian as ever, French President de Gaulle is engaged in what VanCott (83), in session, with President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan among the players — a struggle against him .De Gaulle says no to Britain getting into Europe, no to Kennedy's "grand design" for the West.

The French newspaper brought up the card-game analogy. Said Paris-Presse:

"The mere fact that in January, 1963, the head of the French state should be able to play poker with the masters of the world is an achievement in itself."

In the bars and bistros, many of the belote players probably nodded their heads. Prickly chauvinism is a rooted French quality, and it must have titillated Gaulle pride to realize that a country still suffering from the humiliating memory of 1940 should be back in the big league again.

Thus, apart from left-wing intellectual circles, there is not likely to be much opposition within France. The new moodpariahes of a certain euphoria. The economic defeatism of the early post-war years has given way to talk of the "French miracle," and the magazine Paris-Match speaks lyrically of a new "belle epoque" reminiscent Said the gay days before the First World War.

LEFTISTS SEE FLAWS

Paris-Match's optimistic picture is in contrast with that stressed by left-wing weeklies such as L'Express and France-Observateur, which say France is being run for the benefit of the big financial interests and industrial cartels. Despite the favorable balance - of - payments position, they say there is much hidden poverty, along with gross neglect of schools, hospitals and public transport.

Whatever the social ills, France's economic strength is evidently an important part of de Gaulle's confidence as he plays his lonely poker hand in behalf of a narrow, nationalistic Europe.

Seldom has a leading statesman been so much at variance with press. British commentators just don't know what to make of his seemingly tortuous attitude toward the European aspirations. Even the weekly Economist, which is not given to words carefully, sees the general suffering from a "hallucination."

One consistent thread in British comment is that de Gaulle is still haunted by his experiences as wartime Free French leader, when a handful of men in London kept the tricolor flying. The Financial Times acknowledges the undisputed fact that de Gaulle and his associates were "high - handedly treated" by French wartime levelt during most of the war.

GUARDS FUTURE

In his memoirs, de Gaulle writes that the "retirement" of France was the basic aim of American policy. So his main aim now is to make sure that France can always "dispose" of her own future, free from American domination and from any "Anglo-Saxon" alliance in which Britain might be little more than an American agent.

De Gaulle's distrust of Anglo-saxons seems unreasonable—especially to Anglo-Saxons. It is nevertheless a fact, rooted in a certain view of history and of France's place in the world.

Similarly a stranger bred on bridge, blundering into a session of it before, would find it hard to accept that a nine can beat an ace. But that's the way they play in France.

Bit of Humor Seen in Verse On Meters

Those yellow Fine-O-Meter boxes in downtown Belleville in which tardy motorists pay one-hour parking fines are more than boxes for mere money.

At least one of them recently came up with a bit of humor submitted by a poetically inclined motorist who took to rhyme to unload himself of what he felt was a justified beef. His verse read like this:

I parked my car
Beside a meter,
Got an appointment,
I gotta keep her.

Put a dime
Into the slot.
But it wouldn't click
The disgusted clerk.

I cussed and swore.
Then ran like a cricket,
When I got back
You'd pinned on a ticket.

I really think
You've been unfair
To the meter apart
My dime's in there.

But city treasurer C. J. Bender had the answer and himself took to rythme to set the motorist right. Here's what Mr. Bender penned in reply:

Thank you for paying the fine,
Your money we didn't purloin
Our meters don't work with a dime.
A nickle is the proper coin.

Fine-O-Meter Boxes Proving Satisfactory

Fine-O-Meter boxes in downtown Belleville which allow motorists to pay overtime parking fines without going to city hall, have proven out satisfactorily.

This was noted in city council yesterday by traffic committee chairman Ald. Jack Ireland who said that the only complaint was that there were not enough of the boxes.

And council moved to remedy that complaint by authorizing the purchase of another ten boxes.

A report by city treasurer C. J. Bender indicated that some of the present boxes should be re-located while there were not enough boxes in certain other locations.

Brier Bonspiel Film Viewed By Kiwanians

Kiwanians were entertained by a film on the 1962 MacDonald Brier Bonspiel, Canada's premier curling event, following an interesting explanation of the intricacies of film projection by club member Milt Sweeney, who was in charge of the program at their weekly meeting yesterday afternoon.

Two new members, Bob Wilson of Mutual Life and Neil Davidson of Northern Electric, were introduced to the club by members Don Williams and Werner Daeshel respectively.

The meeting was conducted by club president Ralph Graham.

34 Veterans Got Settlement After 66 Years

The theory that old soldiers never die but just fade away is given some support by an item in an 1878 edition of the Intelligencer which records that 34 veterans of the 1812 War were present to receive settlement of their claims with the government just 66 years after the conclusion of hostilities.

Receiving the $20 government grant were: Francis Dafoe (85), John Smith (81), Jas. McWilliams (89), Abraham Diamond (79), John Diamond (83), Peter Denyes (82), Philip Roblin (78), John William Cole (85), Wm. D. Young (80), Col. Gonsales (89), James McTaggart (86), Isaac Dempsey (80), Joseph Height (83), William Sills (80), Isaac Huff (85), Wm. Diamond (78), Thomas Empey (82), Jacob Conkrite (80), Henry McMullen (79), Eli Benedict (87), Jonas Canniff (85), Frederick Killer (83), Jacob VanCott (83), Samuel Elliit Rose (82), Joseph Thrasher (83½), Appollos Jones (86), Jas. Dermsey (90), Thos. Ketcheson (87), Alex Chisholm (78), Elijah Ketcheson (80), Philip Zwick (82), Joseph Huyck (78), Luke Osirom (89), and Alex Chisholm (87).

From the foregoing it would appear that candidates for the defence of Canada were accepted at a very early age, i.e. 12 years old.

Al Cromarty of the Kingston Curling Club with Bill Gourdier, Peter Kurman and Joe O'Neil are winners of the district playoffs for the Brier competition. This rink won its way into the finals by defeating Keith La Sha's rink of Gananoque including Gerald Woodley, Earl Maxwell and Neil McCarney in Kingston Tuesday night by 8-7. La Sha being one up coming home.

The preliminary and two rounds were played at the Quinte Curling Club on Monday and the local rink of J. B. Corke, Al McCullam, Cec Kirkwood and Ernie Wilkinson was eliminated in the second game by Gananoque 8-7. The rink had a chance to tie the game in the last end but Ernie Wilkinson's last rock took out an opposition stone but failed to stay in the house. The rink won their first game from the Cataraqui Curling Club. In the preliminary round Cromarty put out Dr. W. G. Burns 8-4 in the best game of the draw and then beat another Kingston curling club rink skipped by Lake Edwards 9-6. Edwards was one up coming home but two of his players missed takeouts and the game was over.

In the meantime Keith La Sha won over Bill Lewis of the RCAF with George Peters, John Law and Grant Macauley by 8-4 and then went on to defeat the Belleville crew. The curling was good only in spots. The Belleville rink did not appear to curl as well in the series as they did in the playoffs within their own club but pressure sometimes makes a difference. In playoffs of this kind practically every shot must count.

The winner moves into Perth and the winner of that playoff will enter the round robin series for the championship of Ontario and the right to compete in the Dominion finals to be played this year in Brandon.

Cost of Living Sets Record In December

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian living costs rose to a record high during December, with the consumer price index advancing one-tenth of a point to 132 from 131.9 a month earlier, the bureau of statistics said today.

The index—a prices yardstick based on 1949 levels equalling 100—rose to 132 at Jan. 1 after remaining steady at 131.9 during October and November. The levelling of price movements in the two months followed five consecutive monthly advances in living costs.

The rise in the index at Jan. 1 resulted from increased prices for food, housing, recreation and reading. These increases outweighed decreases in prices of clothing and transportation.

There was no change during December in the costs of health and personal care, tobacco and alcohol.

The index at Jan. 1 was 2.3 points higher than the mark of 129.7 on Jan. 1, 1962.

NEW HEART MACHINE — Dr. Graham Schuler (left) a Queen's University graduate student makes test adjustments to the Area Display Electro-Cardiograph which was created from an idea he had as a second-year medical student at Queen's. Behind the machine is Orest Roy of the National Research Council's Medical Electronics laboratory. The two men developed this device designed to pin-point heart attack damage, and develop a sure and fast method of evaluating the heart's condition. At least two more years of testing at Queen's will be required before the machine will be ready for general use.

Northbound traffic along North Front Street will be detoured by way of Grove, Geddes and Evans Street, while southbound traffic will go along Evans, Grier and Harvey Streets.

Early next week railway crews will start demolition of the present narrow North Front Street overhead bridge with Looby Construction, general contractors, to start construction of the new bridge on completion of demolition of the old structure.

Ignore Woman Hitch-Hiker So Baby Dies

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) A woman with an ailing baby tried for three hours to thumb a lift in sub-zero weather to get the infant to hospital but it died in her arms.

Mrs. Willie Pierre of the Pack River Indian Reserve 100 miles north of here said Tuesday she walked some 14 miles from her home to the Hart Highway with the 18-month-old baby in her arms accompanied by a five-year-old daughter.

Mrs. Pierre said she tried to flag down motorists several times without success. She also asked a man at a nearby house to get her a ride but he told her he couldn't help.

The woman said the infant died in her arms an hour before a bus arrived.

In Prince George, she took the baby to hospital where officials said death was apparently due to pneumonia.

Fire Marshal Called in to Probe Blaze

Fire Chief Gerald Vance said today he has called in the Ontario Fire Marshal's office as investigations continue into the midnight blaze in a Victoria Ave. apartment house.

The chief said local police had also been consulted in the investigation.

Chief Vance ordered the building — which houses two apartments and a barbershop at 18 Victoria Ave. — closed off immediately after the fire midnight Monday. Firefighters quelled the blaze, which apparently centred on the second floor of the building, after passersby turned in the alarm.

Your family's silent partner

Lying there on the doorstep, it can't speak. Or Move. Or Hear. But open it in your hands and it becomes a living, powerful partner in daily living. In the decisions you make, the opinions you form.

It takes you to the highest chambers of government. It takes you to the bloodiest streets of warring countries. It takes you to the heart of history in the making. In short, it tells you what in the world is happening and why.

But people depend on it for needs beyond the need to know. It's where families turn when something's to be bought or sold. It's where hints on health, cooking, religion, amusements, dressmaking, etiquette, marriage are found.

It's where charities first turn for help, and a place where a letter to the editor is published. It's where campaigns are fought and lost dogs are found. It's where criminals are exposed and newlyweds applauded. Where birth and death meet on the same page.

It's your newspaper, silent partner of the family, yet one that says so much, does so much for so many people — every day without fail.

Tell Us What "Atmosphere"

Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec says a change in the atmosphere surrounding Confederation is needed, rather than a change in the wording of Canada's constitution.

The changed atmosphere is assured. Quebec residents are providing that.

But this, we may assume, is not what Premier Lesage had in mind. He was referring not to the atmosphere towards Confederation found in Quebec, but rather to the atmosphere towards Quebec and French-Canadian culture found in other provinces of Canada, whiffs of which accompany English-speaking Canadians whenever they visit "La Belle Province."

If Premier Lesage, and French-Canadians, are to get what they want, they will first have to give their English-speaking compatriots a clearer indication as to just what kind of atmosphere they desire.

Quebec is pulsating with life these days. There is much more intellectual ferment than in English-speaking Canada, despite the fact that the absorption of large numbers of immigrants have wrought many changes in the outlook of Ontario and the other provinces.

But French-Canadians do not seem to know exactly where they are going, exactly what they want.

Until they settle some of their own controversies, it will be impossible for the English-speaking Canadian to know whether he is able, or willing, to provide the "atmosphere" French-Canadians want.

For instance, most reasonable English-speaking Canadians will be able to understand why Quebec wants to be known as a state, rather than a province, once the matter is explained. When they are told that in the French language "province" signifies an administrative district subject to a central government, they will understand why the French-Canadian prefers "état." It is true that the English-speaking Canadian may have some misgivings, for "state" to him may signify a completely autonomous political unit, but if he is reminded that New York and Michigan and Ohio are called "states" he will be more than willing to grant Quebec the same status.

He will never be happy, though, if French-Canadians insist on regarding themselves as a separate "nacion." There is only one Canadian nation, as far as he is concerned, and this consists of all ten provinces,—or, if you will, of nine provinces and Le Bel Etat, Quebec.

Meanwhile, all English-speaking Canadians have to do to lose much of their uneasiness about Quebec is to spend a holiday there, taking along with them common courtesy and a willingness to endeavor to speak a few words in French. "Pah-donnay mwa (as in Dinah Shore's farewell kiss) ay tel la root o Kay-bec?" is good for giggles and a flood of good-natured Ehglish explanations almost anywhere in the province. (pardon us, state). As for an English-speaking Canadian who can actually converse in language which can be recognized as French (and there are some thanks to a change in emphasis in our high school French classes)—well there will be nothing the French-speaking Canadian will not be prepared to do for this visitor.

For this Relief—Who Cares?

Recent government proposals will deny Canadian advertisers the right to claim income tax deductions for advertising costs in U.S. magazines circulating in Canada. But exceptions to this rule are made for U.S. magazines of which the Canadian editions are printed, published, and partially edited in Canada. The two magazines reprieved by this provision receive about 40 per cent of every magazine advertising dollar spent in Canada.

On the surface, the government proposal is comforting. It indicates Canadian magazine publishers will finally be given a safe haven in which to carry on their operations, and that Canadian writers, photographers and artists can hope to maintain some of the markets they must have to make a living.

But that 40 per-cent of the revenue which is going to the U.S., even with the proposed protection, makes the going rough. U. S. magazines, even those with a Canadian veneer, are not interested in Canadian material, and the lost revenue puts a slow strangle on Canadian magazines.

There are other opportunities open to journalists, of course. They can always follow the tide of Canadian talent emigrating to greener pastures south of the border. As long as the present situation lasts, that may be their last hope of reaching a Canadian audience, and it is almost certain few Canadians would never notice their leaving.

Basic Defence Dilemma

Christian Science Monitor

The trouble between Canada and the United States reflects the basic dilemma which has caused a great stir through the entire NATO relationship.

The United States wants its principal allies to submerge their own national defence in a collective defence, where for example General de Gaulle would merely be one among many and the dream of a French defence. In present circumstances this unified defence quite simply means final control by the United States.

The allies don't like it. This is partly because they don't want to yield up control of their own nuclear destiny — a sacrifice that even the United States is not prepared to make. And partly because they have strong bad-the-Germans memories who fear that American control by the Pentagon, by men trained to think in terms of war, not peace.

The United States replies that central control is unavoidable in times of crisis in a world where destruction lies ready, minutes away — and that in advance of crisis only preliminary measures can be taken for genuinely collective policy planning.

This is the central dilemma. It is sharpened by American insistence that its major allies, most of them prosperous, share more of the economic burden because the dollar cannot carry it all. Yet while paying more they won't get a larger share of ultimate decision. And in Canada the strain is made especially poignant by a technical factor. Canada is asked to put money into, and accept nuclear warheads under American control for, the Bomarc B installations which are rapidly becoming obsolete. They are not very good missiles to intercept incoming manned bombers. Secretary McNamara expects the Soviet shift away from bombers to missiles, and plans to phase the Bomarc effort out of existence in a few years. Yet it remains a necessary transition device today.

Nothing but great patience can resolve this central dilemma. But meanwhile there can be no justification for drawing away from the defence of the West because its command problems are painful and its technniques are shifting.

Strictly Personal

Personality A Combination Of Traits

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I was having lunch with a magazine publisher from New York, in the course of which he mentioned a man we both knew. "Sam would make a fine editor," he said, "if only he would learn to give the other fellow a chance to speak up.

"Yes, I agreed, "but then he wouldnt be Sam any more; he would be somebody else."

One of the most frequent mistakes we make in analyzing that a personality is a collection of traits, or that a personality is merely the sum of its parts. Personality is a way of organizing these parts.

Sam's "bad trait"—his unwillingness to give others a chance to orate—is inextricably related to his "good traits." They are integrated in a complex structure, like atoms in molecules, and removing or changing one would affect the whole nature of the personality.

If we look at persons dynamically, and not simply as a static set of traits, we can see that certain defects are the price they pay for their virtues, just as ulcers are sometimes the price some people pay for their perfectionism or their passivity or their aggressiveness.

This is why "pointing out a bad trait to a colleague or a subordinate—even in a kindly and well-meaning way — usually does no good, and may even do some harm, for it does not feel worse, and does not enable him to act any better.

When we single out one trait or characteristic and ask the person to change it, we are really asking him to change the organization of his whole personality; and this is a formidable task for which most of us are not equipped — especially when it has taken years of effort to achieve some success and equilibrium with this particular organization of personality.

Perhaps we can see the problem more clearly if we conceive of the personality as a closely integrated team of acrobats who stand on one another's shoulders — three men below, then two on top of them, and finally one on the top. If we change the position of any one of the men, or take one away, the whole act is different. And, indeed, it may be the man on the bottom (whom we find "undesirable) that enables the top man to maintain his precarious balance.

Of course, people change, and modify their conduct, and learn from experience if they are open to it. But it is important to know that some "bad traits make the good ones possible, just as the pathology in the oyster produces the pearl.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 6th, 1943

Prices for all lines of produce held steady on a slim market with grade "A" eggs bringing from 40 cents to 42 cents the dozen. The fowl offering was small but good birds brought up to 23.35 each. On the outside market potatoes sold at the usual $2 per bag, with carrots, beets and turnips bringing 40 cents the peck. Only one load of wood was offered on the market, the lone vendor asking $16.00 the cord for dry maple cordwood sawed into stove lengths.

British Honduras, the "Mosquito Coast" of the North American continent, where malaria fever strikes its heaviest toll of death, was the educational subject enjoyed by the Kinsmen at their fortnightly meeting held at the Hotel Quinte last night. The speaker was Gilbert B. Scott of the Consolidated Optical Company here, who for six years was employed along the "Mosquito Coast" in British Honduras. "Maybe we do not realize it, buthere are only three British possessions in North America, Canada, Labrador and British Honduras; the last named possession today has a population of 55,000 and was originally settled by British pirates in the days of piracy between England and Spain, Every person has read of the Spanish Main, but around the Caribbean Sea this is known as the Mosquito Coast where malaria runs as high as nine hundred percent among the natives, who believe in their superstitions that frogs breathe upon their children, giving them the disease we know as malaria," added Mr. Scott as he addressed the meeting. Not all persons dying in British Honduras must be buried within 48 hours of death. The speaker stated that he had seen 12 inches of rain precipitated along the Mosquito Coast within 24 hours. "This is only a fraction of an inch less than the average annual rainfall in Toronto," he said as he closed his address and gave a vivid picture of the habits of the natives.

In the regular club meeting on Saturday morning of the Junior School Group, a debate was conducted on the subject "That living in the city is more advantageous to boys than living in the country." The affirmative was taken by Jack Mudd and James Seymour and the negative was supported by Jack Dickards and Jack Bell. The judges declared the debate to be a draw and the audience was quite in agreement with the decision. The judges were Colonel Atyeo and Howard Kerr; the chairman and time-keeper was Joseph Short.

Without Acrimony

Calgary Albertan

We Canadians do not yet fully understand that it is possible to debate without acrimony, to disagree on method and detail without disagreeing on fundamentals, to decry what a man does or says on particular point without inferring that the man himself is evil. We are afraid of disagreement in all its forms. In addition, bewildered perhaps by the rapidity of history and preoccupied with the building of a new nation, we have withdrawn en masse from public life, leaving it to the few still willing to seek its rewards and accept its risks.

To Your Good Health

All Should Be Vaccinated Against Smallpox Disease

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

I note with approval that the American Medical Association is urging a long-term drive to get people vaccinated against smallpox, a subject which I have been discussing periodically.

One expert, Dr. Raymond L. White, said that "the low level of immunity that now exists is deplorable, and he is so right.

The government goes to great pains to keep smallpox out of this part of the world, but if a few cases did get in, or even one, the result could be disastrous.

There is so much foreign travel that the possibility of some cases slipping through is very real, no matter how careful we are.

The trouble, I suspect, lies largely in the fact that people dont realize that a smallpox vaccination doesn't last forever.

I recollect a fairly recent instance of a woman of mature years, planning a trip abroad, remarking contentedly that she wouldnt have to be vaccinated. She was sure, she said, "because the scar is still there from my vaccination.

Yes.

"Infection" means permanently but it doesnt mean that immunity also remains. For that matter, with vaccinations as they are now given, the scar, if any, can be so small as to be virtually invisible. I don't get scars the size of a nickel, such as used to be the case when I was a boy.

But we do need boosters, or the protection wears off. The lady planning the trip abroad has doubtless learned by this time that she had to get a fresh vaccination or will be allowed to return to this country after her trip.

Hopewver, the great majority of people who don't travel abroad are likely to rely to depend on the vaccinations they had when they were children. And they're wrong.

To be certain, smallpox vaccinations should be repeated every five years. Some experts would make it every three years.

With boosters that often, you will frequently have a very mild "take or sometimes none at all, indicating that your immunity is still of good strength.

But the number of adults who are surprised to have a distinct "take is indication of how many people have let their shots lapse, realizing it, complacently walking around in such condition that they could get smallpox if some cases happened to crop up.

It's such a simple, quick procedure to have a vaccination renewed next time you see your doctor, that I hope you remember. And I hope you remember to do it.

Dear Dr. Molner: If a sebaceous cyst is infected, could the infection be spread by removing it while in that condition? Mrs. G.F.

germs are there, and there cannot help but be some risk of the germs spreading during surgery. Unless immediate removal is mandatory, it is much safer to bring the infection under control first.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 11 years old. Since I was five I have had the bedding happens at any time of day, it might be a tiny ulcer, which is a very common occurence but can be easily cured by a simple treatment called cauterizing.

Finally, if the bleeding is frequent, your doctor could have some special tests made to see whether your blood is such that it does not "clot readily. If that is the case, you will not "grow out of the condition but by waiting. Special treatment can be given to you, though.

Shingles can be a painful "disease! To receive a copy of my pamphlet, "Facts About Shingles, write Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 58, Dunlee, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope and 15c in coin to cover handling.

The beatnik kick is over. I haven't seen a beatnik in months and the latest dispatch from Paris that the bottom has fallen out of the abstract art market. That leaves only one people unbalanced, an earlier form of abstractionism. And flapdole sitting calmly in the middle of the price that would have been paid now by art museums for such works?

But everything, I suppose, has to come-in its sequence. Nobody may have the answer but the wise will be on the part of those restless souls among us who claim art for their own. Like a walk Niagara on a tightrope, or dance a marathon, or sit on a flagpole, or paint astonishing pictures, write mysterious poems, hang together baffling sculptures, or compose muddled music. Almost any new gimmick can find a professional agent. A baby Barnum, to promote it.

Satellite What Every Hunter Needs

WASHINGTON (AP)—Where goes the wandering Albatross? Where are the penguins of Antarctica when the mating season passes? Whither the European stork, the Caribbean turtle, the Canada goose?

Now comes a suggestion: Track their mysterious migrations from a satellite in space.

The questions have long bothered scientists. Where do these animals migrate and why?

Dr. Dwain Warner, curator of ornithology at the Minnesota Museum of Natural History, proposes that animals be tagged with small transistor radios weighing ½ to two ounces.

Then, wherever the wandering animal goes it broadcasts a signal. A satellite circling the globe, could catch the signal and send it back to scientists who could plot the animal's location, Warner writes in the current issue of the magazine Natural History.

Drivers Asked To Observe Strict Caution

Look out for 280 school children in the North Front Street area in the next six months.

That's the plea of Belleville traffic police as the reconstruction of North Front Street railroad overpass gets under way tomorrow.

The project calls for rerouting of traffic along a series of detours east of North Front—itself something of a problem since the avenues are purely residential and not designed as main traffic arteries.

Compounding the situation, says city police inspector J. C. Hayes, is the presence of public school children attending nearby King George School.

The school has a registration of 280, most of whom use North Front Street three times daily.

"The detour area is peppered with fairly narrow intersections," said the inspector, "and we are asking all drivers to exercise the greatest caution until the re-routing order is lifted."

This, he expects, will be some time in July.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP)—A weakening group of banks set the tone in morning stock market action today.

Industrials took a setback of 1% points on index; base metals and western oils both eased.

In the main list, losses of ¼ went to Algoma, Alcan, Canada Imperial Oil, Canadian Celanese and Steel Company of Canada.

Dominion Foundries and Steel dropped ¼, Hudson Bay Corporation and Shell of Canada, Massey-Ferguson, Aluminium and Walker Goderham all ¼.

Banks had Nova Scotia and Royal both off ¾, Montreal down a half, Toronto Dominion and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce each off ⅛.

In the main list, banks were the major weakening influence, with Montreal, Toronto-Dominion and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce all off ⅛, Nova Scotia down ¾ and Royal off ¼. Atlas Steel continued to trade vigorously, closing unchanged at 37, with a volume of more than 43,000 shares. Brazilian Traction, on a turnover of 16,000 shares, gained 80 cents to $4.40, having earlier touched a 1962-63 peak of $4.45. Talk swirled of the possibility that an announcement will soon be made concerning the Brazilian government's plan to nationalize Brazilian Telephone, a subsidiary of Brazilian Traction.

Co-ordinator Speaks to Class At Collegiate

"Nuclear disaster could happen."

"We must be prepared to live if it does happen, and probably it will not happen if we are prepared to live."

These were the words used by Col. Angus D. Duffy, co-ordinator for the Quinte Emergency Measures Organization, as he spoke to the English for New Canadians' Class" at Belleville Collegiate on Tuesday evening.

Realizing that most of the new Canadians had seen war and its damages, Colonel Duffy said that most Canadians do not know the effect of a war on their own land, where not just several thousand men and women are sent away from their land to fight, but where all the men, women and children will be involved in self preservation.

A brief explanation of a nuclear explosion on one of Canada's probable targets, Toronto, and its effect on the surrounding areas was given to show how the use of a basement shelter may mean life or death for Belleville and surrounding district residents.

The organization of the Civil Defence for the Belleville area was briefly discussed telling how people from this and other areas could be helped in a time of disaster.

Several times Col. Duffy used the expression "we" and "us" prepared to live through a nuclear attack chances are we will never cause it," he said that in the Second World War gas warfare was not used because each side had this deadly weapon and were prepared to use it. He said this is also true with the war weapons.

Mrs. Gisel Fiin expressed the thanks of the class for the informative talk.

as payments to all manner of contractors and suppliers.

Not affected are pensions for the aged blind and disabled, family allowances, contributions to superannuation funds. These are provided in the permanent statutes of Canada, and do not need to be voted annually by Parliament—or monthly by war if the government tables bills.

Two courses were left open to the government at the time of Tuesday night's votes, depending on the reaction to the order dissolving the present Parliament and calling a new general election probably for April 8.

The first is to issue power of attorney to enable the governor to dissolve the expenditure of money out of the public treasury in effect, without formal approval of the appropriation. The warrants have to be tabled in Parliament when it next meets.

DISMISS SECOND COURSE

The second course open to the government is to call Parliament together Tuesday night was considered by the government but is so fraught with political controversy that it has been dismissed out of hand.

This course is to keep the current Parliament alive at least until the House of Commons would open its regular sitting at 2:30 p.m. (EST) today, table the 1963-64 estimates even though they are printed in English only. Then it could make its appearance in the senate to approve an interim supply bill granting the remaining authority needed for spending the balance of the 1962-63 appropriations and seeking interim authority to spend the new appropriations for the months of April, May and June, while an election is held.

In such a course, the government would be assuming responsibility which it regards now as resting on the doorstep of the opposition.

Belleville East Hastings PCs Will Meet

Belleville East Hastings Progressive Conservatives will hold a full-scale meeting in the city tonight.

For the event, the party will hear from an Ontario cabinet minister — Mines Minister George Wardrope.

The meeting has been called for 8 p.m. in the Tops Motor Hotel near Highway 401.

Also present will be East Hastings MLA Clarke Rollins. The Belleville East Hastings PC Association was formed earlier in the year to represent the parent provincial East Hastings organization in that part of the city now within the constituency.

Leader Donald C. MacDonald is in the prospects on the mainland, for the election being dictated until later, "perhaps in the fall."

He said Ontario's Conservative government will want the public to have time to "dissociate" the federal and provincial situations.

TO BRING IN BILLS

Today's session, the last before Provincial Treasurer James Allan brings down his budget is expected to see the introduction of several bills, Mr. Roberts said Tuesday without disclosing the content of the legislation.

In a 40-minute session Tuesday, the first since the legislature adjourned for the holidays before Christmas, the premier introduced a bill increasing the present six constituencies of suburban Toronto to 16, in line with a preliminary recommendation of an independent commission on redistribution of electoral districts.

Attorney-General Frederick Cass brought in several bills providing for revisions in court procedure, continuing a series of court reforms begun last year by the predecessor of Mr. Roberts, now lands and forests minister.

Teach Your Child to Love the Storm

Eloquent

may have anticipated—on Canadian domestic politics.

The division on the sub-amendment generally followed party lines. These deviations were noted:

Mr. Hamilton was not in the House. Two NDP members, Colin Cameron and H. W. Herridge, voted with the government as an expression of rejection of the Liberal opposition's policy in favor of acquiring nuclear weapons. A third NDP member, Harold Winch, abstained for the same reason.

WON'T SAY WHY

Edmund Morris (PC—Halifax), former parliamentary secretary to Trade Minister Hees, also abstained but declined to tell reporters why. Ordinarily a member in his seat in House is required to vote—but need not, unless he is challenged.

The House then went through the mechanics of attaching the Social Credit sub-amendment to the original Liberal amendment—after the word "government"—which added:

"This government, because of lack of leadership, the breakdown of unity in the cabinet, and confusion and indecision in dealing with national and international problems, does not have the confidence of the Canadian people."

With this phrasing overtaken by the Social Credit sub-amendment, the ensuing vote was almost a technicality. The vote was the same—142 to 111.

Bedlam followed. MPs cracked weeks of tension. About 600 persons in the packer galleries watched as they stood and cheered, started to break into chant and song, and threw papers with abandon.

All that Mr. Diefenbaker said was:

"Mr. Speaker, I shall advise His Excellency the Governor-General tomorrow, I move, seconded by the honorable member for Winnipeg South Centre (Veterans Minister Churchill), the adjournment of the House."

PM IS SMILING

He appeared unperturbed. He turned and walked out of the House, smiling, chatting with Conservative back - benchers who had cheered him to an echo in the government lobby just before the vote.

It had been his most difficult day in a week of crisis.

Before the House met, the day broke with reports of cabinet dissent.

Reports circulated of a meeting of several ministers including Trade Minister Hees, Transport Minister Balcer, Revenue Minister Hugh John Flemming, Justice Minister Donald Fleming, Senator Wallace McCutcheon, Mines Minister Martineau and Acting Defence Minister Sevigny.

These reports said the group would ask Mr. Diefenbaker to poll the cabinet on whether he should resign and give way to another as prime minister.

Mr. Hees denied it.

When the House convened at 2:30 p.m., Opposition Leader Pearson asked whether, in the view of the reports, Mr. Diefenbaker contemplated "any further changes in the ministry."

Said Mr. Diefenbaker: "I do not know what the current reports are that have been turned out by the Liberal propaganda factory."

Later Mr. Pearson replied: "Since when has the propaganda machine of the Liberal party found its headquarters in the office of a Conservative cabinet minister?"

IS AT HOME

While the ministers were reported to be meeting in Mr. Hees' office, the prime minister was at home and with him was Senator Allister Grosart, recently named national director of the Conservative Association and one of Mr. Diefenbaker's chief lieutenants in the last three election campaigns.

In the House, Mr. Diefenbaker made an emotional 35-minute appeal to keep the status quo.

After the NATO meeting in Ottawa in May, he said, referring to the nuclear-warheads issue, "we shall bring this matter before Parliament clearly, definitely and finally."

Meanwhile, as far as nuclear warheads on Canadian soil were concerned "we will continue to negotiate with the United States so that they will be readily available in case of need."

"This means that our security will be assured while at the same time we will be doing nothing to increase the nuclear family."

Relaying again in last week's state department release, he said:

"I believe in co-operation, in the closest co-operation, but not in the absorption of our viewpoint by any other nation. I believe in the maintenance in spirit and in fact of Canada's identity, with the right to determine her own policy without

Tax Files Turned Over To Auditor

OTTAWA (CP)—The revenue department has finally turned over the tax files that Auditor General A. B. Balls and I. Henderson wanted to see.

This was revealed in a report of the Commons public accounts committee, tabled in the House Tuesday by committee Chairman Alan Macnaughton (Lemoyne—Montreal Mount Royal).

In his annual report a few weeks ago, Mr. Henderson complained that he was denied access to three taxpayers' files in December, 1961, on the instructions of then revenue minister Nowlan.

Mr. Henderson said he wanted the files because money owing by the three persons had been withheld by the federal treasury board to reduce their tax indebtedness for the years 1954 to 1960.

In subsequent evidence to the committee, Finance Minister Nowlan said the law says tax files are secret and they should not be turned over.

Dr. Maurice Ollivier, chief parliamentary counsel, said in his opinion the 1951 act that gives the auditor-general access to all government records occasionally takes precedence over the secrecy provision in the Income Tax Act.

The taxpayers have never been identified, though Mr. Nowlan has said some of the cases of withholding money to meet tax debts involved MPs.

Dubin. "are you serious?"

"I think I am, sir," the witness replied, somewhat startled. "Yes, I know I am, sir."

Then Mr. Dubin began to recount incidents of wildcat work stoppages that hit various shipping lines, as SIU crews walked off their ships for "prayer meetings" to gain SIU demds.

The lawyer showed that some of Canada's top shipowners feared union reprisals if they testified before the Canada Labor Relations Board in 1961 as SIU recruiting methods. He built up a picture of keenly competing shipowners protesting and pleading for government action against the SIU, then making peace with the union and its president, Hal C. Banks.

CITES THREATS

The lawyer said it made a "rather terrifying picture"—with shipowners threatened by illegal strikes, fearful of union retaliation, subject to sudden walkouts of their crews and costly tie-ups. And this, said Mr. Dubin, was "all because of irresponsible and illegal actions" by the SIU against shipowners.

"That's right," admitted Captain Misener.

He also testified that the Misener lines signed the latest agreement with the SIU—which cut working hours but left pay rates untouched—after being assured it was similar to a contract signed by Canada Steamship Lines.

He said there was no negotiation or bargaining before the contract was signed last June. It will expire May 31, 1964.

extramural assistance in determining that policy."

PROMISES BUDGET

Mr. Diefenbaker promised a budget before the end of February. He promised to place the 1963-64 spending estimates before the House within a week. He promised new legislation, suggesting an election would be called when the government program is passed.

He questioned what would happen to a rising domestic economy in the months or even weeks ahead if an election were called.

Singling out the Liberals Mr. Diefenbaker told the New Democratic and Social Credit groups that if they vote no-confidence in the government they would be playing into the Liberals' hands.

Mr. Pearson gained the floor later, and said at one point:

"We have heard a passionate plea from the prime minister for the support of the opposition parties so that he may remain in power, not to complete the work but to begin the work he promised to do."

Dealing with defence policy, Mr. Pearson said the greatest question to the NATO meeting was an excuse for delaying, a government decision—it was "just a smokescreen."

TARTAR ONSLAUGHT

The Tartars swept into Russia in 1237 killing and plundering to set up an oppressive rule that lasted more than 200 years.

U.S. Is Pleased

statement had to take issue with the Canadian prime minister.

The issue essentially was simple. Diefenbaker had long been reluctant to equip Canadian forces with U.S. nuclear weapons under joint U.S.-Canadian control. Kennedy and his advisers believed the weapons essential for Canada's role in the defence of the North American continent and Western Europe.

A year ago, Diefenbaker told the Canadian Parliament that joint control of nuclear weapons could not be arranged under existing U.S. law. Four days later, on March 1, Rusk told a press conference here that such arrangements could be worked out. But he added that the decision, of course, was up to Canada.

At that time, Diefenbaker had not taken public offence and in fact the state department understood that Canadian officials were pleased with the way the matter had been handled. This impression was said to have been in the minds of the drafters of last week's statement.

TALKS BREAK DOWN

Following the Cuban crisis last October, Diefenbaker initiated secret talks with U.S. representatives on the possibility of obtaining nuclear warheads. The talks failed and the statement issued here last week said bluntly that Canada had failed to produce any kind of practical plan to solve the problem.

U.S. officials were obviously convinced that Diefenbaker in fact did not want Canada to have U.S. nuclear weapons, at least not for some time.

On Jan. 25, during a full-dress parliamentary debate, Diefenbaker stated his own position in a speech which in the U.S. view obscured the realities of the problem.

As the state department and the embassy in Ottawa understood his argument, he was saying that weapons developments, including increasing use of the Polaris submarine missile, did not justify Canada's arming itself now with the nuclear warheads for various land-based and airborne missiles. He also indicated a belief that the Soviet bomber threat was disappearing with the growing employment of long range missiles. And he declared he did not want to encourage the spread of nuclear weapons.

DISPUTED BY U.S.

It was to those arguments that the United States objected on the ground that for the most part they blurred the facts. In the public statement, the state department said, for example, that the Soviet bomber fleet will remain a serious threat for another decade.

The statement was bare of the usual diplomatic language employed to prevent offence to a foreign government.

It was issued Wednesday of last week. Thursday, Diefenbaker accused the United States of unwarranted intrusion into a Canadian debate on foreign policy.

Friday, Rusk apologized at a press conference for the harsh tone of the statement, but defended its release on the ground that the U.S. position had to be made clear.

The prevailing view in the state department now still is that the U.S. action was fully justified because of the gravity of defence requirements and that the United States still wants Canada to get nuclear warheads as soon as possible.

But a second thought among some officials suggests that if the whole thing had to be done over again it would be done in a much gentler and more diplomatic manner.

FIND SLAYING VICTIM

NEW YORK (AP)—A blonde, French-born divorcee was found bound and choked to death with a rope Tuesday behind the locked doors of her East Side luxury apartment. She had been brutally assaulted, more than $3,000 in cash, plus jewelry of apparent value, were found in the apartment of Mrs. Collette Joessien, 52, indicating robbery was not a motive.

Globe and Mail Against Dief As Leader

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail says in a front-page editorial that Prime Minister Diefenbaker should give up the leadership of the Progressive Conservative party.

The editorial says the precipitating factor in the expected election is "the indecision of Prime Minister John Diefenbaker."

It says:

"The man who could not lead the government into action to cure Canada's economic difficulties is unfit to lead the Conservative party into action in this election. For the sake of the party and the country, he should give up the leadership. In our view the country must always come first, but the welfare of the country is entwined with the welfare of the Conservative party. If Mr. Diefenbaker continues in the leadership he will do the party irreparable harm and perhaps destroy it as a national force."

Alonzo Boyd

cated he had reformed.

Parole officers helped Boyd find a job but, after several weeks, decided he should return to school. He had been taking a business course for the last two months.

Boyd's notoriety began with his arrest in 1961. A former commando member and military policeman, he was charged with six bank robberies, four of them carried out single-handed and the other with accomplices.

He escaped from Don Jail with Leonard and William Jackson before he could be brought to trial. They cut the bars of their cell, concealing the breaks with cardboard, and even moulded a microphone placed in their cell by police hoping to learn clues to the robberies.

After four months on top of the RCMP's most - wanted list, Boyd was arrested and charged with two more bank robberies. He was acquitted of one charge and was awaiting trial on another when he broke out of Don Jail again with Leonard Jackson and Steve Suchan in September, 1951.

After a month of freedom he was captured in north-end Toronto and was subsequently given a life term in Kingston.

ELEGANT DESSERTS

Here is a cookbook Elegant Desserts full of exciting recipes and ideas. It shows how to create new and different desserts quickly, easily and inexpensively. Like the earlier books in the Cooking Magic Series, it is full of beautiful illustrations, explicit instructions, and a wide variety of tempting recipes. Here is what you can do with apples. For a real "Quickie" use canned apples.

APPLESAUCE SHERBET:

Set refrigerator control at coldest operating temperature. Set a bowl and a rotary beater in refrigerator to chill. Set out a heavy saucepan.

For applesauce — wash, quarter, core and pare 6 medium-size (about 2 lbs.) tart cooking-apples. Put apples into the saucepan with ¼ cup water. Bring to boiling. Cover and simmer, stirring occasionally, 15 to 20 minutes, or until apples are soft and somewhat transparent. Add and stir until sugar is dissolved ½ cup sugar and ¼ teaspoon lemon juice.

Cool applesauce. Place in refrigerator to chill completely. For sherbet—blend together with chilled applesauce, 2 cups chilled buttermilk; 1 cup sugar; 2 tablespoons lime juice. Stir until sugar is dissolved.

To tint sherbet desired color, mix in one or more drops green food coloring.

Pour sherbet into refrigerator trays. Freeze until sherbet is mush-like in consistency.

Turn into chilled bowl and beat thoroughly with chilled rotary beater. Return sherbet to refrigerator trays. Freeze until firm.

Sprinkle coarsely chopped nuts over each serving.

Weddings

HARRIS—BATES

ROSLIN — On Saturday, January 26th, at 2 p.m., St. Paul's Anglican Church, Roslin, was the scene of a lovely winter wedding, when Dorothy Isabelle, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bates, Roslin, was united in marriage to Douglas George Harris of Vancouver, B.C., son of Mrs. K. Harris of Toronto and the late Dr. Kenneth R. Harris.

The ceremony was performed by the rector, the Reverend Gordon Black, assisted by the Reverend F. C. Beazer of Peterborough.

White 'mums adorned the altar and baskets of bells and white tinted 'mums and snapdragons the chancel. White satin bows designated the guest pews.

The wedding music was furnished by Mr. Fred Porter of Thomasburg, and included the hymn, "Praise My Soul the King of Heaven." Mrs. Earl Gray, soloist, sang "The Wedding Prayer" before the ceremony, and during the signing of the register, "Walk Hand in Hand."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in her floor-length gown of ivory peau de sole, fashioned on princess lines with fitted bodice and scoop neckline trimmed with Alencon lace studded with pearls. The full sun waistline was accented with a back bow. The sleeves were long and fitted and ended in lily-points over the wrists. The full skirt was trimmed with flower garlands of Alencon lace studded with seed pearls. Her only adornment was a necklace of cultured pearls with matching earrings.

She wore a shoulder-length veil of silk illusion tulle held in place by a crown headdress edged with seed pearls, and carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and stephanotis with trailing ivy.

Mrs. Douglas Reid of Belleville, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and Mrs. Charles Moult of Toronto, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid.

Both were attired alike, in royal blue velvet, street-length dresses and wore hats of white marabou and carried white marabou muffs, crested with corsages of blue feathered carnations, stephanotis and hyacinth bells. Matching blue shoes completed their costumes.

Dr. Ralph Harris of Toronto, was his brother's groomsman, while the ushers were Mr. Bert Tipping and Mr. Marty Hedges, both of Toronto.

A reception followed at the Hotel Quinte in Belleville for end Alfred Poulter officiated at the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Mrs. Robert E. McCulloch, and the bridegroom by Mr. McCulloch.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones left on Monday for a cruise on the Caribbean.

JONES — UNGER

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, January 30, at 4.30 p.m. in Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, when Miss Hattie Unger, of Picton, became the bride of Mr. Nathan Jones, also of Picton, Ontario. The Reverend Gordon Black officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride's table was daintily appointed with white linen damask and centred with the wedding cake misted about the base with tulle and topped with a vase of Sweetheart roses, completing the nuptial setting were the wedding bouquets.

The guests were received by the bride's mother, who was attired in a dusky-rose brocade dress with matching hat and corsage of pink Sweetheart roses and hyacinth bells. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who chose teal blue silk gown with matching hat and corsage of orange de-light roses and hyacinth bells.

For travelling the bride donned a pale green wool, two-piece dress in basket weave, a winter white coat and matching hat of ostrich feathers and marabou, with orchid corsage, beige kid gloves and brown bag and shoes.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris will reside in Vancouver.

Out-of-town guests were present from Windsor, Toronto, Peterborough, Belleville, Stirling and Tweed.

Bemersyde IODE Plans Annual Dance

CAMPBELLFORD—The January meeting of the Bemersyde Chapter, I.O.D.E., was held at the home of Mrs. Ed Hendricks with the regent Mrs. George Vice, in the chair, and 45 members present.

A new member, Mrs. Ross Bovay, was welcomed into the organization by the regent and members.

Educational Secretary, Mrs. F. M. Rutherford, read a communication from headquarters concerning loans, bursaries and scholarships available and a list of these was forwarded to Mr. R. Hall, principal of the Campbellford High School.

After some discussion, it was approved that a $300 bursary be given to a grade 12 or 13 student of Campbellford District High School. The student to be chosen must meet certain requirements set by a committee of teachers and a representative of the Bemersyde Chapter.

Services at home and abroad secretary, Mrs. R. Fox, reported that two families needing help had been looked after by Mrs. Murray Locke who thanked the members who helped pack Christmas boxes for the hospital and nursing home patients.

Mrs. R. Bennett, Public Relations secretary, read a Founder's Day report from headquarters which will be published before Feb. 13th.

World Affairs convener, Mrs. A. Whitfield, discussed the pamphlets of the UNESCO gift coupon plan, which she had distributed at a previous meeting. A decision concerning this plan will be made at a later meeting.

Commonwealth Relations convener, Mrs. C. Vanderman, read an interesting paper entitled "A Family of Nations", comparing the Commonwealth under the leadership of the Queen to a large family.

The annual dance will be held at the Masonic Temple this week with the highlight of the evening being the choosing of a royal couple.

The annual nomination of officers was held with the nominating to be made up of Mrs. Stuart Anderson, Mrs. Don Meyers and Mrs. Sam Clegg.

Baker.

During the dinner, music was supplied by several of the music students of Sister Mary Carmel Theresa including Ronald Quinn, Mary Quinn, Elizabeth Carew, Jacquie Le Sage, Charlene Cassidy, Peter Marsden and James McMormick. James McMormick also played three numbers on the piano accordion.

The guest speaker, the Rev. Father Rufus, of Holy Rosary Parish in Belleville, was introduced by Father Boyle. He spoke on the First Commandment and pointed out the ways it could be broken.

After the guest speaker, there was a film depicting a "Day in the life of a Priest".

W.C.T.U. Studies Life Work Of Mrs. Sara Wright, Pioneer

The W.C.T.U. met in the Y.M.C.A. for its January meeting, praying that new ideas and inspirations may endow the members with a rededication for the work, for which they stand, in the New Year.

Mrs. A. Wells gave a fine devotional taken from the 12th chapter of Romans, where Paul admonishes them to please God in their daily living, in response to all His blessings to them. "Let us too, take inventory of ourselves; put our hands in the hand of God, and He will direct our way all through the coming year."

Every day is a fresh beginning; let us search out what God would have us do; let us refrain from looking backwards. Foreward is the word for every Christian, said St. Paul. "Forgetting the things which are behind, I press on. Love, without revenge and wrath is the crowning good."

FILMS SHOWN

Two films have been shown in the elementary schools of the city with the co-operation of the principals and teachers. "The Brain in the Human" and "Theobald Faces Facts." Some 1446 pupils saw these films.

It is hoped the schools will also participate in the Essay and Poster Competitions.

The life of Mrs. Sara Wright, one of the WCTU pioneer members in Canada, Mrs. Wright was born in London, Ontario. Her home was a deeply religious one, and, at the age of 17, she began teaching in the Sunday School. After marriage she moved to Goldmaus, Ohio. Here she and her husband labored lovingly in a Sunday School of colored children.

Returning to Canada, she became superintendent of unit narcotics and also worked with the Womans Missionary Society of the Methodist Church, becoming president of the London Conference Branch.

She gave this all up to serve in the National Council of Women in the World's League against Alcoholism and also served in the Red Cross.

She was an orator of first rank and had a magnetic personality. Through all this public service she never neglected her home and family of four splendid sons.

Mrs. Meyers told about the "Toe Alpha" sixth annual youth conference held in Toronto at Christmas with some 400 young people attending. The theme was "Crusading For Better Living."

Mrs. Trupp gave a talk on "What Is An Alcoholic?" She cited many cases from her experiences as she goes about her social service work. She concluded her talk with the words of Paul, "I can do all things through Christ, Who strengtheneth me."

Miss M. Barnum brought greetings from one of the WCTU members touring South Africa.

Club Activities

WOOLER MESSENGERS

WOOLER — Wooler United Church 'Messengers' held their February meeting on Sunday morning in the church basement. Two leaders, Mrs. J Putnam and Mrs. N. Crosby were in charge with 22 members present. The meeting was opened by singing the Korean song, 'Bright Moon".

The worship "When Jesus was a Boy", was taken from the current issue of 'World Friends' with a number of members taking part.

Chapter 5 of the study book, 'Sun Rise and the Street Boy", proved interesting. Members received "World Friends" and several received their Messenger pins.

MUSEUM OFFICIAL DIES

NEW YORK (AP) — Barnum Brown, 8, curator emeritus of fossil reptiles at the American Museum of Natural History, died Tuesday of a stroke. Brown was known as the "father of the dinosaurs," a title earned during his 66 years with the museum.

Can a Girl Report Foreign News?

DEAR DORIS—I would like very much to become a foreign news correspondent. Can you tell me how much schooling I will need; also if they have any correspondents from Canada?

There is one trouble—I'm a girl! If there are no girl correspondents, is there any other work in the same line? Thank you.—GIRL.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR GIRL—Start being glad you're a girl. It could be worse. Girls don't collect foreign news as a rule, but in this day and age you could be the rare exception.

But a lot has to happen first: graduation from at least high school; work on the school paper; service with the local daily as a reporter; then if you have a flair for it, a column or feature of your own.

By that time you may want a home and children instead of a career on the other side of the world!

DEAR DORIS—I am 26, single and expecting a baby in April from a man I love very much. He works in another city. He knows about the baby and has since then written me more often, more intimate letters. Up until three weeks ago when all of a sudden his letters just stopped coming. What could be wrong?

Here are some other facts. (1) He's 35 and thinks he's too old for me. (2) He's a divorcee and never had any children. He also told me he was sterile.—DESPERATE.

* * *

DEAR DESPERATE—Could be that it has dawned on him he'll have some responsibility for this baby and he has started running in the opposite direction. Or he just can't resolve the fact (?) of his sterility with your pregnancy and suspects you of cheating on him.

Since he must face up to this, go and see him. No letters, not even long distance calls, are good enough to clear this up.

DEAR DORIS—My problem is with my three-year-old, who is the second eldest. She is terribly jealous of her younger sisters and also has a temper. One thing she has begun lately is talking back and biting if she can't have what she wants when she wants it.

She has been treated the same as the rest and given as much love and affection. Spanking her is of no use, neither is putting her to bed for punishment. We have tried talking to her also, both my husband and myself, but it does no good. —MRS. J. E. M.

* * *

DEAR MRS. J. E. M.—Things were better for Daughter No. 2 when she was a baby, so she talks baby talk. She is in the shadow of her older sister, and surrounded by other demanding little personalities.

Punishment is negative at best. Her temperament is different from the others. Study her, discover her strong points.

If she can draw, or carry a tune, encourage her. Build on any single thing in which she can outshine the others. And love her a lot.

* * *

TO MRS. R. B. C.—I have passed your message on to the would-be dieter. It is a complicated matter for an older woman to take off pounds.

* * *

TO UNCLE—Surely the woman who took you in and nursed you has a right to remembrance in your will. Far more right than nephews who had no time for you. And from what you say, she is going to need it more. Make the change while you have your health.

* * *

(Doris knows a Canadian resource which can help you. Write to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your enquiry.)

Shoulders Again

By ALICE ALDEN

The wonderful witchery of silk for gala evenings is beautifully expressed in this high-waisted black and white silk crepe dress designed by Bill Blass for Maurice Rentner's resort and cruise collection. The bodice is made of petal-cut black organza.

A wide, double-fabric, silk crepe stole goes along to provide cover-up and additional glamor.

Melrose W.I. Looks Toward Fine Season

The Melrose W.I. held the first meeting of 1963 at the home of Mrs. Raymond Clarke, the large attendance indicating great interest for the coming season. The president, Mrs. M. Lazier, opened the meeting in the usual manner and cordially welcomed all after thanking the hostess for opening her home.

A good percentage of the 30 members present responded to the "Roll Call"—"A Resolution I've Made and Kept," while some admitted they didn't make any because they never could live up to them.

The secretary, Mrs. R. McLaren, gave a full financial report and read several thank you notes for cards and gifts received during the festive season.

A euchre party was planned to be held in Melrose community hall shortly.

Mrs. G. McLaren, one of the life members, was honored at the Area convention, by being appointed Provincial Board member of Subdivision 5 in Huron Valley Convention area. She attended the FWIO annual meeting in Toronto in January and gave a few highlights of same.

The Officers' Conference for secretaries only will be held at Guelph this spring and the ACWW president will be visiting Ontario this summer and invitations will be sent out at to her itinerary.

TALENTS

At this stage, Mrs. C. Weese, convener of resolutions, took charge of the program and called on Mrs. R. Badgley, who dealt with the motto: "Resolved—Envy No Man His Talents—Improve Your Own." She explained the real meaning of "talents" and said in part, "We are inclined to look at the other fellow who excels in cleverness and let ourselves sink into the background. It's much more restful just to belong and do nothing, and adopt the slogan an 'Let George do it.' This seems to be the wrong approach for how can be improve without practice and after all, one can only do his best."

Mrs. H. McMechan followed with a suitable poem, "The Remedy," after which Mrs. E. Pascoe gave a humorous reading entitled "The Swinging TV Quartet."

Mrs. Weese introduced an amusing skit, 'Resolved to Know My Handbook' in which she invited the W.I. to stretch its imagination somewhat. The setting was a livingroom of a neighbor, (Mrs. S. Geneja), who welcomed Mrs. Weese and Mrs. H. McMechan, two W. I. members, who called to invite her to join this great organization and as their casual conversation progressed they divulged the objects of the Women's Institute, the founder who was Adelaide Hoodless, founded Sloney Cree's W.I. in 1897 and F.W.I.O. celebrated its 63th anniversary in 1962. The steady and healthy growth of this organization is evidenced by the 1,463 branches in Ontario alone; the workings of the institutes as they stretch out from branch to district; to area and F.W.I.O.; F.W.I.C. and to A.C.W.W.

Every individual member belongs to all of these organizations and the small fee for joining is shared by all three affiliations. The colors are royal blue and gold, while the motto "For Home and Country" is strictly observed and in the conduct of its affairs and in every phase of its work it is non-partisan, non-sectarian and non-racial.

OFFICERS DUTIES

The duties and qualifications of the various officers was duly outlined and the method of preparing the year's program was explained.

The official pin or badge worn by members was on display as well as the life-members' badge.

A wealth of knowledge of the hand-book was dispersed in a most novel way which held rapt attention throughout the entire skit. Mrs. Weese reviewed some of the 'Resolutions' which had been upheld by the Provincial Board and explained the rulings. She advised to use careful perusal of all resolutions before presentation, making sure the matter involved is sufficiently important to warrant a resolution. She urged all members to read their hand-books and thus ready themselves for the great "Challenges of Tomorrow".

A snow contest, conducted by Mrs. McMechan and won by Mrs. N. Demill brought this exciting part of the meeting to a close, after which lunch was served and a social time enjoyed.

Women's Institutes

The Moira W.I. held its February meeting Friday night in the church hall with an attendance of about 60.

After a delicious supper the president, Mrs. Elmer Thompson, opened the meeting.

A program was prepared by the conveners, Mrs. Ross Ketcheson and Mrs. Angus Mumby. First on the program was a sing-song led by Mr. and Mrs. Doug Farrel. Mrs. Ross Ketcheson introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Sidney McDonald, of Stirling, who spoke briefly on the W.I. and club work. He also showed slides of the wonderful scenery and beauty spots in Hastings County, which everyone enjoyed.

Mr. Ken S. Thompson thanked the guest speaker.

Music was given by Mrs. Gordon Foster and Mrs. Lorne Mumby; two selections of music by Mr. John Holden, and Mr. Harry Holden, also music by Mr., Mrs. Gordon Foster.

Mr. Wesley Farrel gave a talk on "Farm Safety" and of different ways to avoid accidents, something all can learn.

A solo, "The Heart That Sings of Thee" was given by Mrs. Angus Mumby. .

Motorists Are Surprised To See Woman as Manager

By JACK VAN DUSEN

OTTAWA (CP) — "They're surprised at first, but they get over it."

This is the way Mrs. Margaret Michaud describes the reaction of motorists when they walk into her office and find her in the manager's chair. She is believed the only woman manager of any motor league office in Canada.

Mrs. Michaud, an attractive, dark-haired mother of two and grandmother of one, is also head of the 30-member committee in charge of planning the annual Ottawa tulip festival, one of the city's biggest tourist attractions.

She says she became chairman of the committee because its members "suddenly decided we've never had a female on this either."

The busy housewife also takes time to help organize the annual jamboree here for thousands of school patrol youngsters across Canada.

"It's wonderful," she says of her busy run of activities.

Mrs. Michaud started with the first Ontario Motor League office when it opened here 11 years ago.

"Nobody was manager then," she said. It started with 600 members from Ottawa and district, and now has 21,000.

Previously she had worked with the British Admiralty technical mission, a wartime Liaison office where she did secretarial work and "a little bit of everything."

The Ontario Motor League, with a provincial membership of 130,000 is a trouble-shooting non-profit organization. For $18 a year members receive a variety of services, ranging from emergency tow jobs to road information and legal advice.

Mrs. Michaud's job is to take care of the Ottawa area division of the OML. Her staff of 12 office workers and 10 salesmen answered 17,000 service calls in the first nine months of last year.

"No day is ever the same," she said, "particularly during the peak season when you meet so many people."

A native of Ottawa, Mrs. Michaud has two daughters—"one going through the same schools I did here" and another, Mrs. Margo Raymond, living in Calgary.

St. Mary's P.C. Has Full Agenda

CAMPBELLFORD — There was a good attendance at the February meeting of St. Mary's Parish Council, C.W.L., when a review of the participation of the parishioners in the Dialogue Mass was begun. This has been strongly stressed by the hierarchy of the church and Rev. Father Walsh, spiritual director, began the review with the members in the spiritual part of the meeting. A continuance of these reviews and further study will be part of the spiritual program of the local parish council meetings.

Mrs. E. Kelleher, president, presided for the meeting and secretary, Mrs. Jas. Forrestal, read correspondence which included several thank-you letters. Mrs. L. Doherty gave the financial report in the absence of the treasurer, Mrs. J. Dikun.

CARD PARTY

It was announced that the next card party will be held later in February at the C.W.L. rooms. The Valentine Ball sponsored by the C.W.L., is to be held this month at Edgewater Park. The main purpose of this event is to get members of the parish together socially to get acquainted with each other as several new families have moved into the parish.

The annual Citizenship Tea and Christmas bazaar were discussed with the dates to be announced at a future date.

Games for the month of March will be in charge of Mesdames F. McEvoy, E. Kelly and C. W. Long. Everyone was urged to patronize these games as they are the largest source of revenue.

It was decided that St. Mary's Parish Council will give a cup for the annual public speaking contest held in St. Mary's School. This contest will be held at the P.T.A. meeting on February 22nd.

Disemployed New Term Now in Use

By ZENA CHERRY

According to a resolution passed at the recent Quebec Forestry Workers' Quebec lumberjacks wish henceforth to be known as foresters. The idea is to achieve recognition for the lumberjacks — excuse me, foresters — as craftsmen.

Disemployment is another word you'll be hearing. It means unemployment caused by machinery coupled with more efficient ways of doing business. It's said, disemployment over the next decade in the United States will be some one-quarter million jobs per year.

In Canada? Mr. J. F. Francis, Director of the Economics and Research Branch of the Department of Labor, Ottawa says, "As far as I know, no reliable estimates have been made of the extent of disemployment in Canada over the next decade. Is research undertaken to date, both in the United States and Canada, it has been found most difficult to separate satisfactorily the extent of unemployment resulting from technological change, other structural changes in the economy, and the level of demand for goods and services. An indication of the precariousness of making such estimates can be had from the fact that a United States government department some months ago estimated that 1.8 million workers were replaced by machines in 1961. It is rather interesting to compare this with the above estimate of 200,000 jobs per year."

(C) Miller Services Limited, 1963.

Congregational Meeting

MARSH HILL UNITED CHURCH

MARSH HILL — The congregational meeting of Marsh Hill United Church was held Wednesday night at the church. In the absence of the minister, the Rev. Robert Reid, Mr. Allyn Finkle was appointed chairman.

Liver Pate

by Mary Moore

You should be right here with me while I am telling you about this liver pate or you should have seen me make it.

To give you the right idea of its excellence I should call it pate de fois gras. But that means goose liver pate. Mine were made of turkey livers and chicken livers. Calves' liver and lambs' liver and baby beef liver could be used too.

The object of making this liver pate was 1) to give a good sandwich filling for mothers who have to pack lunches and 2) to give a high class spread for canapes to hostesses. For you see this pate is the same product you would pay, for a 5-oz. jar, $1.25 in a hostess shop.

Now another virtue this pate has is that it slices perfectly cold and is an ideal addition to a salad luncheon plate for dieters. My favorite.

Virtue No. 3 is that it is the only way some people like liver.

The liver should be frozen in advance, then partially thawed to make it firm enough to go through the grinder with out dissolving into a (pardon my candor) bloody mess.

EMEN'S LIVER PATE (pate de fois gras style):

1 lb. frozen chicken livers, slightly thawed, (or turkey, goose or calves' or lambs' or baby beef), ¼ lb. fat salt pork, rind off, 1 peeled medium onion, mild red Italian (or ½ Spanish), ¼ lb. mushrooms, washed, 1 clove garlic, chopped finely, 2 eggs beaten, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon thyme, ¼ teasooon cloves, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon mace or nutmeg, ¼ teaspoon black pepper, ½ of a bay leaf, crumbled finely.

NOTE:

Chicken livers are your best bet for they are regularly 49c per lb. in some supermarkets and often on "special" at 39c.

Put together through fine knife of food grinder slightly thawed livers, salt pork, onions and mushrooms. (Now if you have a blender, buzz half of this at a time in it to make it into a puree.) If you do not have a blender put it all through fine knife of food chopper once more. The smoothness of this mixture is one of the essentials of its success. It is sloppy work but once it is done there is very little additional effor'.

Now add the finely chopped garlic, beaten eggs and salt and spices and mix well.

What you bake this in depends on what you are going to use it for. If you are going to use it up quickly for sandwiches and lunches and snacks bake it in a buttered standard loaf pan. Or if you have individual baking dishes use them to bake it in, then you can freeze 2 or 3 of them for future use. Fill loaf pan or individual baking dishes only ⅔ full for this rule. Cover tightly with lid or buttered foil. Stand in large pan containing hot water and bake 2 hours at 275 deg. Fahr. Delicious hot. Wonderful cold.

WEDNESDAY

Vivid Silks Dominate Spring Show

LONDON (Reuters) — Vivid silks dominated royal dress maker Norman Hartnell's spring and summer collections that were designed after Queen Elizabeth's wardrobe for her current South Pacific tour.

Hartnell showed Tuesday nearly two weeks after his fellow-members of the Incorporated Society of London Fashion Designers, because of a burst pipe in his workrooms damaged fabrics and dresses.

Sun-drenched yellows, from orange to citron, vivid turquoise, jade, violet and magenta blazed through the salon.

Mandarin collars standing away from the neck were a feature, as were tunics, sometimes slashed up to the waist at the sides and worn over reed-slim skirts.

Vivid silk prints in French impressionist colors were worn under plain coats. Skirts were knee - length and jackets extended to the hip.

ANCIENT JAWBONE

Jawbone of an unknown primate discovered by British anthropologists in Kenya in 1961 has been estimated 14,000,000 years old.

Versatile Coat

BY GRACE THORNCLIFFE

Here is a pretty, versatile outfit—a ribbed cotton lounge coat that, on command, becomes a beach coat. It is shown with paisley printed jersey slacks for lounge or patio wear.

The coat comes in bright navy, gold, red or green. It goes in for gold ball buttons down the front, at the wrists and on the epaulettes.

Four patch pockets are smart and practical details.

2 Per Cent of Men Over 40 Now Color Their Hair

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—"Two per cent of men over 40 now color their hair," said Larry Matthews, who has made nearly $1,000,000 because he listened to his wife.

"But in 10 years one out of every five men who go regularly to barbers will have their hair color-toned."

Matthews, at 41 still a youthful genius of the beauty industry, was like many another restless veteran at the end of the Second World War. He didn't want to go back to his old line of work—taking fashion photos.

But what to do?

One evening he heard his wife complain, "Why is it—even in New York City—there's no place where a girl can get her hair set late at night?"

Matthews didn't let the idea drop. He took his savings, borrowed $800, and opened an all-night beauty salon in a hotel a few blocks from the Times Square district.

FOUNDED CHAIN

Business boomed from the start. His place was immediately popular with late-working actresses, early-rising fashion models, waitresses, hat check girls and lady insomniacs.

Larry turned out to have a natural aptitude for the field. In 13 years he built up a chain of beauty salons and men's barber shops that grossed about $5,000,000 annually. He bought himself a 68-foot yacht.

Last year he sold out for nearly a million bucks to a firm which promptly hired him to launch a network of 300 beauty and barber shops on three continents—in the U.S., Europe and South America.

Larry believes firmly the time is ripe for men to brighten up their top thatch.

"A survey showed four out of five wives wanted their husbands to tone up their hair," he said. "The men would like it too, but—except for those who already do it for professional reasons—many are still bashful.

"Yet properly toned hair is as important basically to men as to women. And this fact has to be accepted.

"It has to become public, not secret. That's the way it's going to be done—or I'm not going to do it at all."

Larry tints his own hair dark on top, leaving grey glints at the temple.

"Most men like a touch of grey on the sides," he said. "It makes them feel more distinguished."

Matthews has a simple success formula:

"Listen to your wife, and when she has a good idea, do something about it. It certainly paid off for me."

Little Guests Mark Friend's 7th Birthday

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Miss Debbie Jones celebrated her 7th birthday on Thursday afternoon with a supper party for her little friends.

Guests included: Miss Cheryl Hall and Master Randy Farrar of Trenton; the Misses Wendy and Christine Jones, Nancy and Cheryl Barr, and Ann Caves, also Masters Steven and Scott Jones, all of Bayside.

All enjoyed an hour of games, after which Debbie opened her many lovely gifts, one of which included a lovely wrist watch, a gift from her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Jones.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mr. G.J. — I realize my mistake. I want her back.

Fern J. — He can't expect me to talk my mother into returning.

* * *

Mr. G.J. — Five years ago, after 18 years of marriage, my wife and I were divorced. It was all a terrible mistake from a pile-up of just little quarrels. Now I don't want to leave a stone unturned if there's a chance for us to get together again.

Last year she married again. The man is so unsuited to her that I'm convinced she did it more out of spite than love. He is loud and uncouth. They have nothing in common. All her deepest bonds are with me, for we grew up together. We have a lovely daughter who is very dear to both of us.

I wouldn't dare approach my ex-wife with the suggestion that she divorce this man. But I want our daughter to plant the idea.

Fern J.—I agree that my mother's new husband is no hot-shot as a provider or conversationalist. He's uneducated and a bit on the vulgar side. But so far I've heard no complaints from my mother and she seems happy again. At least outwardly all appears calm and peaceful with her.

Why should I put a crimp in things? My Dad had his chance with her. They're wonderful people, but probably not good for each other. I remember how driven and harassed my mother looked whenever they were together. Of course, it may have been her fault too. I guess she never learned to handle a tense, brilliant man like my father. But she seems to have made a new life. I won't butt in.

The Council: Whatever these parents faults as individuals, they managed to rear a level-headed daughter. Fern is right. Mr. J. is unturning all the wrong stones. He's up the wrong alley and Fern can't change the face of the map for him!

In the long game he's been playing with his former wife, from childhood all the way through marriage and divorce and her re-marriage, surely he's had plenty of chance at bat. It looks as though the innings are played out and Mr. J. is asking for overtime. But you don't get overtime — to drag out the analogy — unless there's a tie. And this is no tie. The former Mrs. J. has taken a step that decides that outcome at least for the foreseeable future.

Who's to judge who's suited for whom? It's only the second who and whom. The first he is an outsider. He sees "vulgarity and impossible incompatibility. The other two see softness, kindness and tenderness in their union, and are blind to the faults which the outsider finds glaring.

Mr. J. faces a fait accompli. What he asks Fern to do now might have been in order before the re-marriage. And his present regrets may be a fair warning to others to go slow, very slow, with divorce and re-marriage. Looking back he finds that his marriage fell victim to a pile up of 'little quarrels.' Maybe that's how they look now But at the time, despite their child, the cleavage was sharp enough to make husband and wife want out forever. Now, on what grounds would Mr. J. ask his former wife to break with her present husband? On Mr. J.'s own say-so? No, Divorce-by-Edict is no go.

This is a case where time, not Fern, will tell Mr. J. how the winds blow on his ex-wife's life. Meanwhile he'd better not count on their blowing in his direction. He should try to enjoy other breezes.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: I had dinner with a friend at a restaurant la st evening and found I had no cigarettes in my purse. H doesn't smoke, so he asked the waiter to bring a pack to the table. I took out money to pa for them when they were brought, but my date wouldn't permit this and paid for the cigarettes, plus tip. Was this correct, or should I have paid him for them afterwards? — E. D., Chicago, Ill.

Answer: As host, your date takes care of ordering and paying for everything that is brought to the table, including cigarettes. There was no necessity — in fact, it was ungracious — to try to pay for them at the time, or to offer to pay for them later.

Question: I'm being married in the Spring and want to wear the traditional white gown and bridal veil, but I've been told that it would not be appropriate, since my fiance, who was married quite young, was divorced after a short time. I'm not sure, but I had the impression a bride could wear white and all the trimmings as long as it was her first marriage and regardless of whether the groom had been married before. Would you kindly set me straight on this? — E.W., Chicago, Ill.

Answer: Your impression is correct. It's the status of the bride that counts. If it's her first marriage, she may wear a long gown and veil if she chooses, even though her groom has been married before.

Three-Year-Old Does Not Let His Handicap Curtail Any of His Fun Activities

By DAVID SCOTT

BELLE RIVER, Ont. (CP)—Three-year-old Gary Widmeyer doesn't let his handicap curtail any of the fun a youngster his age should enjoy.

In fact, only a few months after his left leg was amputated near the hip to prevent the spread of bone cancer, he can keep up with any of his playmates.

He neither asks for nor receives preferential treatment from his twin brother, Barry, sister Debbie, 5, or Laurie, his one-year-old sister.

"Gary is actually the roughest of the bunch and I have to keep an eye on him," said his mother, Mrs. Crawford Widmeyer, wife of a Windsor police officer.

"I think he feels he has to prove he can do more than the others, and it's amazing the way he gets around. He gets better every day, climbing up on chairs, and onto the chesterfield."

The youngster's condition was first noticed last February when he fell while clambering up the kitchen radiator of the family's home on the shore of Lake St. Clair, about 20 miles east of Windsor.

YOUNGEST AFFLICTED

Gary was unable to walk after the fall, and the next day his leg began to swell.

It was some time before specialists discovered that the lad was probably the youngest person in Canada to be afflicted with bone cancer.

"Bone cancer is 90 per cent fatal in older children," said Dr. George Bernstein, a Windsor orthopedic surgeon. "But we felt that because Gary was so young, he would be able to pull through."

The leg was amputated in July, and Gary spent six weeks recovering in Hotel Dieu Hospital. Prior to the operation, Dr. Bernstein said, the youngster's doomed leg was treated with high dosages of radiation.

Although it has not yet been proved, some cancer specialists believe the radiation treatment builds up antibodies against cancer which would help combat a possible spread of the disease in other parts of the body.

"Gary didn't seem to realize after the operation that he was any different than any other child, and he didn't feel a bit sorry for himself," his mother says.

FEAR RECURRENCE

"He was sitting up in bed the day after the operation as though nothing had happened. When he came home in August I thought I would have to carry him everywhere, but I was amazed at the way he managed to crawl around. He could crawl faster than his brother Barry could run."

The Widmeyers took Gary back to hospital in November and he was fitted with an artificial leg. At first a therapist was needed to teach him how to get around on it, but before long the child was hopping about as fast as his brothers and sisters could run.

The leg has no knee joint, and Gary bobs up and down when he runs, but in a year or two, the stiff leg will be replaced with a jointed limb.

Dr. Bernstein said bone cancer is not inherited, and like other forms of cancer, the cause is not definitely known. He said there is a possibility the disease may recur in some part of Gary's body.

"He will be checked every two or three months and x-rayed just in case," the doctor said. "The place where this is most likely to show up is in his chest, and our last x-ray of that area showed no sign of cancer."

Only Twice in 96 Years Has Govt. Been Toppled By Non-Confidence Vote

OTTAWA (CP)—Only twice in the nearly 96 years since Confederation has a government been defeated on non-confidence motions in the House of Commons.

Both were minority governments and both were Conservative. But the similarity ends there.

Tuesday night the administration of John Diefenbaker was toppled by two votes on Liberal and Social Credit motions, each by a count of 142 to 111, in the shaky 35th Parliament which had sat for just over four months.

On July 1, 1926, Arthur Meighen's government fell on its third day in office. The vote was 96 to 95.

The episode began with the general election of Oct. 29, 1925, when the Conservatives won 116 seats, the Liberals 101, Progressives 24 and others four.

Liberal Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who had been in office since 1921, continued to administer with the Progressives supporting his minority Liberal group.

In the late days of June, 1926, a customs scandal erupted into a severe attack on the King government in the Commons.

On June 25, a Friday, the government was beaten on three votes in quick succession. None involved confidence issues, but it was obvious the government could not survive the next voting test.

Mr. King went to the Governor-General, Lord Byng of Vimy, and asked him to dissolve Parliament.

That afternoon Mr. King announced to the Commons he had asked for dissolution, being refused, and had resigned.

Lord Byng immediately sent for Mr. Meighen and asked him to form a new government. Mr. Meighen accepted and was sworn in by the governor-general on Tuesday morning.

Appointment of a new cabinet was announced to the Commons the same day.

Thursday, the July 1 Dominion Day holiday, Mr. King dropped a bombshell in the House.

A non-confidence motion said that Mr. Meighen had appointed a certain six Conservative MPs to acting cabinet posts at a salary and these MPs still were sitting in the House.

In that era an MP named to the cabinet had to resign and seek re-election before taking the post.

A long hassle ended in the vote which defeated the government. In the election which followed the Liberals won 118 seats, the Conservatives 91.

There was one more nonconfidence issue in the events of 1926 and those of 1963.

As the Commons met Tuesday for the vote on the crucial issue there was one body on the desk of Liberal Leader Pearson. It was the Hansard report of Commons debates for the period between June 9 and July 1—1926.

U.S. Criticism of Canadian Nuclear Policy Designed To Aid Pearson Says Writer

WASHINGTON (CP)—A Washington columnist speculates that the state department's public criticism of Canadian nuclear policy was designed to help Liberal Leader Pearson in his fight against Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

Doris Fleeson, writing in the Washington Star, says: "It could just be that some well-meaning friend here decided to give Mr. Pearson a hand. Precisely that suggestion is going the rounds with a rather important name attached."

She compares Diefenbaker to a "midwest Republican type, more than a little reminiscent of the recently-defeated senator Homer Capehart—an Indiana Republican Pearson, she says, is "a new-deal, new-frontier sympathizer, vastly popular with the intellectuals, diplomats and people of the U.S."

Fletcher Knebel, a syndicated columnist who usually writes of political issues in a humorous vein, comments that U.S. foreign policy is clear and simple: "France is bad for arming itself with atomic weapons—and Canada is worse for not doing it."

The Chicago American, noting reports of U.S. plans to make a tougher approach in prodding its allies into greater support of American international programs, remments that the Canadian dispute "has got the new policy off to an explosive beginning, but that doesn't prove that the new policy is necessarily wrong."

BACKS STAND D

The editorial adds: "For years past the United States has been politely begging its NATO allies to live up to their military promises, and they have smiled warmly as they murmured: 'Oh, sure—sometime.'

"The United States could get less and might get more by shooting our allies with sharper demands."

The Buffalo Courier-Express says "we think that most Americans and probably most Canadians would agree that in a shared defence of North America there should be shared nuclear weapons responsibilities, but above all there undoubtedly is agreement that a statement such as the state department issued is hardly a statesmanlike approach."

The Buffalo Evening News says: "The reason given for the brusque action of the U.S. government simply is that Canadian promises through the normal channels of diplomacy were not fulfilled; hence some drastic action in a matter involving survival of the continent had to be taken.

"Whether there was a softer way to bring the matter into the open may be debated, but the need for demonstrating unity on defence hardly can be doubted. Now that movins toward unity, there have been indications the two countries were drifting farther apart."

Man-in-the-News

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker's biggest testing hour came in the Commons in 1956 when he was the Conservative leader of political and legal trials.

In former days, the lanky Prairie lawyer held courtrooms spellbound from the village of Wakaw, Sask., to the august Supreme Court of Canada in Ottawa.

Tuesday, he presented his case in the highest court of government. The judges were his fellow members—of Parliament, not robes, but in the House also to the jury at large, the Canadian electorate.

The judges decided his case Tuesday night when the Commons voted on two non-confidence motions, defeating the government by identical votes of 142 to 111.

The jury's verdict will come in the election.

Veteran Diefenbaker, now 67, both entreated and poured scorn on his opponents.

Veteran parliamentary reporters remembered his earlier days in Parliament—lean figured, black cutaway hair, flaming eyes; the pointed finger, the voice that could quick retort to any interruption, and the unfinished sentence seeming to say more than it really did.

Tuesday—with the fuller face, grey to almost white hair and a body that has thickened by age and 5½ years in office have brought to him—he pulled out all the stops of his famous oratorical style to confront his opponents.

Trial in politics was almost as familiar to John Diefenbaker as the courts in which he played a prominent role from the age of 24. He won his first case in Humboldt, Sask., on his birthday.

He lost a bid to be mayor of Prince Albert, was twice defeated in provincial elections in Saskatchewan, and twice defeated in federal elections before he became MP for Lake Centre in 1940. Lake Centre constituency was merged with another and he found a new place in the Commons representing his old home city.

He lost twice in contests for leadership of the Conservative party before he won it in 1956. Six months before the general election that brought him first to the prime minister's office.

Youth Placed At Collins Bay To Serve Term

TORONTO (CP) — Steven Truscott, the youth who was sentenced to be hanged when he was only 14, has been transferred to a medium-security federal prison.

Truscott was given the death sentence at Goderich, Ont., for the June, 1959, sex slaying of Lynne Harper, 12, a schoolmate in Clinton RCAF station.

An appeal failed, but the federal cabinet commuted the sentence to life imprisonment five days after the youth's 18th birthday.

Truscott now is 18 and has served three years of his sentence at Guelph Training School. He will grow five inches while in the training school and will reach a height of six feet and weighs 165 pounds.

The death sentence passed on Truscott shocked the country. Nobody under 18 can be hanged now under legislation passed in December, 1960.

Truscott was moved to Collins Bay penitentiary, near Kingston, a few days before his birthday Jan. 18. The training school's age limit is 18. Prisoners at Collins Bay are from 16 to 26.

"Collins Bay seems the best place," said Allan McLeod, commissioner of penitentiaries.

"We don't just take up where Guelph Training School left off. Collins Bay has full opportunity for trade training and academic work. We understand Steven has done very well so far."

J. A. Graham, deputy minister of the Ontario department of reform institutions said:

"Steven has never given trouble. His behavior has been excellent."

Mr. Graham said Truscott is not automatically inclined, but has completed courses in machine shop and carpentry.

The youth had psychiatric treatment at Guelph and treatment will continue at Collins Bay.

His father visited Collins Bay and said he is completely satisfied with the move.

"He's in good hands here," said his father. "He continues his regular visits. We hope he'll be equipped for a good life after this because that is always in our minds."

Truscott will not be eligible for parole until he has served 10 years, by which time he will be 25.

Lord Samuel, Elder Statesman, Of Liberals, Dies

LONDON (AP)—Lord Samuel, elder statesman of Britain's Liberal party and a powerful influence since the Edwardian reform era, died Tuesday. He was 93.

The death of Herbert Louis Samuel left Sir Winston Churchill the sole survivor of the famous Liberal government of Sir Henry Campbell - Bannerman which in 1906 laid the foundation for the modern welfare state.

The son of a wealthy Jewish banker from Liverpool, Lord Samuel was a power in British politics but never a top leader.

Lord Samuel had been ill since before Christmas. His funeral will be private but a memorial service is planned at the new West End Synagogue in London Feb. 14.

"This is a great personal loss," said Jo Grimond, present head of the Liberal party. "Lord Samuel . . . was not only deeply respected but loved by all who knew him."

Earl Attlee, former Labor party prime minister, described him as "a very fine man, a wonderful speaker, 'extremely lucid and clear."

Lord Samuel was one of the leading pioneers of British Zionism during the Second World War.

STICKLER FOR DETAIL

As Speaker of the House of Lords from 1944-55 he showed himself still brilliant and thrusting in debate, a stickler for details and a visionary in the ways of the world.

He never shirked from adopting an unpopular stand if he considered it the right one.

Lord Samuel received his first government post in the 1905 government as undersecretary of the Home Office.

Subsequently he became postmaster-general, president of the local government board, forerunner of the ministry of health, and home secretary.

Among important measures he helped draft was the Workmen's Compensation Act. He nationalized the telephone system.

He was first high commissioner in Palestine in 1920. He was returned to parliament in the general election of 1929 and was acting leader of the Liberals during the illness of David Lloyd George.

He became home secretary in Ramsay Macdonald's national government. He lost his seat in the Commons in the 1935 elections but was raised to the peerage.

He was first Viscount Samuel of Mount Carmel and Toxteth in Franklin, in 1937. They had three sons and a daughter. Lady Samuel died in 1958.

De Gaulle's Activities Have Strongly Revived Russian Worry About West Germany

MOSCOW (AP)—President de Gaulle's activities of the last three weeks have strongly revived Russian worry about West Germany.

That is the principal finding by this correspondent in a survey that has included Russian opinion, and the opinion of diplomats of both East and West.

Concern about Germany is not new here. It has brewed with the generations, and particularly under the Soviet regime.

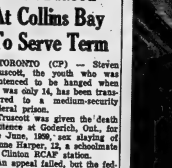
What is new is that the de Gaulle-Adenauer treaty has revived Soviet fears, which diplomats are convinced are greater that Germany may sometime find its hands on nuclear weapons it can use largely at its own discretion.

This concern was shown Tuesday. Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko called in the French and German ambassadors to lodge a protest against the treaty, signed by de Gaulle and Chancellor Adenauer in Paris early this month.

A French spokesman implied that Gromyko brought up the nuclear arms for Germany idea. He said the notes "contain the same line of propaganda as has been appearing in the Soviet press."

Wise Money in West Germany Riding on Chancellor Adenauer

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer



Once again in West Germany it's the old fox vs. the paper tiger, and wise money rides on the fox.

Once again Vice-Chancellor Ludwig Erhard comes lumbering out of his corner, lists clocked, and once more Chancellor Konrad Adenauer appears set to slap him down almost absentmindedly, as in the last two earlier scraps.

Authoritarian as ever at an unbelievable 87, Germany's patriarch has promised to retire in October. Maybe he will, maybe he won't. Meanwhile "machtpolitiker" and succession crisis, sharpens, and the claimants to the champion's belt grow increasingly bigfety.

Pawing the air tenatively, Erhard says in an interview that he's ready to take over heads of government any time the people say. Partying, Adenauer tells the shadow chancellor his moment will come in due course.

Reaching, remembering 65 year-old Erhard's reputation as a paper tiger who crumples in the clinches, figure the election will go to Adenauer.

Parliament's Most Exciting Hour in Living Memory, This Is How Clock Saw It

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP)—Parliament's longest hour ended at 9:05 p.m. It ended in an uproar. With the tension of weeks lifted at last by defeat of the government, MPs on all sides of the House of Commons threw papers, stood cheering, and burst into song.

It was Parliament's most exciting hour in living memory. This is how the clock saw it:

8 p.m.—The galleries were jammed and humming, with about 600 seated and scores more standing wherever there was room. Hundreds waited outside. A few MPs strolled into the chamber.

8:04 p.m.—The bells sounded. Speaker Marcel Lambert and the House clerks entered in procession. More MPs flooded in, making a nearly full House.

8:13 p.m.—T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, resumed the speech he had broken off for the 6 p.m. dinner adjournment. He spoke about defence policy. But he had an inattentive, restless audience.

8:15 p.m.—"The hour of decision has arrived," said Mr. Douglas. Let there be a general election." House rules required the vote to start by 8:15 p.m.

Speaker Lambert yawned and waited for the whispers to die. With grave decorum and in unspaced tones, he read the confidence amendment and the Social Credit non - confidence sub-amendment.

8:16 p.m.—The Speaker called for the voice vote on the sub-amendment. Social Credit MPs on the floor of the House only to be dominated by "oui." Then, as one, another large group voiced an even louder "nay." Speaker said in his opinion the Nays had it. Dozens of MPs stood to demand a recorded vote. "Call in the members," said the Speaker, and the bells rang.

8:28 p.m.—With the Whips gone to marshal their forces, the babble on the floor grew louder. From time to time Speakers cheers could be heard in the government lobby. Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Pearson, leaders of the government and opposition, were in a cluster at their front benches. Mr. Diefenbaker with Ken More (Lambton-Kent-Middlesex) and others. A few MPs studied newspapers as if unconcerned. Works Minister Hamilton sat alone for a long time studying a paper on his desk.

8:39 p.m.—The Whips—Liberal J. A. Habel of Cochrane and Conservative Theogene Ricard of Restigouche-Bonaventure—appeared behind the bar at the main entrance to the chamber. This was the signal to call in the members.

8:40 p.m.—Mr. Habel took his seat, locking in the Liberal and other opposition members. But Mr. Diefenbaker's colleague, Mr. Ricard stood, glancing around. He was summoned to the chair by Mr. Lambert, then went behind the curtains. There stood P. E. Hambidge (PC—Kindersley) and Mr. Habel, earlier was named lieutenant-governor of Saskatchewan and was thus unable to vote. Mr. Ricard and Mr. Ricard returned and took their seats.

8:41 p.m.—With unerring accuracy, second clerk assistant Gordon Barnhart began calling off the names of MPs standing for the sub-amendment—first the Social Credit members in the Liberals. A whisper rippled in the Press Gallery: For member defence minister Hellyer was not in his seat. But by now votes had piled up for the sub-amendment with the result more no possible combination of abstentions could save the government; the 142 needed an NDP member.

8:46 p.m.—It. With pre-arranged signals, reporters unmauer's case as a tragedy. He added:

"Herein lies the tragedy: The folly of tampering with the basic laws of change and to extend the longevity of the 'Adenauer era' beyond human scale."

In the end, therefore, "the paper tiger's turn may come. But it is hard not to feel some sympathy for the old fox," the man still cherishes a postcard, sent during a previous crisis by an anonymous critic and containing just three words: "You old rascal!"

able to budge in the packed Press Gallery advised their colleagues at the door and the race began. The flash of the government's defeat was on the Canadian Press wires at 8:45½.

8:49 p.m.—With the formal roll - call completed and the votes tallied, Clerk Raymond announced the official result in English and French—for the subamendment 142, against 111. Speaker Lambert declared the sub-amendment carried.

The government had fallen. Surprisingly, there was little demonstration in the House. There was more noise a few minutes earlier when NDP members H. W. Herridge and Colin Cameron bolted party ranks and voted with the Conservatives.

8:50 p.m.—Since the Social Credit amendment had changed the main Liberal amendment, a roll-call on the latter began without ceremony or comment. Diefenbaker sat reading a book.

9:05 p.m.—The clerk announced the result. It was the same—142 to 111, with the same MPs voting. Dead thumping began. Opposition Leader Pearson rose and so did Mr. Diefenbaker. The former recognized the prime minister.

He said:

"Mr. Speaker, I shall advise his excellency, the Governor-General tomorrow. I move, seconded by the honourable member for Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. Churchill), veterans minister) the adjournment of the House."

Prayers

At 9 A hansard assistant passed the noise of the sergeant - at - arms, Lt. - Col. David Currie, and he stood waiting for the formal adjournment—his signal to remove the mace. House officials stood, cheered and burst into fragments of song. The Speaker followed the House—but not before inviting MPs to his chambers for a social gathering.

Mr. Diefenbaker turned and walked out, smiling and chatting with reporters and well-wishers. Transport Minister Hees and Trade Minister Hees crossed the main aisle for handshakes with Liberal Leader Pearson and others. The galleries emptied. That was all.

CAMPBELLFORD

P.S. Principal Tells Rotary Club of Life in West Germany

CAMPBELLFORD — William Rothwell, principal of Bridge St. public school, spoke to the Campbellford Rotary Club at their regular meeting this week on his visit to West Germany, and his impressions of their way of life.

He was among a group of recreation directors who spent the summer among the Canadian troops in West Germany, sent by the Canadian government to institute programs of recreation among the children of the occupation troops.

RECREATION SUPERVISION

The group made up of teachers and university students were charged with the supervision of recreation with the assistance of helpers trained for this purpose. The need for such programs is based on the fact that Canadian army personnel and their families are not encouraged to mingle with the German people, and even if they were the language barrier would present a problem. The army personnel live greatly to themselves, in blocks of apartments and even purchase their needs from Maple Leaf Services, a Canadian store.

The children go to schools which are taught by Canadians from the courses prescribed by the Ontario Department of Education.

SIMILAR COUNTRY

Concerning the country near the camp at which Mr. Rothwell was stationed, it might be said to be similar to that between here and Brighton, except the hills are somewhat larger. There are many forests. Assigned to each area is a forest master who patrols his section daily. There is no underbrush and there are no forest fires. One must not cut a tree, even one belonging to himself, without permission.

CLEAN HOMES

The buildings give an impression of permanency, now being made of wood. The house, the barn and any other buildings on a farm are all joined together. There are practically no fences and the home is scrupulously clean. Even though it rains a good portion of the time, windows in the home are cleaned daily, and the walk into the home is washed. The woman of the house looks after the garden which is absolutely clear of weeds.

The men, in going to work dress in their "good clothes" and carry their lunch and a bottle of beer or so in a brief case. They change clothes at work and again before returning home. There is no unemployment.

GOOD TRANSPORTATION

One thing for which the Germans can thank Hitler is good transportation. The super highways are excellent and their railways are efficient. The fact that there is no speed limit contributes to many automobile accidents.

The father is head of the family in every respect. Children don't question their parents and, the family is of very tight entity. For instance, the entire family go walking together in the park on Sunday afternoon. There is not the rush we find in Canada. The German family takes a full two hours for dinner. Women do not wear slacks and the German girl is faithful and thrifty.

GREATLY IMPRESSED

The three things Mr. Rothwell said impressed him the most were the respect of the children for adults, the slower pace of living in general, and the unity of the family.

The Germans still fear the Russians, and generally speaking, are tolerant and polite to the American and Canadian troops. There are no troublesome youth gangs.

The speaker was introduced by H. MacMillan and thanked by A. D. Bennett.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

How often have you come across an owl after dark? Anybody would imagine that to be the best time to find them; yet though we may hear their voices at a little distance we rarely see them once the sun has set and never hear the swish of their wings. Mother Nature has supplied these nocturnal birds of prey with special plumage as well as special eyesight that they may be proficient in finding food.

The flow of air through spaces between feathers is actually the cause of the noise which we sometimes describe as a "whirr of wings". But an owl's feathers are unlike those of any other feathered creature: especially soft and fluffy, and clinging together in such a way that there are no little cracks left through which air may pass. Consequently, the owl moves so stealthily that it is inaudible to the victim or to us.

"Mouse" heads an owl's list of desirable food, followed by rats, other small mammals including squirrels, chipmunks and rabbits, a great quantity of insects, other birds including those as large as grouse, lizards, frogs and toads, spiders, crawfish, scorpions, earthworms, and even fish. Actually, the size of the owl pretty much determines the food preferences, however, for this is not so in every case.

The great horned owl with his huge talons and swift swoop has been dubbed "the evil genius of the woods." It can catch and kill even a woodchuck or a skunk. And though flesheaters for the most part feed upon non-flesheaters, the voracious great horned will devour any creature it is able to kill. Yet, despite this bad reputation, like all its relatives it does much good in keeping down the population of mice and rats.

As all owls swallow their catch whole whenever possible and then disgorge any indigestible part neatly wrapped up in the form of a pellet, we know exactly what they eat — there is no guesswork. These pellets found under a tree indicate an owl has been living in the branches.

A naked, waxlike membrane at the base of an owl's bill (known to bird students as the "cere") is hidden in the face feathers. The bill though hooked for tearing prey apart while the powerful talons hold it firmly, is unusually small and, quite evidently, not the tool used for catching or killing the victim. The hard work is accomplished with the great, powerful feet and long, strong, curved claws.

CAMPBELLFORD

C of C Names 1963 Officers, Hears Talk on 'Water Safety'

CAMPBELLFORD — Robert B. Bennett was re-elected president of the Campbellford Chamber of Commerce for a second term at the annual meeting of the Chamber at the Riviera Inn, on Tuesday night. J. F. B. Douglas, Q.C., was named honorary president and also the Chamber's legal advisor.

1963 OFFICERS

Douglas R. Maybee, a former mayor of Campbellford, and now vice-president of the Lake Ontario Development Association, was named first vice-president and Ronald Simpkin was named as second vice-president.

Mrs. Barbara Lauesen was hired as secretary and William Pope was named treasurer. Directors are: Mayor Morley Tanner, Gordon Oder and Ray Pettey.

William R. Dawson will head the industrial committee, T. E. Burgis will head the retail merchants' committee; Kees Vandegraaf is head of the tourist committee and the public relations and publicity committee will be headed jointly by William W. Reid and Barry Lasenade.

Douglas R. Maybee was named as the Chamber's representative to the Lake Ontario Development Association and Don Meyers was returned as representative of the Chamber of the Trent Waterway Authority. George H. Free will head the membership committee.

GUEST SPEAKER

Guest speaker for the evening was Ernest Taylor, director of outdoor recreation with the Ontario Safety League.

Mr. Taylor said pleasure boating was the fastest growing outdoor sport in Canada and that an increase in water safety naturally followed.

The outboard and boat trailer have made it possible for practically anyone to become the skipper of his own ship — an appeal that seems irresistible from the number of trailer sailors crowding the highways each summer weekend.

PROVINCIAL PARKS ASSIST

The development of Provincial Parks in Ontario has brought swimming, boating and water skiing within the reach of thousands of families who otherwise might be deprived of these healthful activities.

The expansion of Ontario's natural assets as a water holiday area is as it should be, but it brings additional problems of keeping waterways safe, without unnecessarily curtailing of personal freedom and the enjoyment of a carefree vacation.

Mr. Taylor said that the answer to a reduction in boating accidents and drowning was threefold — legislation, enforcement and education.

SAFE BOATING LAWS

Legislation has come from the dominion level, but the great number of pleasure boats much larger than the government anticipated, has created a back-log in licensing boats. This is being corrected. Rules and regulations for safe boating are being studied.

Enforcement has become easier with the removal of responsibility for the enforcement from the RCMP. Boating laws are now incorporated into the criminal code, and are thus enforceable by provincial or municipal police officers. There is a need for co-operation on the part of civilians with the existing authorities, set up on a basis similar to the U.S. Coast-guard Auxiliary, said the speaker.

SAFETY EDUCATION

Education is being carried out by the Canadian Power Squadrons, Canadian Boating Federation, The Red Cross Society, St. John Ambulance, The Ontario Safety League and others.

Mr. Taylor said that efforts to educate the boating public in the rules of safety had paid off. In spite of the fact there are more than twice as many pleasure boats operating now compared to five or six years ago, drownings through boating accidents have been cut to less than half. Figures show there were 507 drownings in Ontario in 1957, 347 in 1958, 310 in 1959, 339 in 1960, 306 in 1961 and 246 in 1962.

While the steady decrease in drownings is heartening, the month of May has for some years been the worst month for fatalities in the water. This is caused partly because of drinking and partly because many operators are on the water for the first time and have not become adept at boat handling.

The water is cold-er and people wear heavier clothing; which could pull them down if they are tossed into the water. Safety equipment is often inadequate.

FAVORED WITH SONGS

Mr. Taylor, a former Broadway star, sang a number of songs for more than 60 Chamber members and their guests. He was presented with a gift from the Chamber by Reeve George H. Free, who voiced the thanks of the group to Mr. Taylor.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

PICTON — The hockey hillbillies from Wellington called her "Harve's Rabbit Hutch." The sucker-spearing Men of Milford called her the "Ice Shack." Cherry Thompson and his Bloomfield Backwoodsmen dubbed her "The Shanty." Town-slick teams, like Nelly Korle's Blackburn, Jack Vansavery's Rogers Batterylove and others had another name for her.

The other day the venerable building known as "Harve's Arena" collapsed. In her all-wood newness a century ago she was the county's Taj Mahal, the compact-size skating arena of the district.

For many decades she lived high on a menu of shooting, cheering hockey crowds. Thousands of county people learned to skate on her placid icy bosom. Her colorful winter carnivals pulled the rural dwellers from the creeks, ponds and large expanses of East and West Lake open-air skating theatres.

In the summer the pigeons loved her rather low upper areas. So did the town's small-boy sharpshooters whose ".22's" were for the "birds," usually aimed 'em, and perforated the roof like the top of a salt-shaker. When the rains or thaws came "The Hutch" had the first natural sprinkling system in the district.

The other day her wobbly legs buckled and she sagged slowly to the ground in a rubble of creaking wooden boards. She died of old age and loneliness. There were no mourners at her deathside for the end came suddenly.

Built by Wellington Boulter, well known county canning tycoon, this arena had her heydays of hockey glory. Picton's crack OHA junior clubs battled the cream of Ontario clubs in league play and playoffs in the early years of the century.

During the latter years of the Roaring Twenties and the early seasons of the Intouchables' depression era, her sides bulged with capacity crowds of the county faithful.

Some called the county circuit the "Blood and Thunder" loop. Twice a week town teams and those from Milford, Wellington, Bloomfield and Demorestville waged ice battles that drew the faithful from Waupoos to the Carrying Place.

There was nothing professional about the league. The players were as homebrew as old cider. The only "imports" were the mail-order catalogues some wore as shin pads.

The rivalry between the clubs was equalled only perhaps by the loyalty of the fans. Bad weather was no deterrent to attendance. Be it sub-zero or blinding blizzard the pewsters crammed the "Hutch" to overflowing. Some nights many were turned away.

Players bought their own skates and sticks. They "kicked" into a fund to buy club sweaters. The league funds were split among the teams at season end. One year the Wellington "Dukes" received nearly $300 as their share.

The Harve Arena of those days was not blessed with modern equipment. Manager Ab Hare had no artificial ice machinery worries. His best friend game nights was the weatherman. At that it had to be extremely mild to cancel out games. Not a few were played with players' skates kicking up tiny rooster tails in their wake.

Nor was parking any great problem. Some nights when the roads were clogged with snow, preventing automobile travel, the clubs, rather than cancel games and disappoint the fans, travelled by horses and sehghs.

One night the Wellington team's sleigh broke down near the Lockyer greenhouse and players and fans trudged through the snow to the arena.

Ab Hare's arena has gone. But Picton's well known hockey and skating landmark that served its town so faithfully and well over nearly a century will always be remembered when the "boys" of those halcyon days get together.

I'm sure that as long as the Pete Coles, Ron Churches, Raymie Hudgins, the Myatts, the Haddons and others of Picton, the Gerald Gibsons, Danny Greenfields of Wellington, the Scots of Milford, the Cherry Thompsons of Bloomfield, Norman MacDonald, the Dalnards and many others of that hockey-playing era are around, the memory of Ab Hare's "Hutch" will never fade.

How about it, Peg?

Hints Networks Will Carry Saturday Games

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Jake Gaudaur of Hamilton, Canadian Football League president, said Tuesday he was unable to make any official announcement, but indicated that a deal has all but been concluded between the CBC and CTV networks to permit the CBC to carry telecasts of Saturday CFL games.

Gaudaur also indicated the deal calls for the CBC to carry the games over the whole network.

Here to attend a sportsmen's dinner, he also dropped a hint that Montreal Alouettes are planning to play Sunday games this fall.

WILL DEFEND TITLE

The match here will consist of 24 games. Botvinnik needs only 12 points to retain his crown while the challenger must collect 12.5 points to win. The series probably will continue until May.

And He's Not Wearing A Halo ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Young Tops Saints-Sinners League

By MARVEN MOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Before the start of the 1962-63 season, National Hockey League referees got a directive from President Clarence Campbell to crack down on the rough stuff.

He called for strict enforcement of the letter of the law against such offences as boarding, hooking and holding and encouraged the revival of the penalty shot as punishment for flagrant infractions against players in scoring position.

This year Campbell issued no special instructions. The rash of bodies crashing into the boards still echoes merrily around the circuit. Few offenders of other years have been observed wearing halos, yet only two penalty shots have been called.

But statistics indicate little change in the degree of official vigilance.

In the 150 games played so far—there are 70 to go—the referees have called a total of 3,101 minutes in penalties.

Roughly that's equivalent to the penalty box time at this point in the schedule last year and the same goes for the previous season.

Howie Young, the Detroit defenceman is a far - and - away leader in individual penalty minutes this season with a 171-total. In fact, he appears to be well along the way to a league record—the 365-minute mark established in the 1953-54 season by Montreal's Lou Fontinato, who was with New York Rangers at the time.

Young's total is remarkable because it includes only three majors. All the rest were minors, a total of 78 infractions.

Howie and his Red Wings mates go against Chicago Black Hawks in Chicago tonight and Montreal is at New York in the league's only games.

Forward Larry Jeffrey will be making his return to the Detroit lineup. Jeffrey was recalled from Pittsburgh and yet eran Vic Stasiuk was sent to the Detroit farm club in the Eastern Hockey League. The rookie started the season with the Red Wings and was demoted two weeks ago.

New York meanwhile will have a newcomer in centre Don Marshall, purchased last week from Boston Bruins in a swap for left-winger Dean Prentice.

Doug Harvey No Exception
'Boos' Inevitable Says Richard

NEW YORK (AP)—"It happens to most outstanding players near the end of their careers," says Maurice Richard, referring to the fact that Doug Harvey is the target of verbal abuse almost every time he skates on the ice in Madison Square Garden.

"Harvey was a great player. He is still a good player. The fans should take into account his past record and not boo him," said Richard in a telephone interview from Montreal.

Richard is the National Hockey League's all-time leading scorer and Harvey's former teammate with Montreal Canadiens.

Harvey, 38, whose coaching and defensive wizardry led New York Rangers into the playoffs last season, signed a $30,000 player-only contract after relinquishing the coaching job. He also has special permission from the team's management to travel to his Montreal home between games.

As a result, the seven-time winner of the Norris Memorial Trophy as the league's outstanding defenceman has missed most of the fifth-place Rangers' practice sessions.

Richard said "Doug is not the type to worry about the boos. Besides, it happened to Babe Ruth and Joe DiMaggio near the end of their baseball careers. It happened to me too in the last year or two."

Ed. Machen Removed From Top 10

NEW YORK (AP) — Eddie Machen, the long-time No. 1 heavyweight contender, has been removed from the top 10 in the February boxing ratings by Ring magazine.

As a result of the ailing Machen's elimination, former heavyweight king Floyd Patterson was promoted to first place from second and undefeated Cassius Clay of Louisville, Ky., to second from fifth in the rankings, released today.

Doug Jones of New York, who meets Clay in New York March 13, retained his third ranking and Sweden's Ingemar Johansson was boosted to fourth from sixth.

OPEN CARIBBEAN TOUR

PANAMA (AP)—The Panama Open, first stop on the annual Caribbean golf circuit, will be held here Thursday to Sunday with about 60 top United States, Canadian and Latin American pros participating. The circuit also includes tournaments at Maracaibo, Caracas, Puerto Rico and Kingston, Jamaica. Among the pros invited are George Knudson and Alvie Thompson, both of Toronto.

Hairy-Chested Heavyweight Wins Comic Opera 'Battle'

MONTREAL (CP)—Georges Thibault, a hairy - chested Montreal heavyweight who has never bought anyone listed in the ring record book, Tuesday night extended his string of knockout victories to eight in a comic drama with slight boxing overtones.

The victim this time—at 2:45 of the opening round in a scheduled eight-rounder—was Billy (Kayo) Brown of Washington, D.C., an unknown with a massive paunch and ear-to-ear grin which he seemed to be wearing even as he fell.

Thibault, 27, a great favorite with Montreal's French-speaking fans for his slambang whirlwind style, found the script somewhat reversed.

Normally he rushes from his corner at the bell and pounds his opponent to the canvas without taking so much as a breath. But Brown took a swig from a soft drink bottle, hitched up his oversize shorts and went out to do battle with arms flailing.

Thibault was obviously befuddled, backtracking furiously before a hail of haymakers. Several landed and, if anything, Georges showed he can take a stiff belt on the chin.

Brown missed once in unlimbering one swing and pirouetted — rather ungracefully —to the floor. The referee ruled it a knockdown despite Brown's pained protests. And he had to take a mandatory eight count.

Then Thibault landed his first crisp punch of the bout. Brown, visibly stooped, keeled over and lay face down on the deck for the 10-count.

CONTRACT RENEWED

TORONTO (CP) — Managing director Lew Hayman of Toronto Argos has been re-appointed for another three-year period, it was announced Tuesday following the annual meeting of the Eastern Football Conference club. John Bassett, chairman of the board, said the contract will extend to the end of the 1966 season.

NHL Playoffs Start March 26

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—National Hockey League owners have decided the Stanley Cup playoffs will start March 26.

The owners, holding their mid-winter meeting here, also said Tuesday that dates for the 1963-64 season will be Oct. 8 to March 22.

The league officers lifted restrictions for the balance of this season only on trading of players to other leagues.

They said it would give the clubs a chance for roster changes.

Steps were taken toward arranging an inter-league draft with the American League, but NHL officers said details will be worked out later.

Clarence Campbell, league president, said attendance reports filed by clubs through January show an increase of 135,000 over last year at the same time. He said this amounted to 1,000 - persons - a - game more than last year, when a league attendance record was set.

Frontenacs Lead Score Race

OTTAWA (CP)—Jeannot Gilbert and Don Blackburn of Kingston Frontenacs piled up 71 points between them last week and took over the two top spots in the Eastern Professional Hockey League scoring race.

Gilbert notched four goals and set up two more to run up his season total to 64 points, league statistics showed today. Blackburn collected three goals and three assists for a total of 60 points.

Hottest scorer of the week was Alain Caron of the last-place St. Louis Braves, who racked up 11 goals and three assists in four games.

Caron set a league record by scoring five times in one encounter with Kingston. He jumped from 27th to 10th spot in the scoring race and is tied with Marc Dufour of Sudbury Wolves as top goal-getter with 30.

Dufour, tied with Gilbert for the scoring lead a week ago, was held to one goal last week and fell into third place with 59 points.

City Hockey At Arena Tonight!

Trudeaus and Welbanks, who took whippings from Pepsi's and Joyce-Rollins last week, will vent their vengence on each other in the opening game of tonight's City Hockey League double-header.

Meanwhile, the league-leading Pepsi's can clinch at least a tie for first place by defeating the Combines in the nightcap. This may prove no easy task if the tail-enders play as well as they did last week.

Both games are at Memorial Arena with the first starting at 7:45 and the second around 9:15.

Pepsi's are four points ahead of Trudeaus as the schedule draws near a close. A Pepsi win tonight plus a loss by Trudeaus would give Pepsi's the league crown and the Labatt Trophy.

There is added incentive to grab that top spot as well because the team finishing in first place will be allowed to choose its opponents for the first round of the loop playoffs.

There is some thought of cancelling the final week or two of scheduled play as soon as possible, however, and as nothing official has been announced about this as yet.

There is a good chance that all games will have to be played, especially if Trudeaus can defeat Welbanks tonight and thus keep hope alive of finishing first.

At any rate, there should be plenty of action tonight if last week's Monday - Combines game was any indication. Several fights and stick-swinging duels livened that game and league referees have been ordered to crack down on stick-swingers. Players too have been warned of this act and also have been cautioned about molesting game referees.

The teams should be ready for anything by the time playoffs commence in a couple of weeks.

Reds Clip Aces 4-1, Share Top

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ed Giacomin, it seems, does not like playing goal for a second-rate team in the American Hockey League.

So he did something about it.

Giacomin plays goal for Providence Reds, who were knocked out of first place in the Eastern Division recently, and Tuesday night came up with a sensational performance to help his team earn back a share of the lead.

The Providence goaltender blocked 43 shots as the Reds knocked off Quebec Aces 4-1 at Quebec to force a tie between the Reds and Aces atop the standings.

In other action, Baltimore Clippers clipped Cleveland Barons 3-1.

Dan Poliziani scored twice for Providence and other marks men were George Ranieri and Bob Beckett.

The only Quebec player to solve Giacomin was veteran centre Skippy Burchell, late in the second period.

Cleveland playing coach Freddie Glover gave the Barons a 1-0 lead in the first-period, then Dave Creighton took over. The leading Baltimore scorer notched the tying goal and the winner, then teammate Mel Pearson wrapped it up with a clinching goal.

Probe Head Will Vote For Boxing

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The chairman of a state legislative committee investigating professional boxing indicates he will vote in favor of continuing the sport.

The chairman, Republican Assemblyman Hayward H. Plumadore, told reporters Tuesday he has found much less evil in the sport than he had anticipated and the committee's investigation will be more of a "prejudice" he held last spring.

Plumadore commented as the committee concluded a two-day hearing that is expected to be the final public session before the committee reports its findings to the legislature late this month.

The report will recommend whether boxing should be continued in New York state and, if so, what changes are needed in its administration.

Six other members of the committee also will vote on the committee's recommendations and they have not said how they stand on the question of abolition or continuation.

DiMaggio Cheque Marked NSF

INDIO, Calif. (AP)—A restaurant owner has charged in a civil suit that former baseball star Joe DiMaggio wrote a $7,000 cheque which was returned unpaid by the bank.

Sherman Harris, owner of a steak house in Palm Springs, Calif., said DiMaggio made the cheque out to a friend, H. Bryn of Los Angeles, who then asked Harris to cash it.

The cheque was cashed Jan. 10 and was returned unpaid by the Grace National Bank in New York four or five days later, Harris said..

Harris named Bryn as co-defendant in the suit. He said both men endorsed the cheque.

Harris's suit accused DiMaggio of intentionally misrepresenting the cheque and said he was guilty of malice and "intent to deceive and defraud." In addition to the $7,000, Harris asked $20,000 punitive damages plus court costs and interest.

Another Bid War Looming For CFL

American Leagues 'invasion'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Canadian Football League, still blinking in amazement at prices being paid for top U.S. college players this year, hears it has another bidding war on its hands.

And this one is closer to home.

Canadian teams had little luck this year recruiting top college stars because of the sky's-the-limit attitude of the National and American leagues.

Now the CFL hears stories that the NFL and AFL are making overtures to established Canadian players now under contract to Canadian teams.

Naturally, the NFL and AFL are denying it.

CLAIMS TWO ASKED

John Barrow, towering Hamilton Tiger-Cat who was voted Canada's outstanding lineman last season, said Tuesday that two of his Hamilton teammates have been asked to play out their options next season.

Barrow, in an interview, claims the NFL and AFL are offering bonuses and fat contracts to top CFL stars. When a player plays out his option, he becomes a free agent the following year.

This means the results of the reported trading by the U.S. leagues won't be known until the 1964 season—unless someone spills the beans.

Barrow, who declined to reveal the names of his two teammates, said:

"One player received an offer from Cleveland of the NFL and Boston of the AFL. He was offered $1,000 cash and a big contract to play out his option this year and jump for the 1964 season."

A Boston spokesman, quoting president Bill Sullivan and Coach Mike Holovak of the Patriots, said they wouldn't think of doing such a thing.

In Cleveland, Harold Sauerbrei, general manager of the Browns, said: "I have no comment to make."

The CFL, an official said Tuesday night, will likely discuss the situation at its annual meeting next week at Hamilton.

"When a man is under contract, it is illegal, in my opinion, to induce him to break that contract," said the official.

MAY ACCEPT OFFERS

Should there be under-the-table raiding of the CFL, Barrow wouldn't be surprised if Canadian players accept offers from the NFL and AFL.

The former University of Florida player says players in the CFL are unhappy with the lack of interest shown in them by club owners.

"The players I've talked to aren't so much concerned with salary as they are with certain conditions in Canadian football," Barrow said.

"I'm not trying to create trouble. My interest is constructive. I'm well established in Hamilton and have no thoughts of leaving Canadian football. But I know a lot of players are thinking about it because they feel insecure here."

Lack of a pension plan—the NFL has one and the AFL is developing one—seems to be the big beef. Also, lack of injury protection insurance and a players' association are sore points.

May Get Salary Slash

Junior Loop Meets Here Sunday

Playoff dates will be the main item on the agenda when the OHA Eastern Junior Hockey League holds a group meeting here in Belleville this Sunday afternoon.

The meeting is slated for 2.30 p.m. at the Recreation Centre, on Pinnacle Street.

Group convener Harold Webster, of Napanee, will be in charge of the meeting.

The group's regular schedule draws to a close on Monday night with Belleville playing at Napanee and Peterborough at Kingston.

The three Junior "B" clubs, Kingston, Peterborough and Belleville, will play a round-robin semi-final series (home and away against each of the other two clubs) with the top two clubs then meeting for the group title and the right to advance into the OHA Provincial playdowns. The round-robin is expected to get under way sometime next week.

Napanee, Picton, Gananoque and Cobourg will be in the Junior "C" semi-finals, the tail-end Trenton club being eliminated.

Napanee tops the other "C" clubs at the present time. The team finishing on top will be allowed to choose its opponent for the group semi-finals, with the two remaining clubs also meeting, and the two semi-final winners will then clash for the group title and the right to advance.

Belleville won the group title for the "B" clubs last season while Napanee captured the "C" crown. Both were eliminated later in playdowns.

Pan-Am Team Cut 20 Per Cent

Second Largest For Canada

VANCOUVER (CP)—A contingent of 165 athletes and officials—cut more than 21 per cent below original plans—will represent Canada at the Pan-American Games in Brazil this spring.

Coaches and officials in the individual sports have been given team quotas and have until Friday to decide who to leave behind.

The team will operate on a budget of $130,000 for the more than three weeks it will be out of the country. Even with the reduced team the per-man expenditure comes to less than $800.

Allan McGavin, chairman of the Canadian Pan-American Association, announced the team make-up Tuesday night following a two-hour meeting with committee members representing the 25 sports involved.

Even with its reduced numbers, it will be the second largest squad ever to represent Canada in international competition. The largest was the 206-member team which travelled to Chicago for the 1959 Pan-Am Games.

Original plans had called for 210 persons to represent Canada in Brazil from April 20 to May 8, but the Canadian Olympic Association, which controls grants to amateur associations, told the Pan-Am Committee last week funds were not available for a group of that size.

TRACK AND ROWING

The biggest axe job was done on track and field and rowing. Where rowing was counting on 19 members, it was allowed 11 athletes and an official; track, planning on 25 members, drew 17 athletes and two officials.

The Canadian contingent leaves April 16 from Toronto. McGavin announced the following team makeup, the first figure representing the number of athletes, the second the officials:

Basketball, men 12-2, women 10-2; boxing 4-1; cycling 2-1; fencing 4-1; gymnastics 10-2; shooting 12-1; swimming 16-2; tennis 2-1; volleyball 10-1; water polo 9-1; weightlifting 3-1; wrestling 6-1; yachting 8-1; administration 8.

Braves Nip Weakened Hull Ottawa

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It's nice being sponsored by a National Hockey League team when you're getting player help.

But it has its drawbacks when the parent team starts recalling your stars.

It happened to Hull-Ottawa Canadiens of the Eastern Professional League, farm club of Montreal Canadiens.

Montreal sent Hull - Ottawa Red Berenson early, this season and Berenson went on a scoring spree which earned him a new berth at Montreal.

Eleven games ago, Montreal sent goaltender Cesare Maniago to Hull-Ottawa. Maniago, regular goaltender at Hull last season, was in goal as the EPHL Canadiens went on a nine-game winning streak.

Maniago, though, was recalled to Montreal Friday.

And Tuesday night Hull-Ottawa's winning streak ended abruptly. St. Louis Braves, of all teams, snapped the Hull string with a 6-4 win—their 11th in 46 games this season.

Alain Caron continued his torrid scoring for St. Louis with his 30th goal in 29 games to give the Braves a 1-0 lead.

Other St. Louis marksmen were Murray Hall, Phil Esposito, Bert Fizzell, Jim Sanko and Nick Pelino. The league-leading Hubs were paced by Hamilton and John [illegible] two goals each. Hamilton and John [illegible] were the other marksmen.

Flyers Crush Royals 10-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Niagara Falls Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association provincial Junior A group can boast league leadership in two departments — at least until Thursday night.

A 10-3 victory over the last-place Guelph Royals Tuesday night put the Flyers a comfortable five points on top of the standings, where they will stay with assurance for at least a few days And the Flyers' star left winger, Wayne Maxner, gained a one-point edge in the scoring race by picking up three goals and an assist.

Maxner has 73 points, one more than Pit Martin of Hamilton Red Wings. Hamilton was idle Tuesday night, but meets the second-place Montreal Junior Canadiens Thursday night while Niagara Falls clashes with Peterborough.

In addition to Maxner's three-goal display, Ron Schock scored a pair for Niagara and Gary Harmer, Terry Cr-ig, Bill Glashan, Fern Belanger and Ted Snell got the others. Bill Taylor counted two for Guelph and the other came from Trevor Fahey.

Now Have 5-Point Lead

Larry's Arm Tiger Hope?

NEW YORK (AP)—How Detroit Tigers fare in the American League pennant race this season could hinge on the condition of pitcher Frank Lary's right shoulder.

Lary, a 23-game winner in 1961 when the Tigers finished second, was hampered by the sore arm last year. The injury limited him to 14 starts and his won-lost record was a dismal 2-6 as Detroit dropped to fourth place.

The next few weeks at Detroit's advance spring training camp site in Lakeland, Fla., could determine if Lary's career is in jeopardy.

Lary, who will be 32 in April, is expected to report to Lakeland Monday and attempt to work his arm back into shape.

The Yankee nemesis — he boasts a 28-11 lifetime record against them—will be allowed to get into condition without the formality of signing, a contract, Gil Hodges, whose gimpy left knee also makes his availability with the New York Mets a question mark, agreed to terms Tuesday.

In view of Lary's dismal season in 1962, a steep cut appears likely. Lary signed for a reported $40,000 last year. The most his contract could be sliced under baseball regulations is 25 per cent, a $10,000 slash.

At his Northport, Ala., home, Lary told interviewers, "I'm not going to take that." He added, however, that salary terms had not been discussed.

"The arm doesn't hurt now," Lary said. "But I won't know about my arm until I turn it loose."

Tigers Defeated 5-3

Terriers Edge Maroons

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bob Mader of Galt Terriers may have spent the first half of the season in retirement—but he doesn't look rusty.

Mader came out of retirement only two weeks ago and has scored three goals in the last four games in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series.

His most recent was the winner Tuesday night as Galt dumped the powerful Chatham Maroons 5-3 to creep one point past Kitchener-Waterloo Tigers into fourth place.

The Tigers failed to help themselves in the battle for the last playoff position as they dropped a 3-2 decision to the third-place Woodstock Athletics at Woodstock.

The final Galt marker was scored by Keith Worrall, his second of the night, into an empty net in the final minute of play.

Larry Pfaff and Ron Brian were other Galt scorers. Ted Power, George Aitken and Jim Connelly scored for the Maroons.

Gerry Theberge scored twice for Woodstock. Don Mayes, Andy Gauthier and Butch Graham were other Tiger tamers.

Kitchener-Waterloo marksmen were Bob Forhan, Don Duke and Joe Hogan.

Western Hockey

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

They needed overtime to do it, but San Francisco Seals set a Western Hockey League record in defeating Vancouver Canucks 5-4 Tuesday night.

The win by San Francisco's eighth in a row on the road, compared with the old away-from-home mark of seven set by Calgary Stampeders in 1958-59.

Meanwhile, the Stampeders, who themselves hadn't won any of their last eight games, broke out of their slump with gusto, dumping Los Angeles Blades 9-5 at Calgary.

Gord Vejprava led the Stamps with three goals.

Fred Hucul, Gord Redahl, Milan Marcetta, Norm Johnson, Earl Sutcliffe and Ron Leopold accompleted the Calgary scoring.

Willie O'Ree, Gord Haworth, Leo Lahlee, Bob Solinger and Harold White scored for the Blades.

Hero of the San Francisco win was Leo Haley, who scored at 1:41 of overtime after the Seals had forced the extra action by tying the game at 17:47 of the third period.

Other Seal scorers were Nick Mickoski, Ray Cyr, Tom Thuriby and Orland Kurtenbach. Pappin scored twice for Vancouver, with Jim Baird and Buddy Boone getting one apiece.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids . . . and repair damaged tissue.

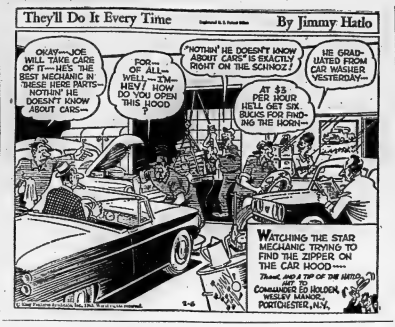
A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.



Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that the improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded.

Says He Is Interested

Alex Webster For Alouettes?

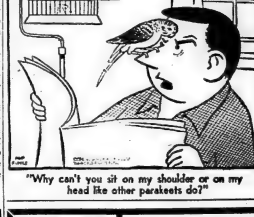
MONTREAL (CP)—Fullback Alex Webster of New York Giants says he's ready to retire as a player in the National Football League if he could get the right front office job in Canada or the United States.



"I am interested in football coaching as a career," Webster said in an interview while here for a series of speaking engagements. "I have come to the stage where I've got to look to the future I'd like to quit as a player while I'm ahead."

Webster, 31, spent two seasons with Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Conference before joining New York. Last year was his eighth in the NFL.

He indicated he is interested in the posts left vacant by Perry Moss, first-last week as head coach and general manager of the Als. But he said the club has not approached him, He said also that he would take only one or the other.

'Ricky' Lockyer Killed by Car Near His Home

PICTON — Richard Byron (Ricky) Lockyer, eight - year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Lockyer was instantly killed shortly after four o'clock on Monday afternoon, shortly after returning home from school at Waring Corners. His brother Paul Christopher Lockyer, who was with him at the time escaped serious injury, when both were hit by a car driven by George L. Hudgin, 23, of 12 Hill Street, Picton. The car, after going out of control also hit a car driven by Harry Douglas Fournia of 226 Pine Street Belleville. Fournia sustained a chipped elbow and bruised knee. Damage to the two vehicles was estimated at $2,400.

The Provincial police investigated and stated that Hudgin was driving east toward Picton on Highway 14 and the car went out of control crossed to the north lane and hit a car proceeding west and driven by Fournia. The two Lockyer boys had recently been picked up by their father and driven to the greenhouse on the Picton Bloomfield road, which was a distance of about 100 yards from their home. They were walking toward home, when the accident occurred. Dr. Clifford Richmond was called as coroner and ordered an inquest into the fatality.

The other brother was admitted to hospital but after treatment for lacerations was allowed to return home. The Hudgin vehicle was a complete wreck and it was stated it broke in two when it struck the other car.

$5,100 Spent To Move Snow In January

PICTON — Chairman of Picton's street committee, Randolph Clapp, told town council Monday that $5,100 was spent on snow removal during the month of January. The major part of this sum (sixty per cent) is for bulldozing, the chairman said. Snow removed both privately and by the town is being trucked to the dump and a bulldozer is kept busy pushing the snow back to make room for more, he stated Mr. Clapp said there are mounting piles of snow piled on the dump site at the Town Marsh.

Both Councillor Calnan and Mayor McFarland felt a survey should be made of other areas in which to dump snow that would be easier as much bulldozing, for example, the harbor or behind the United church.

Chairman Clapp said the town's former dump area in the bay is blocked by construction of a boathouse.

Anglican Church Is Celebrating Jubilee Year

PICTON — Annual Vestry meeting of St. Mary Magdalene Church held recently in the Parish Hall endorsed a resolution calling upon the Vestry Council to establish a memorial in this Jubilee year. It was 50 years ago in 1913 that the present beautiful church was completed, and the Anglican churchmen of this Parish began to plan the celebration to mark all of the services.

It is likely that the memorial in the present edifice will take the form of new doors for the front entrance to the church to replace the present somewhat battered doors and that a plaque on the doors will memorialize the church wardens who have served during the past fifty years. That was the proposal of Canon Robert de B. Wright to the largely attended vestry meeting last Wednesday evening. The motion referring the matter to the Vestry Council. matter to the Vestry Council for decision will be considered in the light of a suggestion from the floor that other church officials such as Sunday School superintendents also gave much time to the weekly services of instruction and worship.

The vestry meeting elected T. Monte Shannon to succeed W. C. Hobson as Rector's warden, and Douglas Boland to succeed Robert B. Biddle as People's Warden. George Wakelin and Ray Frenchette were elected as the new junior wardens, who will serve two years, advancing to senior wardens a year hence.

New lay delegates to Synod were elected as follows: to fill vacancies created by the retirement of Ernest Franklin and Michael Meares, namely Mrs. Hobson and Robert Biddle. Arthur S. Matthewman and Capt. Harry Clarke named as alternate delegates to Synod. The other lay delegates continuing are Harold McGoughlin, Robert Waimsley, J. V. Atherton and Herb Greenwood.

Annual rectors report by Canon R. de B. Wright revealed a year of progress and growth.

He reported 25 confirmations, 10 weddings and 20 burial services, over 1,000 communicants and assistance in other parishes during the illness of the Rector, or temporary vacancies in the pulpits. There were 225 services in St. Mary Magdalene Church in 1962.

W. C. Hobson and Robert Biddle reported as wardens to the parishioners.

RAISE $30,289

Annual report on church finances was presented by Treasurer Fred Jennings, as audited by Basil Foreman and Ray A. Lennox.

This showed receipts from all sources of $30,289, plus the January 1, 1962, bank balance of $2,632—a total of $32,942. Givings from all sources totalled about $1,300 more than in 1961. Envelope offerings and subscriptions at $17,562, were about $1,000 higher; plate collections at $1,100 were $150 more; special offerings increased by $170. The Primate's World Relief Fund response was specially itemized at $281.

Disbursements showed the Synod assessment of $4,107 completely covered, as well as the Centennial fund allotment of $1,000. Many expense items varied little from 1961. Cost of fuel showed the greatest increase, at $1,885, greater by $785, than 1961. The sum of $3,698 was transferred to capital account and employed in the remodelling of the parish hall, and installation of the heating system.

Special receipts in capital account included the Harvey R. Stark bequest of $10,000, the Ladies' Guild contribution of $948. Remodelling the parish hall was $5,000 in the amount of $12,168. The new heating system had a cost of $1,950. Church building, contents and organ now are insured for $128,816. The parish hall, its contents, the rectory and old church building are covered for $68,394, a total insurance coverage of $197,210.

REPORTS GIVEN

Reports of the rector, the church wardens, treasurer and auditors, and separate reports for each activity were contained in a mimeographed brochure, copies of which were available to all church members at the vestry. These reports covered Christian Education by Mrs. Ralph Greenwood, C. J. Hillard, audited by Ray Leanox, the Ladies' Guild, Altar Guild, Women's Auxiliary, Sports, the Sewers' and Acolytes Guild, the Anglican Young People's Association, The Altar Guild, the Brotherhood of Anglican Churchmen, the Sub and Scout Auxiliaries, the Choir Association and the old Church of St. Mary Magdalene, the Girl Guides.

June Allyson Goes Back To Work in Hubby's Series

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—I guess it was my crazy sense of humor that got me by," says June Allyson. "Otherwise I might not have made it."

The actress was back at work for the first time since her husband, Dick Powell, died of cancer Jan 2. Significantly, she was working in a drama for the Dick Powell Theatre television series.

She was using the dressing room at Four Star Productions marked Dick Powell, and his image was in evidence in the sailing prints and trout flies framed on the wall. June's costume was padded with references to Richard, as she always called him.

"Look at this," she said, taking a card from one of the bouquets in the flower-crowned room. It was a note welcoming her back to work and it was signed, The Transportation Department.

SHOW MUST GO ON

"When I saw it, I almost broke into tears," she said. "Then I remembered that if I did I would ruin my eye makeup. And I knew Richard would say, 'we never hold up production.'"

She had returned at the behest of Tom McDermott, who succeeded Powell as president of the film-making giant.

"I had had lots of nice offers to get back to work," she said. "But I just couldn't face them. For one thing, I was tired from moving so much.

"Then one day I had finally finished moving into our new house. Tom called and asked me what I was doing. I said I was just unloading the last box. He said, 'Stop; report to work this afternoon.'

"So I did. I guess it was a good thing he did it that way. If I had had a week to think about it I probably wouldn't have gone through with it."

THEATRE FEATURE TIMES

AT THE BELLE — Rosalind Russell, Jack Hawkins, Maximilian Schell, Richard Beymer in "Five Finger Exercise", 1.30-3.30-5.30-7.30-9.30. Sidney Poitier, Claudia McNeil, Ruby Dee in "A Raisin in the Sun", 3.30-5.15.

AT THE PARK — "Young Go Wild", Hetta Kenyon, Peter Wyngarde, Christian Wolff, 1.00-4.15-7.30. "The Errand Boy", Steve Ihnat, Jerry Angell, Edmund Purdom, A.M.

THERE ARE MANY KINDS OF LOVE ...BUT IS THERE ANY WITHOUT GUILT?

Superb together! Warm, wonderful "Rio"... and no one but Columbia's Richard Mulligan could match Richard Beymer, "West Side Story" sensation!

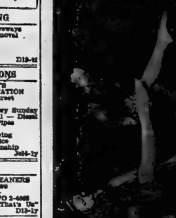
Rabbi Declares Mercy Killings Occur Daily

HAMILTON (CP) — Rabbi Bernard Baskin says that everything in Hamilton carries out indirect mercy killings every day, but most religious leaders would not object to the kind of euthanasia practised.

The Hamilton rabbi, one of four panelists discussing mercy killing at a ourig Progressive Conservative meeting Sunday, contended that Canada's laws must be brought into harmony with practices already prevalent in the country.

The rabbi said "we shouldn't kid ourselves" about the existence of euthanasia in Hamilton hospitals. Mercy killing could be practised by cutting off the current to an electrical machine needed for a patient's life or by moving the wall of a lifesustaining room.

Repeated doses of pain-killing drugs for incurably ill patients can turn the patients into addicts requiring increasing quantities of the drug, he said, until the pain-killer itself claims the patient's life.



Legislation must be brought down to protect the doctors engaged in such practices, Rabbi Baskin said.

oronto lawyer G. Arthur Martin opposed any legislation which would make mercy killing legal, but added that a doctor who uses increased drug doses to relieve pain and thereby speeds the patient's death should not be liable to prosecution.

Dr. G. F. Grant, professor of religion at McMaster University, called for stringent laws governing euthanasia.

A coin tossed into the Pacific above the deepest part, the Philippine Trench, would fall for several hours before reaching the bottom.

UNDERWATER CHORUS LINE — These five girls seem to be part of a water chorus kicking in unison but they are really practicing for the Ontario Synchronized Swim Meet in Toronto Saturday. CAMPBELLFORD

'Restaurant Business' Topic At Rotary

CAMPBELLFORD — Kees Vandegraaff, proprietor of the Hitchen Post, gave his chiefstyle talk at the Monday meeting of the Campbellford Rotary Club.

He said that the restaurant business is the third largest in North America, calling attention to the fact that there are more food outlets of this sort in Campbellford than any other type of commercial endeavor.

As an interesting sidelight he said that two cuts of beef had been knighted by Charles I of England—the Baron of Beef, an 80 pound roast, and the Sirloin, a term still applied to a special cut.

Though the restaurant business is marked by many outlets, the business has the highest record of failure. He said that the reason for this, in this country, is the fact that there is not unusually sold in restaurants. He said that while excessive drinking is indeed a problem, one does help digest food, and in France, is regarded as an aid to digestion. Liquor, he claimed, has been responsible for the improvement of restaurant facilities.

TWEED

H.S. Holds 'Open House,' 'Science Fair'

TWEED — Parents and other interested people gathered at Tweed High school on February 1st for the annual "Open House" and "Science Fair."

The program opened with introductory remarks by W. R. Hamilton, principal, who introduced the staff which consists of 15 teachers.

Following Mr. Hamilton's remarks the school choir, under choir director Mr. Wm. Boswald, accompanied by Miss Lynda Gunning, rendered four numbers, "Come On Fair Fair". "This Land is Your Land," "Get Me to the Church on Time" and "Aupres de Ma Blonde."

Miss Hammett, one of the teaching staff, showed slides on her trip to Japan which she enjoyed this past summer. Following this there was tape recording "Sounds of Tokyo."

Income Tax Explained

A column designed and written for the working persons, who are not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant or visit an Income Tax Office.

By C. A. MILLER
Former Supervising Assessor, Income Tax Dept.

Each year numerous inquiries are received from married men whose wives have taken employment during the year and have earned over $1250. Many of these taxpayers believe that because they are taxed as a single person, they can claim the equivalent to married exemption on another dependent, as they are not supporting their wives, although they live together.

It is laid down in Section 26 (2) of the Income Tax Act that a man who has resided with his wife during the year is deemed to have supported her. This section will prevent such a husband from claiming an equivalent to married exemption on any other dependent.

If the wife's income during the year is less than the $1250, the husband will have a partial allowance for her. The amount he may claim is the difference between her income and $1250. The fact that the husband has shown his wife's income on his return for exemption purposes does not excuse the wife from filing a return in her own name. She is still liable for taxes, if her income exceeds her exemption and allowances.

The wife's normal exemption is $1000 plus $500 allowance if no receipts for charity or medical expenses are claimed, but a wife can on her return instruct the Income Department to credit her husband's balance payable by transferring the amount of her exemption to him.

Personal replies will be made to any enquiry if a stamped (5 cent) self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

Question No. 1 — I earned $1151 this year. My husband shows this on his return and claims the exemption for me. Do I have to file a return?

Answer: Yes. You must file a return, because you have not the standard deduction plus your $1000 exemption you would have to pay tax on the excess of $51, which is $8.

Question No. 2 — I have a refund but my husband owes tax. Can I transfer my refund to him?

Answer: Yes. Indicate this on your return and sign your name.

200 Varieties of Cheese Available to Canadians

By PATRICIA RUSAK

TORONTO (CP) — To many native Canadians, "cheese" simply means "cheddar." And while good Canadian cheddar ranks with the world's finest cheeses there are hundreds of other varieties that can be fun to experiment with.

About 200 varieties are commercially available—one to suit every mood, taste and occasion —says Gerald Seldon of Toronto's Old World Cheese Shop.

"Acquiring a taste for different types of cheese would depend largely on types of food which you have been accustomed."

If you're used to bland foods, for example, you should start experimenting with milder-flavored cheese. But if you are the type who enjoys spicy foods your preferences would probably run to tangy cheeses.

Among available mild cheeses are German muenster, French port du salut, Dutch edam and gouda and semi-soft American brick. Oka, made by the Trappist monks of Quebec, has a soft mild flavor. Swiss cheddar, ricotta and muenster are also bland flavors and blend smoothly with souffles, entrees and desserts.

THIRST-PROVOKING

Danish brie has a rich but not too strong flavor. French camembert is also full-flavored. Both are excellent as dessert cheeses served with fruit and crackers.

Italian cheeses such as parmesan, romano and provolone have hard, sharp flavors and are often used for grating on spaghetti, salads and soups.

Blue - veined cheeses — English stilton, Danish blue and French Roquefort have a sharp, thirst-provoking flavors.

Seldon says that when choosing cheese for an occasion, consider the other food and drink to be served.

"At a cocktail party the cheese must have as strong a flavor as the entrees so the taste of one will not kill the taste of the other. With a light, dry sherry, mild creamy cheeses would be fine."

The approach to preparing a cheese tray should be the same as in planning a well-balanced meal—try to give a variety of textures, flavors and colors.

MUST BREATHE

Cheese should be kept in a cool place and wrapped but not air-tight, Mr. Seldon says. "It must be allowed to breathe."

"Under normal storage circumstances, such as in a refrigerator, moulding on cheese is natural. But this doesn't mean the cheese is rotten."

The cheese may be eaten as is, he says, or the mould may be cut away.

Keeping quality of cheese varies greatly. Some hard varieties such as parmesan and cheddar are long-lasting while softer cheeses such as camembert are quite perishable.

You can never expect the flavor, texture and color of any one kind of cheese to be exactly the same each time, says Mr. Seldon, explaining that only processed cheeses such as spreads are always the same.

Bilingual Manitoba Native Named Centenary Council's First Full-Time Director

By KEN SMITH

MONTREAL (CP) — Is Canada's 100th birthday going to be only a giant party with 18,000,000 invited guests or is it going to have deeper significance?

One of the men now trying to bring some order out of the chaos surrounding the planning for Canada's centenary in 1967 is Nobert Prefontaine, a 35-year-old man of both dreams and action who has some definite views on the subject.

What is really needed between now and 1967, he says, is for Canadians to sit down and "knock their heads together and plan so the next 100 years will be better than the last."

"Unless that is done, and done pretty soon and in a constructive fashion, I'm afraid we might have some sort of centenary, but it would be doubtful if we can have a meaningful one."

Mr. Prefontaine, a bilingual native of St. Pierre Jolys, Man., 30 miles south of Winnipeg, was the first full-time director of the Canadian Centenary Council appointed.

CHANCE FOR UNITY — Nobert Prefontaine, director of the Canadian Centenary Council, says sound planning for celebration of Canada's 100th birthday in 1967 would help bridge the widening gap between the country's French and English-speaking groups. (CP Photo).

NEED FOR UNITY

Conscious of, and worried by, doubts now being expressed, especially by some elements in Quebec, about Canada's constitutional future, he sees the birthday celebrations as offering a solid chance to build for the years to come as well as to cheer the past.

But he also sees a danger that the present gap between English and French Canada will be widened if the two main ethnic groups — as well as the other racial and cultural groups in the country — do not get together.

The key, he says, is "knowledge and a tremendous effort at understanding."

He looks on his job as being basically to find ways of promoting this knowledge and understanding.

"Confederation after all was a marriage between the provinces and like any other marriage, we should look at it and see what it meant and what it will mean."

The Centenary Council is an organization of more than 230 municipal, corporate and private organizations trying to plan various ways of marking the anniversary.

SLOW TO START

So far, it has been difficult to get down to brass-tack planning, since the government organization needed to complement the private one still exists only on paper.

Although some corporations already are going ahead with their own plans, other groups have to wait to see how the up-to-be-formed government body will allocate the $100,000,000 earmarked by Parliament for the centenary.

The lag in getting to work on the detailed planning already means that some projects won't be completed by 1967, but at best will be only under construction.

Mr. Prefontaine says the idea of the centenary has generated tremendous enthusiasm across Canada.

"Canadians now are starting to get over the feeling of 'hooray, we've got a centenary,' and are starting to think about what can or should be done."

Suggestions that have been sent to the council range all the way from building a Canada-wide chain of community centres to developing a special centenary rose.

PRESERVE OLD SITES

All educational and historical projects — setting up scholarships, restoring and preserving old sites—have been given top priority.

Regional trends in thinking already emerging bring Mr. Prefontaine right back to what he sees as the most important role of the celebrations.

English - speaking Canada is looking on the centenary as a chance to make its communities better places to live in by building libraries, community centres, hospitals, roads and even sewers.

In French Canada, however, the anniversary is seen as an opportunity to pull into the open the nagging question: "Is Confederation working the way it was planned?"

From the centenary, Mr. Prefontaine says, can come an awareness for all Canadians that there is more to the country than a person's own town or province.

If Canadians can learn how others are thinking and what they are feeling, the emotion that charges the question of regional differences will disappear, he says.

WANTS HOSTEL CHAIN

He feels personally any plan that will help Canadians learn about the rest of the country and its people is of vital importance to centenary planning.

This would include national sporting and cultural events — "sport and art penetrate racial and cultural events easiest, because they speak for themselves."

He would like to see a chain of youth hostels built cross the land—one suggestion now under consideration — so teen-agers could travel for a minimum of cost and learn first-hand about Canada.

The hostels would be set up on Indian reservations, in Doukhobor country, amid Ukrainian settlement on the Prairies and anywhere the youths could live among and learn about Canada's various groups.

Before taking over as director of the Centenary Council, Mr. Prefontaine had been managing director of the Association of Quebec Road Contractors, assistant secretary-general of the Catholic Immigrant Services, information officer for a St. Boniface, Man., radio station, public relations officer with the Quebec Professional Engineers Corporation and had worked with the CNR.

25th Canadian Parliament Dies By Stroke Of Pen

New Session of House Will Be Held May 16

OTTAWA (CP)—The 25th Canadian Parliament died Wednesday at the stroke of a pen when Governor-General Vanier signed the proclamation of dissolution. It ordered a general election for Monday, April 8.

But moments later Gen. Vanier injected the first faint stirrings of life into the 26th Parliament—still without form, features or parentage.

He did this by signing two more proclamations. One sets May 16 for the return of writs by constituency returning officers attesting to the election of new MPs. These comprise the physical birth of the new Parliament.

The other calls on the 26th Parliament to meet May 16. This date is merely a formality because it will be up to the newly-elected prime minister to decide when Parliament actually is to meet.

ENSURE CHAOS

The three proclamations, dictated by tradition and legal necessity, ensure that the chain of government by elected representatives of the people will continue unbroken. They constitute law to prevent any other form of government from moving into the vacuum between the two Parliaments.

Dissolution does not affect the Senate, where members serve for life. But the upper chamber cannot meet unless Parliament is in session.

Issuance of the proclamations is the sole prerogative of the Queen's representative in Canada, the Governor-General. But he acts only on the advice of the prime minister.

It hasn't always been that way. Constitutional experts still hold hot arguments about the famous King-Byng controversy of 1926.

In June of 1926 Mackenzie King, prime minister of a minority Liberal government, lost three procedural votes in the House of Commons. Beset by a Customs scandal, he seemed certain to lose the next confidence voting test.

BYNG REFUSES

Mr. King went to Governor-General Byng and asked him for dissolution and a general election. The Governor-General refused and called in Arthur Meighen whose conservative party actually had the largest group of MPs in the House. The Meighen government lasted three days before it was defeated on a confidence vote, the first government in Canadian Confederation to be toppled in the Commons.

Lord Byng granted Mr. Meighen's request for dissolution and a general election followed.

Thaw Is Spreading Across Europe Bringing Acute Threat of Floods

LONDON (AP) — A thaw started spreading across Europe today, bringing a threat of floods in the wake of the month-long freeze-up.

Many parts of the continent were still in the icy grip of winter. But from Britain to France and Italy came reports that the thaw had begun.

Temperatures in southwest England, after staying below freezing point for weeks, suddenly shot up to 50 degrees.

Snowdrifts melted. Water poured into houses and roads were turned into rivers, cutting off towns and villages.

Local authorities in Devonshire were warned to prepare for chaos—possibly greater than anything caused by the snow in recent weeks. Officials of the Devon River board told them:

"There is an equivalent of four inches of rain to be set up in the snowdrifts on the moors. If that melts suddenly, anything can happen."

Meanwhile, blizzards continued to snarl up road traffic in Scotland.

Road conditions in Scotland were described by the Automobile Association as "among the worst in living memory."

In northern and central England, roads still lay buried under deep snow. But weather experts forecast that the thaw would spread rapidly across the country Friday.

Women Win Right to Show Their Legs

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — New Hampshire state Representative Peter Charland, 75, thinks it's distasteful for women to show their upper legs.

Barry Mines, 74, says if women want to they should have a right to.

Charland filed a bill with the state legislature Wednesday to make it illegal for women in New Hampshire to wear shorts or dresses that expose more of their legs than an inch above the knee.

Mines, a lobbyist for the New Hampshire Taxpayers Association, went before the all-male judiciary committee of the legislature and said poetically:

"Leave us remember that the older we get.

"We may slow down but we don't forget.

"So fellers take action before it's too late.

"Make this bill inexpedient to legislate!"

The committee ruled against restricting women's hemlines.

Franco-German Pact Is Called 'Treaty of War'

LONDON (Reuters)—The Soviet Union has told France and Germany the recent Franco-German treaty "is a treaty of war" and that the Communist countries would therefore "take further measures to strengthen their over-all defensive potential," the Soviet news agency Tass said today.

Soviet notes sent to Paris and Bonn described the treaty as "a sort of ram, readied for a blow at the edifice of European peace, which lacks a solid foundation as it is."

The notes said since the French and German leaders "want Europe to live like two military camps, bristling with combat missiles against each other," the Soviet Union and its allies must "draw the appropriate conclusions" and improve their defences.

17 ARE KILLED, BUS PLUNGES OVER BANK

Tragedy Mars Visit of Queen

CP from AP-Reuters

AUCKLAND, N.Z. — Tragedy marred the visit of Queen Elizabeth to New Zealand today, just as on her first visit in 1953:

A bus load with Maoris, returning from the welcome for the Queen Wednesday night, plunged over a 150-foot band and 17 of the aborigines were killed. Seven were 11 injured, some badly.

Dec. 24, 1953, while the then Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip were in Auckland, a train en route to Auckland plunged into a river and killed 200 persons. Many of those aboard were on their way to see the royal couple.

The victims of today's tragedy had been part of a crowd of 20,000 who cheered Wednesday night in Waikato when the monarch told them in the Maori tongue:

"Kia ora nui kia ora koutou"—"Lots of love and best wishes to you all."

FIND BODIES

Douglas Snelling, 19, who lives near the crash scene, found the Maoris lying in a heap four and five deep.

"It was a horrible sight," he said. "You could have heard the moaning and screaming a mile away."

Police believed the brakes of the bus failed. All aboard were killed or injured.

Police and other busloads of homeward-bound Maoris joined in the rescue work.

The Queen sent a message of condolence to Prime Minister Keith Holyoake on the accident. The Queen said:

"I am so much distressed to learn of the dreadful accident after last night's ceremony. My husband and I would be grateful if you would convey our sympathy to the injured and to the next of kin of those who lost their lives."

Claims Car Was Going Fairly Fast

VALLEYFIELD, Que. (CP)—Eye-witnesses from two other motorists gave testimony at hearing a two-car collision last Sept. 9 that took the lives of two Ontario sisters on a highway west of Montreal.

They were testifying at the jury trial of Hermon Grenier, 24, of Dorion, Que., charged with criminal negligence in the deaths of Judith and Margot Toller, 20 and 17 respectively.

Truck driver Lionel Levesque, 25, of Dorion, said he was hauling 4,500 pounds of sand in his 10-wheeled vehicle when he heard a thud in the rear. Then he saw a car pull out from behind him nearly grazing his cab and decided to go into Montreal."

He said it appeared that the Grenier car was going fairly fast.

The hearing continues.

GETS THREE YEARS

TORONTO (CP) — Michael Tranzel, 19, Tuesday was sentenced to a three-year penitentiary term for beating Constable Jack Johnstone over the head with his helmet and robbing him of his revolver. The constable said he was beaten after he chased the youth down a dead-end street in an attempt to question him about a break-in.

Shipowners Tell Inquiry Of Dog-Eat-Dog Struggle

OTTAWA (CP)—Two of Canada's biggest shipowners Wednesday portrayed the Great Lakes marine industry as a dog-eat-dog struggle—with ordinary sailors played as pawns in the battle of big union versus big management.

The shipping officials—John Misener of Scott Misener Steamships and John Paterson of N. M Paterson and Sons Limited — both admitted that their old-time relationship of company and employees has vanished under the rule of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada.

They testified before Mr. Justice T. G. Norris' one-man investigation of labor strife in shipping disruptions on the Great Lakes.

"The employees are no longer employees of ours," said Captain Misener, 42, whose family firm in Port Colborne, Ont., operates 11 ships with a staff of some 334 employees.

He admitted that shipping

CANADA TO SEE 4TH ELECTION IN SIX YEARS

April 8th Is Set As Voting Day

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's fourth general election in just a little under six years will take place Monday, April 8.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced the date Wednesday, shortly after obtaining Governor-General Vanier's consent for dissolution of the 25th Parliament, where Mr. Diefenbaker's minority Conservative government was overthrown in two non-confidence votes Tuesday night.

Thus the country faces a winter campaign like the one in March, 1958, which swept the Conservatives back into office with a top-heavy majority. In June of the previous year they had won power from the Liberals but failed to obtain an absolute majority.

Mr. Diefenbaker heads into the campaign at the head of a party whose parliamentary leadership is at least partly has closed ranks solidly behind him.

Emerging from a two-hour caucus of Conservative MPs just before driving to Government House to see the Governor-General, he said he had received "the most overwhelming support that I have ever received in all my years of politics."

EACH SUPPORT HIM

One after another, cabinet ministers dismissed as without foundation reports that a movement was afoot to have the prime minister replaced as party leader. Mr. Diefenbaker was said to be ready for and received affirmations of support from each of the ministers individually.

Liberal Leader Pearson expressed hope that the election result will be "clear cut" and that his party will win the people's support.

"We are putting forward policies which we believe will merit that support," said Mr. Pearson. "... (Canada's) problems are deep and complicated but they can be solved. This

Retail Sales Tax Eased, Starting Point 21 Cents

Tax Concessions Aimed To Aid Manufacturers

TORONTO (CP) — Sharp increases in education and highway spending and business tax concessions to stimulate manufacture were announced in Provincial Treasurer Allan's 1963-64 budget delivered in the Ontario legislature today.

The government's second billion-dollar budget announced no major tax changes. The government forecast a nominal $378,000 surplus on a record program of spending and revenues rising with growth of the economy.

A nuisance feature of the retail tax was eased. It will not be collected on purchases under 21 cents, effective immediately. The starting point has been 17 cents.

Changes in the Succession Duty Act largely will benefit widows and children inheriting estates.

For manufacturing firms, there will be tax credits pegged to increases in the size of their work forces and their production facilities.

Mr. Allan said at a press conference, before delivering his fifth budget address, that details have not been worked out but will be announced shortly.

SPENDING HIGH

For its spending program, the government plans gross expenditures of $1,074,715,000 on ordinary account in the fiscal year starting April 1, compared with an estimated $1,029,870,000 in the current year.

Ordinary revenues for the 1963-64 year were forecast at $1,075,093,000 compared with $1,029,990,000 in the current year.

Capital spending was expected to hit another $290,817,000 in the fiscal year ending March 31 and rise to $356,334,000 in the year ahead.

Education costs, already the largest item of government spending, will rise again during the coming year with increased grants to all levels of education.

Grants to elementary and secondary school boards will total $233,900,000, an increase of $31,900,000 over the current year. In addition, some of these will be made available to school boards earlier than previously to ease local financing problems.

Included in this increase will be a jump to $30,300,000 from $16,700,000 in residential and farm school tax assistance grants. The $15-a-pupil rate for elementary schools will rise to $20, and the $5 rate for secondary schools will go to $30 for academic and $40 for vocational schools.

UNIVERSITY GRANTS UP

To keep pace with the "astonishing" increase in university enrolment, there will be a 1963-64 increase to $69,900,000 in maintenance, capital and special grants to universities, about 50 per cent more than the

Canadian Veterans Body Benefits From BBC Attack on Beaverbrook

LONDON (Reuters) — The BBC apologized today in court to Canadian-born Lord Beaverbrook for "a most unfortunate and completely unwarranted attack" in a BBC TV program.

Lord Boothby, Conservative peer and radio and television personality, also apologized.

The BBC and Boothby were also said by their counsel to have agreed to indemnify Beaverbrook for his costs and to pay a substantial sum by way of damages to the Canadian Veterans Association in Britain.

Counsel for Beaverbrook said he was a Canadian by birth and founder of the newspaper group which owned The Daily Express, Sunday Express and London Evening Standard.

Boothby was a member of a panel on a radio program called Any Questions which discussed these newspapers.

On this, counsel said, Boothby had made a serious personal attack on Beaverbrook and other Canadian personalities and had said it was desirable to pass an immigration bill to keep out the Canadians.

He said Beaverbrook and these other Canadians had done nothing but harm to Britain, counsel said.

Beaverbrook welcomed the right of any person to express fair and honest criticism of his conduct, both as a newspaper proprietor and in public life, but he could not allow a disgraceful attack like this to go unchallenged.

Counsel, for the BBC said it had dissociated itself from Boothby's remarks and had broadcast an apology to Beaverbrook which was also published in the Radio Times, the BBC's weekly newspaper.

Boothby's counsel said he wished to express his recognition of the great services Lord Beaverbrook had rendered to Britain.

Man Disturbed But the Band Played on

HARPLEPOOL, England (AP) — Hodgson Boagey, 39, came off second best in his battle with a Salvation Army band that disturbed his Sunday afternoon.

Boagey was sitting in his apartment watching television. The band formed up outside his window and played the hymn Fight the Good fight.

Boagey went outside and shouted to the band to be quiet. That had no effect, so he got a bucket of water and threw it over the band.

The band played on.

Boagey then threw the empty bucket.

The band played on.

Boagey threw a dish of hot water.

The band played on.

Boagey positioned himself at an upstairs window and buried lumps of coal at the band. One lump hit a bandman on the head. Another made a dent in a trombone.

The band played on—except for one instrumentalist who fetched a policeman.

In magistrates' court Wednesday, Boagey was fined £2 for throwing missiles in the street, and another £2 for using obscene language.

The prosecution said there is a law against playing noisy instruments in the street, but it doesnt apply to religious services.

CUBA SHIPPING ARMS?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Evening Star, quoting unofficial government sources, said Wednesday Cuba's Premier Fidel Castro has begun shipping Soviet arms to British Guiana. The state department said that after checking the report it could give no confirmation.

Statistics Show It Was Real Cold in Early Days

If you think the weather has been a bit cool these past few weeks it is interesting to observe the remarks made in an 1872 edition of The Intelligencer of Belleville under the heading "Cold Weather — How Fast." We are indebted to Mr. Allan Dempsey of Prince Edward County for bringing this clipping to our attention.

"Speaking about cold weather," begins the article, reminds us of the following incidents which we jotted down in our diary at the various times mentioned:

The statistics of the pool old writers are curious: In 401 the Black Sea was entirely frozen over. In 760, not only the Black Sea, but the Straits of Dardenelles was frozen over the same as some places rose fifty feet high. In 822, the great rivers of Europe - the Danube, Elbe, &c., were so hard frozen as to bear heavy wagons for a month. In 991 everything was frozen: the crops totally failed, and famine and pestilence closed the year. In 1067 many of the travellers in Germany were frozen to death on the road. In 1133 the Tiber was frozen from Cremona to the sea; the wine casks were burst, and even the trees split by the action of the frost, with immense noise. In 1236, the Danube was frozen to the bottom, and remained long in that state. In 1316 the crops wholly failed in Germany, wheat, which some years before sold in England at six shillings the quarter, rose to two pounds.

In 1330 the crops failed in Scotland, and such a famine ensued in the country that the people were reduced to feed on grass, and many perished miserably in the fields. The successive winters of 1432-3-4 were uncommonly severe. It snowed for forty days without interruption. In 1468 the wine distributed to the soldiers in Burgundy was cut with hatchets.

In 1664, the winter was excessively cold. Most of the hollies were killed. Carriages drove along the Thames, the ice of which was 11 inches thick. In 1709, occurred the cold winter. The frost penetrated three yards into the ground. In 1715, booths, shops and fairs held on the Thames. In 1744 and 1745, the strongest ale in England, exposed to the air, was covered, in less than fifteen minutes, with ice an inch and a half thick. In 1809, and again in 1812 the winters were remarkably cold. In 1814 there was a fair on the Thames."

One may think it is cold but objectively it is best, or worst, is yet to be seen in this century.

Charge Reds Plotted Revolt

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Officials of the young Ivory Coast Republic say they stifled a Communist-inspired plot last month to overthrow the pro-Western government of President Felix Houphouet-Boigny.

Scores were arrested, including three cabinet ministers and two French advisers leading to Abidjan. Officials said the plot had ties with the French Communist party and agents from Soviet-bloc ships which put into Abidjan ports. They denied the neigh boring land-locked Mali.

Should Treat Mental Patients In Home Town

Mental patients should be treated in their own home town, under the supervision of their own doctors the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association was told last night. Dr. J. D. Griffin, General Director of the Association outlined the proposal at a meeting committee of eight psychiatrists to the inaugural meeting of the Belleville Mental Health Education Hall. The report, to be published soon under the title "More for the Mind" is the result of Canada's mental health program.

The report makes about 160 recommendations, along six main themes, for the modernization and improvement of psychiatric service in Canada.

Generally, the report takes issue with the present system of a few large mental hospitals, run by provincial governments and situated at considerable distances from the patients' homes. Dr. Griffin said that these institutions, and the impersonal care implicit in their size, tend to divorce the patient from his home and leave him rootless after release.

Proper care, as recommended by the report would be provided for by a small "psychia ric wing in a local hospital. The patient would be recommended for psyciatric care by his family doctor, who would maintain contact with the patient and responsibility for his care until he was cured. The psychiatric wing in a local hospital would also tend to keep psychiatrists and medical doctors in closer professional contact, improving the service offered to the group.

MORE ON LOCAL LEVEL

The report also suggests that more outpatient care for mental cases should be provided on the local level, Dr. Griffin said. He explained the "day care" system under which patients spend the day at the hospital and the night at home, and the "night care" program, under which a patient can carry on with his normal job during the day, but spends nights at the hospital.

"Day care"and "night care" are generally considered Canadian innovations, Dr. Griffin said. He added though, that he thought the system was in use earlier in England and in Russia. "But don't tell our friends south of the border about that," he added.

Claim Flying Salmon Anglers Exceed Limit

MONTREAL (CP) — The Atlantic Salmon Association has objected to the practice of fish-ing parties from the United States flying chartered planes to Canadian rivers where they catch more than the legal limit of fish before returning home.

"It's something this association should take up privately with authorities in Ottawa and Washington — and press the point," Hugh Hall, president and chairman of the group's board of directors, said Wednesday night.

More than 100 members of the association, representing about 2,000 members in Canada and the United States, are attending the ASA annual meeting.

The point was raised by Rev. Kenneth Bryan, a minister from Connecticut. He said the parties are landed in waterways, fish by Grand Hall, then ride the fish, moving to another spot. They repeat the performance and fill the entire catch limit before returning to the United States.

Angus MacLean, federal fish eries minister, said fishing regulations in the Atlantic provinces are not protecting salmon properly because of "different and conflicting policies of the provinces and sometimes within a province."

The flowers we loved are laid here still,
Their hands so often clasped in ours,
Their loving voices are hushed,
But memories last for hours.

We often sit and think of them,
When we are all alone,
For memory is the only thing,
That grief can call its own.

Two Ambulance Services And Fire Dept. Plagued By Flood of False Alarms

One address in Belleville has been given in false alarms to two local ambulance operators and twice to the fire department within the past few weeks.

The fire department calls came last Sunday and Monday, within five minutes of the same time on each night, and to the same address, according to Fire Chief Gerald Vance. Both calls were phoney.

One other night within the past two weeks, ambulances operated by the Quinte Ambulance Service and LaSalle were both called to the same address at the same time, and again the calls were false alarms.

Because of several calls to one address, they appear to be the work of one prankster, possibly a mentally disturbed teenager. Steps are being taken to keep a record of all calls to emergency telephone numbers, in order to trace the culprit. Whoever he is, he needs help.

ARE DANGEROUS

These calls are dangerous, to the people who have to answer them and to the public. False alarms have killed more firemen than the real ones, according to Fire Chief Gerald Vance, and false alarms, by tying up equipment, have often contributed to real tragedies.

Bob Vance, of the Quinte Ambulance Service can remember occasions when calls to non-existent accidents occupied both the ambulances they keep on alert. A genuine call could not have been answered without serious delay. Recently this firm has received an average of five or six false alarms per week and up to three and four a night.

False alarms are a problem to non-emergency services too. Most merchants have had plenty of experience with false telephone orders, and every service station has sent tow trucks to start or repair cars that are not there.

But the most macabre, and probably the most deranged prankster in recent years has given up his operation. He was the one who used to send undertakers to false alarms around Belleville.

As an ambulance operator Stuart Meeks is trained in treating victims. Right now he himself is the victim of a series of sinister incidents adding up to a war of nerves.

On one side there's himself and his six-man ambulance team. On the other, an anonymous voice, or voices, that have seriously threatened the operation of the city's biggest private emergency service.

The battle is a running one, utilizing that instrument of emergency, —the telephone.

The telephone in the offices of LaSalle Ambulance service is being used to summon the three-vehicle ambulance squad to a series of phoney emergencies, ranging from suicides to school bus accidents, to common coronaries. Here's the record, according to Meeks:

STUART MEEKS

The 29-year-old army veteran (he served more than four years as regular army instructor with the Hasty Pees in Belleville), came to the Quinte city from Kingston in January 1962 after the city's then-existing ambulance services went out of business.

Two months later the trouble started and hadn't let up to last night.

Since that time sand was poured in the gas tank of an ambulance; tires on the small fleet have been deflated; wiring systems on the vehicles have been ripped apart.

The ambulances have been summoned to pick up non-existent patients in Toronto and Kingston hospitals and the phone keeps on ringing, ringing, ringing.

HAD THREE CALLS

"In one day we had three calls to the same scene on Highway 2 — one reporting a school bus accident that sent two of our ambulances roaring to the scene," says Meeks.

Ironically, he adds, some time later a genuine report of a serious car smash was phoned in from the same spot. At first he was reluctant to dispatch an ambulance — convinced the call was a phony.

This is the sinister implication of the whole ghoulish operation, according to the young operator. It could have serious consequences.

Last night was a good case in point — probably the climax to date of the whole affair.

In all, LaSalle ambulance answered nine emergency calls by 12.15 a.m. today.

Continuously, throughout the day the phones kept ringing, with the party at the other end sometimes just hanging up — sometimes reporting a phoney emergency. Of the nine emergencies, only one turned out to be genuine. And that was when a man angrily thrust himself into the office, says Meeks, and demanded:

"What do I have to do to get an ambulance. I've been phoning for 20 minutes."

It turned out his wife had suffered a hemorrhage and he had been unable to make a phone connection on the LaSalle lines.

AMBULANCES BUSY

But the ambulances had been busy alright.

Earlier in the night a vehicle had been rushed to a Sidney Street residence, to pick up a hospital case. It turned out just another one of those calls. Then, a girl's voice came on the phone and reported finding her sister in a pool of blood at a farmhouse among the Oak Hills — 12 miles north of Belleville.

The ambulance streaked over — to another rendezvous with roads greasy with freezing rain nothing.

"We went to every home around there and they didn't know anything about it," said Meeks.

But the night wasn't over yet. Shortly after midnight another call sent Meeks and an assistant racing into action. "This time," he said, "the caller claimed he was a police officer and reported a senior officer had been stricken with a coronary. The ambulance crew complete with resuscitator, turned up at OPP district headquarters.

NEARLY DITCHED

"I nearly put one of those ambulances off the road tonight," said Meeks, "but what do you do?"

"When someone phones and she's crying and excited and you finally get out of her that she's found her sister with her wrists cut?

"What do you do? You bust yourself getting there!"

However, the battle is not so one-sided any longer. Last night Meeks finally called in Bell Telephone officials. He had nothing to say on what strategies they have exchanged.

Russia Warns Japan Against Troops on Soil

MOSCOW (Reuters)—Russia warned Japan Wednesday against stationing foreign troops on its soil or permitting a foreign atomic fleet to enter its ports.

It said American submarines entering Japanese ports would obviously "pave the way into Japan for American nuclear weapons."

The warning was contained in a Soviet note handed to Japanese Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ohira in Tokyo by Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Vinogradov. The note was published in Moscow Wednesday night.

The note said the "security interests of Japan's neighbors and the interests of peace in the Far East" were affected by any steps involving foreign troops on Japanese soil or the docking of nuclear vessels in Japanese ports.

Such steps, the note said "face the Soviet Union with the need to take account of military preparations being conducted in the immediate proximity of its frontiers in implementing its defensive measures in the Far East."

The jury also recommended that the mother, Mrs. Maude Elizabeth Edwards, 18, be given psychiatric treatment.

The Election Issues

The question of whether Canada should accept from the U.S. nuclear warheads for four weapon systems Canada possesses which are capable of using them has now been taken out of the hands of the House of Commons.

A decision on this question now rests with the Canadian people as a whole and they will give their verdict April 8. They cannot avoid doing so, because they will have to choose between the candidates of four political parties, with differing views on this issue.

It would be a pity, though, if the results of the election in April were to be based solely on this question of nuclear arms.

There are other important questions facing Canada, problems whose solution is at least equally important for the future welfare of the nation. There is, for instance, the question of a continuing high level of unemployment. No person in his right senses will hold the Diefenbaker Government primarily to blame for the existence of this situation, because it is basically the result of conditions which have been maturing over many years. This ill will not be easy to cure; for that very reason, though, it is imperative that there be no further delay in commencing treatment.

This problem, of unemployment, is tied closely to our financial difficulties, which sprang into the headlines last June, and to our trade problems. The policies of the contending parties on these matters deserve at least as much consideration as the question of nuclear arms.

It will not be enough for the parties which have been in opposition to outline the extent of these problems, nor will mere criticism of past policies of the Diefenbaker Government, or lack of them, be adequate. What the voters should have before them, so that they can make a reasoned choice, are the proposals of the parties for curing these ills.

Amongst many possible issues, there is one which most emphatically should not enter into the campaign. That is anything savoring of anti-Americanism. It is natural for Progressive Conservatives to be annoyed at the United States for its state department's intervention in a question the answer to which rests solely with Canadians. Their annoyance is doubly understandable when it led directly to the fall of the Diefenbaker Government.

There may be some foolish people who regard this unwarranted intrusion by a foreign country into our affairs as providing a heavensent opportunity for the Conservatives to ride back to power on this "issue." Fortunately for the country, Prime Minister Diefenbaker and his cabinet ministers are too clear-sighted to embark on any such effort, which could do irretrievable harm to the country. We have the word of Hon. George Hees Minister of Trade, that the party will not conduct an anti-American campaign. All supporters of the party would do well to heed this declaration and to avoid like the plague any comment which touches on the U.S. intervention.

As we have said, the election should not be fought solely on the nuclear issue. However, because it is certain to figure largely in decisions of voters, here is a concise, and we hope fair, statement of the stands of the four parties.

The Socreds want Canada to accept nuclear warheads. Like many Americans, their distrust of Russia overrides every other consideration.

The New Democratic Party is opposed to Canada accepting such warheads. Like Bertrand Russell's followers in Britain and "banthe-bomb" factions everywhere, the party believes the risks of a thermonuclear war are so high that they make it imperative we accept the other risks inherent in pinning hopes on negotiations and an international police force.

The Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives both stand between these two extremes. The Liberals would accept nuclear warheads, because they regard Canada as committed to such a policy, but one can gather from much of their speech that they would welcome any re-appraisal of the military and international situation which would eventually relieve Canada of what they regard as its present duty. The Progressive Conservatives, led by the Prime Minister, want to keep Canada out of the "nuclear club" as long as possible and regard the availability of such warheads in the U.S. as an adequate safeguard.

All parties, in private at least, would probably admit that, as a matter of fact, the presence in Canada of nuclear warheads under U.S. control—as they would inevitably be—would not make Canada a member of the so-called "nuclear club." But most would contend, and we suspect accurately, that many nations would so interpret such a situation.

Extravagant Campaigning No Guarantee of Winning Votes

By RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — Ever think of running for Parliament? Well, all political alarm bells are ringing all over town, and it won't be long now.

For the political freshman, the campaign greenhorn, there never has been a chance before like this . . . and maybe won't be again.

With four parties running — and the vote fracturing fragments — anything can happen.

Like last month in supposedly rock-solid Liberal Quebec where Social Credit astoundingly picked up those 36 seats to give the astonishing Socreds those critical key make-or-break 30 votes in the Commons.

So this, is ever there was a tailor-made time for the greenhorn, is the one to go for broke.

(And you may just do that.)

You know, it does not have to cost a fortune to run for Parliament.

The two major parties can — and not infrequently do — spend a cool $100,000 or more on a key candidate in a clutch constituency.

But it can be done for peanuts.

Chief Electoral Officer Nelson Castonguay's list of election expenses of the more than 1,000 candidates who made a race for it last June has revealed that while it can cost up to $100,000, there were those who ran on less than $100.

FOR FREE

There are even some stouthearted men who apparently can go to Parliament almost for nothing. For no expenses. For free.

They do not run—or did not last June—but perhaps they had fun, found it a rewarding and stimulating experience, and having limbered up, may make a real race of it this time around.

Last June, there were two candidates who fought a "no expense" campaign. One was J. Stann, a Kitchener clergyman in Simcoe East, and Geo. B. Robertson in Yorkton-Greenwood. Rev. Mr. Stann collected 423 votes, and Mr. McLelland, 222.

In another Toronto constituency of Parkdale, a meritorious Ian. M. Wilson Middleton, running for the Socreds, picked up 2,000 votes for just $12 invested in campaign costs.

Next financially neatest campaign was run by Independent, Douglas Kay Campbell, coffee house proprietor in Toronto-St. Paul's, who was the constituency where the Liberal victor, Ian Wahn, spent just under $20,000 to nose out former House of Commons Speaker Rolly Michener, the Conservative candidate.

Mr. Campbell didn't, of course, come even close, polling up only 2,000 votes but then he spent but a mere $33.

But the return—as both of vote power—is not always as unrewarding as Mr Campbell's disappointing rate of 9.4.

THE JACKPOT

For while he did not win few thousand dollars of a bigger vote-for-dollar bang out of his campaign spending than Bill Mahoney machinist, running for the New Democrats in Niagara Falls.

Judy LaMarsh, of Lib Judith—could not equal his remarkable ballot-for-buck return of 9.4.

He spent but $50 and counted 5,000 votes.

That is why just a shade short of 75 votes for $1 or really not much more than that is worth.

This was just about the longest and strongest shoestring in the entire campaign.

Of all the shoestring artists, perhaps Basil Hamilton, a Toronto compositor, got the smallest return on his election investment.

He was running in some pretty fast company in Toronto-Eglinton where the Liberals matched the late "Trader" Hoey's Deputy Minister, Mitchell Sharp against Justice Minister Fleming.

Mr. Duggan tapped out $94.50 and picked up only 341 votes.

A quick run-down of the list of election expenses makes it plain that Social Credit, for all those rumors about the party being bankrolled by some of Alberta's oil and gas millionaires, ran on by far the tightest financial ticket.

There were a dozen of them who did it on less than $100 — and look what they picked up — those 30 seats in the House of Commons the voters gave the power to call the parliamentary shot.

Idealists At Times Can Be Tyrants

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: The way a man traditionally maintains his self-respect is by doing a difficult job and doing it well; and the widespread loss of self-respect in the modern world is largely owing to the increasing number of jobs that can be done simply, perfunctorily, mechanically, carelessly, and under no compulsion to be done well.

Given power, an intolerant idealist can be more oppressive than any tyrant; it was the intolerant idealists of the French Revolution who created the Reign of Terror, which answered tyranny with tyranny, with a less exalted view of mankind, would have had too much sense to inflict.

Those who are fond of asking "Is life worth living?" rarely pause to ask themselves the corollary question, "Is death worth dying?"

Marriage has been called a "die," but it is more like a belt, which cannot be too tight (or it blinds) and cannot be too loose (or it falls); and marriages that fail are those which have only one notch in the belt, so that it cannot be loosened or tightened to adjust to changing weights and pressures of the relationship.

Among the hardest advice to follow is that given by George Macdonald when he said, "If you have a disagreeable duty to do at twelve o'clock, do not slacken time and ten-and-eleven and all between with the colour of twelve."

Before we are proud of controlling our passions, it might be well to ask ourselves whether our control is so strong or our passions so weak.

Even genius has its limitations: Einstein could not find the unified field theory he was looking for all his life; but stupidity is infinity: there is no fancy or belief that can reach the boundary of human credulity, and some man can always be found who will carry the banner of stupidity across a new frontier.

The difference between the cynic and the skeptic is this: when confronted with something that seems too good to be true, the cynic says that it isn't good; while the skeptic says that it isn't true.

Experience is not the best, but the worst, teacher for those with closed minds; as someone has observed, a cat who has sat on a hot stove will never sit on a hot stove again — but it won't sit on a cold stove, either.

True forgiveness does not consist merely in burying the hatchet; it must include forgetting the burial-place.

From the village of Warkworth came volunteers. The Bata Shoe Company of Trenton sent a large quota, and residents of this city turned out in goodly numbers to help the total to a highly appreciative figure.

Mystery surrounds the identity of a young woman, who appeared at the home of Dr. R. S. Gibson on George Street, late on Sunday evening, complaining she had lost her memory. Examination revealed that the young lady, who was well dressed, Dr. Gibson had her placed in the Belleville General Hospital. The woman, who is believed to be between 19 and 21 years of age, stated she believed she arrived in Belleville via an early evening train Sunday and does not remember from where she came, nor anything pertaining to her past.

Officials of the Belleville Red Cross Emergency Corps announced, today that long-delayed shipments of bandages, gauze and other ingredients that go to make surgical dressings have arrived in the city, and the regular volunteer gatherings will meet tonight at Kiwanis Centre. Owing to the urgency of making the dressings and items, there will be no recanstication lecture afterwards as was scheduled originally.

Hot Flashes Triggered By a Number of Things

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 53, haven't menstruated for six years, and I still get hot flashes. I had a hysterectomy a few months ago and that didn't stop them. My doctor says it isn't from menopause. If I have to put up with them, I would like to know why. What are the causes? — B.S.

I have been told that no mere man has any business talking about hot flashes because he doesn't experience them and therefore doesn't know what he is talking about.

With this preface of humility, I'll try to answer you.

Hot flashes are a characteristic although not universal symptom of menopause or change of life.

They are thought to be due to instability of the automatic control of blood vessels — a rush of blood through the surface vessels which brings a sudden sensation of warmth. Hot flashes.

They are not dangerous, any more than a blush is. But they can, I am sure, be upsetting. They bother some women to great deal, others very little. Both intensity and duration vary from person to person.

This instability in blood vessel control apparently is due to an abrupt change in hormone balance which occurs at menopause. This explains the fact that giving hormones for a few months at this time helps prevent or minimize the hot flashes.

Hot flashes are not the only symptom of menopause. For the cessation when the "change" is over, only to have them recur later on, usually in emotional crisis, anxiety can trigger them it seems. Adequate rest can be important.

In addition we know that hyperthyroidism (over-active thyroid) can be involved and that this is more common after 50 than formerly had been supposed.

Hence careful checking of the thyroid, along with seeing that there is no anemia, often pays dividends in curbing flashes when they occur after the usual time for them has passed.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain the function of the spleen. If it is injured, is an operation necessary? — Mrs. B.W.

The spleen is a lymphatic organ similar, for example, to the lymph glands under the chin. The purpose is to filter out unwanted materials in the blood stream.

In the case of the spleen, so much blood flows through that a rupture of it can cause a person to bleed to death internally. The tissues are such that it is extremely difficult to sew up such a wound. However, the entire spleen can be removed and the blood vessels tied off, and there will be no trouble afterward. Not all injuries to the spleen necessarily mean a rupture.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is the meaning of "hypertrophy failure" and "hydrocephalus," and what causes them? — Mrs. B.C.

Respiratory failure means faulty operation of the lungs and their related and complex organs, which leads to great difficulty in breathing. There are many causes. Hydrocephalus comes from "hydro" for water, and "cephalus" from the Greek word for "head." It means excess accumulation of fluid in the brain. In young children the causes are not known, but head enlargement of the head occurs, and finally the pressure damages the brain. In adults hydrocephalus is more likely to be from acute infection, such as meningitis.

Orillia Packet and Times

In the fast-moving world of the 20th century, change is not necessarily progress. Accordingly the fact that Tahiti, the storied Polynesian island which for nearly two centuries has represented a kind of terrestrial paradise to weather-weary sailors and work-worn men in the walks of life is now linked by jet with the airports of the world, is calculated to cause much misgiving among romantics.

For a large part of the spell which Tahiti has cast over its remoteness from the humdrum than the hordes of tourists who have flocked to the island. The most ancient men knew the virtues of a hot stone in their bellies and leather reed huts to beaver quilts.

"One bitter day, an Indian, fuddling a cup of tea in his wigwam, conceived the idea of a hollow stone in which he could hotels overshadow the pathetic strip of Waikiki Beach.

There are, of course, still lovely and unspoiled places in the sun, where the painters in serenity, the writers undisturbed, the living leisurely and inexpensive and the lovers unaided to aircraft. These are today the eagerly-sought goal of the American tourist-seeker.

Anxious to get away from it all in some little corner that time forgot. Once having found it, of course, he will proceed to spoil it by bringing in "improvements" which destroy the very quality he so prized.

It is this singular paradox that is gradually changing the face of the once-remote parts of the tropical world. For as Tahiti's old men kill the thing they love."

THE PACKSACK

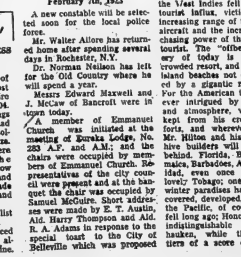
By GREGORY CLARK

An Ojibway friend of mine has a most interesting speculation on how the North American Indian conceived the calumet or pipe.



"All ancient man, not only Indians, he says, lived in a smokey atmosphere much of their lives, in cave, hut and tent. He found it comforting to come in out of the winter and pick up an earthen bowl with a hot stone in it. The most ancient men of the tribe, who knew the virtues of a hot stone in their bellies and leather reed to beaver quilts.

"One bitter day, an Indian, fuddling a cup of tea in his wigwam, conceived the idea of a hollow stone in which he could cup a little fire. He knew that by blowing on hot coals, he could keep them glowing. Five hundred years later, his great-grandson thought of the idea of inserting a straw in the little hand-stove, so he could blow.

By accident, maybe he coughed; and, further indeed, he found he could keep the little hand-fire going by drawing on the straw instead of blowing, one of his descendants found that certain fuels in the little stove lasted better than others. He experimented. And he found that tobacco leaves burned best. It lasted so good that everybody started carrying hand-stoves, even in the summer."

Try to Calm Fears About Arms in Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kennedy administration has flashed across television screens an unprecedented display of intelligence data to support its stand that Cuba is free of Soviet offensive weapons.

The report late Wednesday had a double purpose: To reassure Americans and to squeeze the steam out of a boiling political controversy over Cuba's armed might.

But despite Defence Secretary McNamara's statement that he believes beyond any reasonable doubt that all offensive weapons have been removed from Cuba, Senator Kenneth Keating remained in no mood to let up.

Keating, a New York Republican who has been making charges since last August about Cuba's military might, said none of his statements had been disputed by McNamara in the television broadcast. He featured an intelligence expert and many reconnaissance photographs.

That settled for once and for all the question of whether the Governor - General should always follow the advice of a prime minister.

Vote May Decide Canada's Future U.S. Relations

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The shape of Canada's future relations with the United States and the Canadian role in the Western defence alliance may hinge on the outcome of the Canadian general election.

In the same way, decisions of Canadian voters may have a major bearing on the ability of President Kennedy to influence the course of the Western alliance.

For years, Canada's co-operation has been considered basic in deployment of major U.S. foreign policy. After all, as U.S. Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield has stated, if the United States cannot get help from Canada, how can she expect sincere help from other countries?

Now that co-operation is being challenged. The election campaign is likely to give rise to a great deal of questioning on how Canada's future relations with the United States should be organized and directed. Washington policy-makers fear an emotional sweep of anti-Americanism could lead to drastic readjustment of Canadian foreign policy.

This is not to say that Washington will shudder every time a campaigner takes a punch at the Kennedy image. Uncle Sam has a tough hide and has learned to take a lot of verbal punishment. The U.S. public, through the press, has been tipped of the possibility that all kinds of charges against the United States may be raised.

But there is, of course, a limitation of how much anti-Americanism President Kennedy would take before firing back. He has a role to play as leader of the fight against world communism. He has a political image to preserve at home.

Last December Kennedy gave notice he will subordinate personal popularity to accomplishment in seeking to get things done in the Western camp.

He don't expect that the United States will be more beloved," he told reporters, "but I would hope that we could get more done."

If the Canadian election campaign is fought around what Prime Minister Diefenbaker described as U.S. interference in Canadian affairs on the nuclear issue, observers wonder at what point Kennedy might decide to give out some replies. And if he did what would be the effect on the Canadian campaign?

Hometown Politics Will Soon Be in Full Swing

With the insecure fabric of the twenty-fifth Parliament suddenly shredded to the winds, emphasis now turns to the hometown aspect of politics.

Locally, of the four ridings comprising the Quinte district, the spotlight should burn brightest in South Hastings — barring, of course, any sudden seen colorful development in the other three.

Prime reason for this is the inroad made by the riding's Liberal assault party in the 1962 campaign.

However, on this, the day following the dramatic 24 parliamentary hours concluding in yesterday's dissolution, South Hastings is probably no different from any other constituency. That is, hometown politics are still waiting for the shreds to settle, before formally joining battle.

Of the three parties contesting the 1962 election, only one officially has a candidate in the field.

While Conservative MP Lee Grills was reported there he left-off before the campaign, his main election assailant, Liberal Robert Temple, was setting up his organization for resumption of the fray.

In mid-November Mr. Temple got the formalities out of the way by calling a nominating convention and having his candidacy endorsed.

READY TO GO

Last night, with the most important formality — that of national dissolution — Mr. Temple had called an organization meeting of his riding workers.

Meaning, however, there was no worry in the Conservative camp.

They are pretty well set up and ready to go," Jack Ireland, president of South Hastings PC association told the Ontario Intelligencer.

Mr. Grills has not yet been formally named his party's candidate — but that is coming.

"Our convention will be held just as quickly as can be arranged, probably within two weeks."

Mr. Grills, he said, probably will not return from the Ottawa scene until later in the week and "then I'll be discussing his strategy with him."

Meantime, the New Democratic Party also may call its convention approximately within the same time.

Its 1962 candidate Les Digby pointed out last night that according to party rules convention delegates must have 10 days written notice.

"It won't be for a couple of weeks anyhow," said Mr. Digby. "But we undoubtedly will have it."

Exotic Recipes to Try at Home

Cookbook No. 10 - Recipe No. 1

THE CREOLE COOKBOOK

New Orleans with its Mardi Gras and its creole tradition is a mecca to the discriminating lover of good food, and if you can't take a trip to that exotic city, the next best thing is to learn the fine art of its cooking. This being the case, the Creole Cookbook is the current offering in The Ontario Intelligencer's Cooking Magic Series. Creole cooking has in it traces of French, Spanish, Indian and African. If you're a Sherlock Holmes, you may amuse yourself by tracing those various influences in the 201 recipes of the Creole Cookbook. If not, you'll just relax and enjoy the happy blending of cuisines that make up New Orleans cookery. Here's a chicken dish that we think you'll enjoy.

CHICKEN SAUTE A LA CREOLE

Set out a large, heavy skillet having a tight-fitting cover. Disjoint and cut into serving-size pieces 1 frying chicken, 2-3 lbs. ready to cook weight. (If chicken is frozen, thaw according to directions on package.) Quickly rinse pieces in cold water and pat dry with absorbent paper.

To coat chicken evenly, shake 2 or 3 pieces at a time in a plastic bag containing a mixture of ¾ cup of flour; 1½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon pepper. Heat skillet over medium heat fat or cooking oil (not olive oil) to at least ½ inch in depth.

Starting with meaty chicken pieces, place skin-side down in skillet. Put in less meaty pieces as others brown. To brown on all sides, turn as necessary with tongs or two spoons. When evenly browned, remove chicken from skillet; set aside and keep warm. Pour off fat and reserve.

For the sauce, return to the skillet 2 tablespoons reserved chicken drippings. Add to skillet and cook over low heat until onion is transparent 1 cup (2 medium-size) chopped green pepper. Stir in 2 cups (1 No. 2 can) sieved, cooked tomatoes; remove garlic finely minced or crushed in garlic press and ¼ teaspoon basil.

To complete, add chicken pieces to sauce. Cover, simmer 30-40 minutes or until thickest chicken pieces are tender when pierced with a fork. Stir occasionally when chicken is tender, add to sauce and heat thoroughly 1 cup pitted ripe olives cut in halves.

Serve chicken with sauce spooned over pieces. Makes 4-5 servings.

'Underprivileged Nations' Topic At Quinte W.I.

2ND OF SIDNEY — On Monday evening the Bay of Quinte Institute held a special meeting for the purpose of discussing "Canada's World Obligations as Women See It." Miss Hazel Farley was speaker at Harder's School. The attendance was fair due to roads condition. Several of the ladies from "The Business and Professional League of Trenton were present. One lady said she never realized before that the aims of both the Institute and League were so much the same.

Mrs. Alva Dunn introduced the speaker and welcomed the guests.

Miss Farley said she did not like the word 'obligation', she would rather put the word 'service' in its place. Her talk was divided in five parts: education, food for the underprivileged, understanding, immigration and peace.

The way of the Institutes, through the F.W.I. are educating the underprivileged of other nations is by bringing a few people, mostly teachers, to Canada to attend college, such as at MacDonald Institute through scholarships donated by the Institutes and then these teachers go back home to teach community leaders who will spread these ideas through their villages to the improvement of homes and personal living.

One student each from Uganda, Trinidad, Jamaica, Br. Guiana, and Ceylon are now in Canada this year taking a course.

"We have so much food in Canada that we must help other countries who have little" said Miss Farley, naming different organizations helping these unfortunate people, but "it is not enough to send them food,we must help them to help themselves. We must teach them to preserve their food, teach them sanitation and what have you."

MUST UNDERSTAND

"We must learn to understand the different peoples of the world also. It would be necessary to go over and to live with the people to try to understand them. This can be done by exchange of letters through the Institutes sponsor the child program, anything that helps the underprivileged makes for better understanding.

"We should share our large land with others wishing to come to Canada to live. After all, said Miss Farley, if we are not immigrants our forefathers were, so why should we refuse a place in this great land to others?"

"We should be working for disarmament so that we will never have peace unless we disarm."

At nine o'clock we listened in on the Citizens Forum, with Mrs. Isaacs of Ceylon, who is studying home economics at MacDonald Institute, as a F.W.I.O. scholarship fund.

Mrs. Elton Armstrong also spoke. Our Institutes are doing.

There was a discussion at the close with Mrs. Dunn leading. Miss Farley asked what the W.I. thought about bringing in immigrants from Hong Kong where everything is so congested—crowding to other lands. It was agreed that Canada needed a lot more immigrants and that it was wiser to have people from other lands to go to school in Canada and then go back and teach their own people. More scholarships are needed.

Mrs. Clayton Curtis thanked Miss Farley for her kindness in coming to speak to the W.I.

A social half hour was enjoyed at the close with cookies and coffee being served.

Tate Gallery To Show Canadian Art

An exhibition of Canadian painting is being organized by the National Gallery of Canada for a showing at the Tate Gallery in London, England, early in 1964.

This exhibition is being organized at the invitation of the Tate Gallery trustees, and will illustrate the most important developments in Canadian painting during the past 25 years.

The policy of the National Gallery is to keep Canadian artists of note gain international recognition, and it is expected that this exhibition will do much to further that cause.

Snakes in Her Duplex Routine for This Miss

By PATRICIA RUSAK

TORONTO (CP) — Borrowing a cup of sugar or an egg is often the way curious neighbors attempt to confirm their suspicions about the people upstairs. But this sort of thing doesn't seem to happen at one north Toronto duplex.

The folks downstairs may suspect that Barbara Froom keeps snakes but, she says, "they're probably too nervous to come and see."

Miss Froom is editor for the two-year-old Canadian Amphibian and Reptile Conservation Society which is devoted to the preservation of snakes, turtles, lizards and other reptiles and amphibians.

"Of all living things, these fascinating creatures are the least understood and least appreciated," she says. "We just want people to realize their economic value and leave them alone."

Although Miss Froom has five pet snakes in her own home, she doesn't recommend them as pets.

"They are meant to be free in nature, and the average person doesn't have the time or patience to look after them properly."

NEED PROPER FOOD

All of Miss Froom's snakes—four garters named Bijou, Bettina, Buttons and Bows and a smooth green snake called Greeno—must be hand-fed each day. And they require a carefully balanced diet if they are to remain healthy.

As with most people who keep reptiles as pets, she makes notes of their actions for study purposes.

"Buttons and Bows are particularly good for studying. They were both born in captivity of the same mother and at the same time but are very different in temperament. Bows is very docile and eats everything he is given. Buttons is more lively and nervous and loves to have his food live."

Bijou is her favorite. He enjoys having his face washed and his chin rubbed. And as his name suggests, "he really is a jewel."

He often lies quietly with Miss Froom as she reads in the evenings while the other four snakes slither and slide around the chairs and cupboards enjoying their few minutes outside their glass—enclosed terrarium.

CRAWLED ACROSS TABLE

Miss Froom first became interested in snakes when she saw one at the Canadian National Exhibition when she was three. She received her first pet snake when she was eight.

"I'll never forget that first snake. I brought him upstairs one night to show our dinner guests and he crawled right across the table through the butter."

Barbara's mother, Mrs. Oma Froom, says it doesn't take long to get used to snakes. Although she wouldn't touch one when they first came into the house, she now is just as interested in them as is Barbara.

"I even had to save Bows' life one day. He was shedding his skin and would have suffocated if I hadn't been around to help him."

In addition to her snakes, Barbara has two Japanese pond turtles which she believes are of world record size. Largest ever recorded in Japan were five inches long. Miss Froom's now are 5½ and 5¼.

One thing that annoys Miss Froom is the sale of turtles, horned toads and chameleons by pet shops who provide food preparations that are "completely lacking in nourishment."

Without the raw fish, meat and green calmon, a species of alligator, and green iguana lizards are also sold as pets but shouldn't be unless the buyer is prepared to keep them properly in water and feed them the right food.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

How should we face death if we are not to rage against it, nor become morbid and guilt-ridden, or turn our backs on life?

First, by accepting its inevitability and its mortality. This is the lesson of the Hindu tale of the woman, who, pleading with Buddha to restore her son to life was told to bring a mustard seed from a house that had not known death. Carrying her pathetic burden all over, but in vain, she finally understood his reasoning. She learned that there is no home without grief. She buried her child and went on with her duties to the living.

Ben Hecht says the same thing in his own provocative way in his strange, strong book, "A Child of the Century."

"I can recall the hour in which I lost my immortality, in which I stared over Shirred for the first time and saw how it became me. The knowledge of my dying came to me when my Mother died. There was more than sorrow involved. I felt grief enough, and my heart had the rip of a dear one dying. I carried her image in my eyes, seeing her when she was no longer seeable. Her vanished voice echoed in my head and the love she bore me struggled painfully to stay alive around me. But my heart did not claw at the emptied space where she had stood and demand her return. I accepted death for both of us.

EDGE OF WORLD

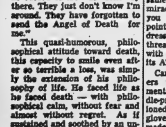
"I went and returned dry-eyed from the burial, but I brought death back with me. I had been to the edge of the world and looked over its last foot of territory into nothingness. I had seen mortality and it remained in me like a disease. It changed my knowledge of life. Its delights were never quite able to fool me again. The secret of death appeared in all the faces around me. I knew that were oldness of two worlds, of the small vanishing one of light and noise, and of the vast endless one of darkness and silence."

We must learn to endure what cannot be cured. We must hold hands with our fellowmen, for their grief is like ours and their end is like ours. We are all involved in one another and the death for one is a loss for all. And the same bell tolls for all of us, and the same hope is there for all of us to share.



There is no better therapy than to carry on in the spirit of the departed. The loss of a child should make us turn in sympathy and helpfulness toward all children. Death from diseases about which we know all too little should lead us to make possible the conquest of these scourges. We can use our griefs constructively, and we can learn from our affliction.

Sometime ago a congregation in New York dedicated its new building to the memory of a rabbi, a brilliant and gifted young man who died in the prime of life. Among the rabbi's father and mother were present at the dedication, where the latter met some of his friends whom he hadn't seen for years. He told them: "They ask me why at 87 I'm still here. Well, this is the reason. In the little town of Lithuania where I was born, the village clerk couldn't read or write and the records were badly kept. In fact, no record was made of my birth, and so no record of me was sent out there. They just don't know I'm around. They have forgotten to send the Angel of Death for me."

This quasi-humorous, philosophical attitude toward death, this capacity to smile even after so terrible a loss, was simply the extension of his philosophy of life. He faced life as he faced death — with philosophical calm, without fear and almost without regret. As it sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust, he approached his end like one who draws the draperies of his bed around him and lies down to pleasant dreams.

Wife Preservers

For the flavor of fresh onions in soups or gravy, without the bulk — just put them in an aluminum tea ball while cooking.

Mr. T.H. — He should go to the all-boys school.

Mrs. T.H. — He should go to the co-educational school.

Mr. T.H. — It would be difficult if we had no choice in the matter. But our son Hank has received a scholarship, through my union, for a private secondary school. It has a high scholastic record, and boys who graduate get the best colleges easily.

My wife wants him to turn down the grant and go to the local high school. She says it's not good for a kid to be in an all-boy environment. The other school is co-ed.

Hank now is set to attend the nearby school, but now he's eager to try this academy. I think I'd get a better education there, but my wife is trying to talk him out of it.

Mrs. T.H. — Hank is an only child and I think it's important for him to go to a school where the environment is more like the outside world, like a big family.

I know I was handicapped by going to an all-girl high school. It took me years to feel at ease among boys. I used to giggle and blush in the presence of such "strange" creatures. Besides, there are other factors. The private school is an hour and a train ride away and Hank will lose all that time commuting. His old friends in the neighborhood will drop him.

There's more to school than just studies. Hank will get more out of his high school years if he stays here in town in his natural circles.

The Council: The question of what school for Hank can only be answered via another question: What does Hank need most right now? A boy is entitled to attend the school he can be most benefited by. Those who know Hank best — his teachers, his parents, and himself — must talk with those who know the two schools best — the guidance counselors or principals, to do a skillful matching job.

But The Council can help, perhaps, by discussing the general pro's and con's of the separated school. Unexpectedly we find recent studies which stress the pro. The only "con" which holds up, for some teenagers, is the one raised by Mrs. H., namely the reduced opportunity for fostering healthy boy-girl relationships. It follows, then, that if the home, church, and community can provide facilities for helping the adolescent to acquire social smoothness in his non-school hours, his high school need not concern itself strongly with that phase of his growth.

Hypothesizing about Hank, Mrs. H., what if he's brilliant? One survey, directed by Dr. A.J. Tannenbaum for Teachers College, Columbia Univ., finds that the child is to be miserable in a co-ed school where "cheerful mediocrity" is lionized. Girls, generally, are less studious, and less value to a boy's academic achievement than to his ability to dance, play football, "shoot the breeze." As a result, bright boys often cut down their IQ's and hold in the presence of such "strange" creatures. Besides, there are other factors. The private school is an hour's train ride away and Hank will lose all that time commuting. His old friends in the neighborhood will drop him.

Canadian Fashion & Fad

BY pegg rogers

The fashion magazines are awash with articles about the "individual look" to fashion. The "think" magazines are still panning the conformists in our midst. According to them, a conformist is each and every one of us who lives in a routine pattern. We, Canadians, may conform in other areas of our lives, but we cannot be accused of conforming to Canadian fashion. When abroad, we are mistaken for Americans. At home, we blend with the background. Unlike our neighbouring Americans, we are likely to stand out in the crowd.

There is no National Canadian look to fashion. There is no special look because we could honestly say that the return of suede, as seen in jackets and boots, could be called the Mohawks! Certainly, tartans are classics with us, but they did not originate here.

We are known the world over for our fine furs, in the pelt. But where does the styling in general come from for these magnificent coats? New York and-or Paris, of course. We have some of the finest craftsmanship, at least second level, right here in Canada. To prove it, just examine a Canadian-made dress, comparing it to an American-made dress in the same price point. Neither are miracles of hand-finishing. If you stay in the middle-price points, but the Canadian-made dress will be free of ragging threads and buttons sewn on with one loop of thread, than its American counterpart.

Canadian coat and suit makers turn out well-made garments. Our knits in the medium-price ranges are finely fashioned and of good quality. Good gloves of quality leather are made in Quebec. The weavers of New Brunswick have turned a cottage craft into big business. Our milliners are outstanding for workmanship and hand sewing. We have small jewelry firms, hand knitters of sweaters and hats, also a few manufacturers of handbags. Our sportswear industry is booming.

Then why do we reflect the tastes of our American neighbors? Because, for the most part, these tastes are to our liking. It is easier and less expensive for our clothing manufacturers to obtain a franchise for a top American line, than to wait for the Paris reports, or to try to ferret out the fashion "news" independently in New York, London or Paris. We lack the money to experiment on our own, on a mass production level, as one poor season can put most of our factories in the hands of the receiver.

Some time ago a Canadian magazine published an article on the differences between the French Canadian's approach to fashion and that of her English-speaking cousin. It emphasized the French Canadian's interest in fashions that really fit in a decent, provocative style! Any merchant doing business in Quebec province acknowledges that he must stock good quality fashions with plenty of flair.

We feel that Canadians have pronounced regional tastes, just as we all have regional accents. The gals in Quebec are the nation's best millinery customers, while the housewives in Saint John, New Brunswick have made the wicker shopping basket a fashion classic.

'Unimix' for Gluten-Free Loaf Adaptable To Other Baking

by Mary Moore

For the benefit of patients who are allergic to wheat in any form, a mix for the baking of a gluten-free loaf is available in Canada. The formula for this was developed in the Faculty of Household Science, University of Toronto, by Miss Elizabeth Upton and Dr. Barbara A. McLaren.

This formula is named Unimix. It is available only in canisters, each carton containing 3 half-pound packages, each package being sufficient for the baking of one loaf (see note below). Cartons of five packages will be available at $4.70 from the Scientific Development Committee, Room 14, Medical Building, University of Toronto, Toronto 5, Ontario. Orders not accompanied by payment will be forwarded by postal C.O.D. in which case the postman will collect $4.70 for each carton plus 26 cents for postal C.O.D. charges.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

Grilled Veal Kidneys and Chicken Livers with Sweet-Sour Sauce; Scalloped Potatoes; Green Beans; Radishes and Cheese-Stuffed Celery Sticks; Lemon Sherbet; Covered Cookies with Coconut-Honey Filling (see Tuesday, February 19, and Tuesday, January 29th.); Tea.

SUNDAY: (Guests)

Roast Chicken with Chicken Gravy; Cranberry Sauce; Mashed Potatoes; Buttered Celery Hearts, Radishes, Carrot Curls; Glazed Cherry Pie; Coffee.

Today I made up two packages of Unimix and we tasted the results, trying to imagine we were children allergic to wheat, starved for a piece of toast or birthday cake. It was very good. It is quite a surprise to see how much a slice of this "bread" looks like angel food cake. It should too, for the ingredients contain dried egg white, in a separate envelope, which has to be soaked and then beaten stiffly before adding remaining ingredients: potato flour, skim milk powder, glycerin, sodium chloride, Brewer's yeast and tetrasodium pyrophosphate.

I need not tell you how to make this loaf for each package contains careful instructions.

On my desk before me I have all of the products that I made: 1) A standard size loaf with a golden brown crust. It may be sliced for use and remained carefully wrapped and frozen, if desired. The cost for this one package. (I must add this note: A reader in Calgary who used it was amazed. The Home Economist at Calgary General Hospital that because of their size we have regional accents. The gals in Quebec are the nation's best millinery customers, while the housewives in Saint John, New Brunswick have made the wicker shopping basket a fashion classic.

Because I wanted to give some flavor to the menus of the young allergic patients I followed a suggestion for making sweet goods. I decreased the amount of sugar to ½ cup (the recipe for the "loaf" calls for 3/5 teaspoons) and made the "loaf" up otherwise as directed. Then I divided it in half. To half I added ½ teaspoon cinnamon and baked it in a half-size loaf pan. So I have a 2) cinnamon-flavored sponge cake and it is good. 3) Half of remaining batter I tinted pink and to it added ¼ cup raisins for a "birthday cake." The batter supports raisins admirably. 4) Remaining half of batter I made into currant muffins baked in buttered paper cups (fine!) and 5) macaroon-type cookies sprinkled with green sugar.

For wheat-allergic patients these are a tremendous boon. Those who are cooking for them should clip now the paragraph above giving address from which Unimix may be obtained.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: A former schoolmate has asked me to be her bridesmaid at her wedding, which will be in early Spring. Before I accept, I'd like to know what expenses will be involved, since I am self-supporting and can't get too deeply involved financially. She lives in a city that's a day's train ride from here, so I suppose the plan on staying over two nights at least. I'd appreciate your giving me some idea of what my financial obligations would be. — K.H., Trenton, N.J.

Answer: One of your main expenses would be your wedding attire. The bride makes the final selection, but the bridesmaids pay for their own gowns and accessories, exclusive of bouquets which the bride or groom pays for, depending on the custom in the bride's locality.

Since you live such a distance from the bride's home, travel would be an added expense. You would have to travel in at least once for a fitting and pay your own freight. Possibly the bride or a friend or relative could put you overnight. Otherwise, there's a reception you might have to pay a hotel bill in addition, unless the bride's parents offer to take care of this expense.

When you attend the wedding, again you'll have to pay your own traveling expenses both can't get too deeply involved financially. # End of 25th Parliament Leaves 40 of 61 Pieces Of Legislation Unpassed

OTTAWA (CP) — Dissolution Wednesday caught the 25th Parliament with most of its work incomplete.

In the 72 sitting days since the session began Sept. 27 the government placed 61 items of legislation on the Commons order paper. Only 21 received royal assent after Commons and Senate approval. The rest died with Parliament's end.

Some major items got through, among them the creation of the Atlantic Development Board, amendments boosting the lending powers of the Export Credits Insurance Corporation and the Farm Credit Act, a tightening of food and drug laws.

Killed off at various stages in the legislative mill were measures to set a retirement age of 75 for senators, amend the North North America Act to allow contributory old age pensions, set up a national economic advisory board and establish a commission to revise electoral riding boundaries.

RULES FINALLY

One feature of the 25th Parliament was the firm rule by Speaker Marcel Lambert, the bilingual lawyer from Edmonton who was elected unanimously by the House on the opening day of the session.

Speaker Lambert moved at once to tighten up the question period which opens each day's sitting, forcing MPs to adhere strictly to the rule of supplementation that oral questions must deal with matters of urgency.

Two items occupied 23 of the 72 sitting days.

Resolutions left over from the federal budget of last April took 14 days to pass. They had been handled by the previous Parliament before it was dissolved for the general election of last June.

The traditional debate on the speech from the throne, the address by the Governor-General which announces government plans for the session, occupied all eight days provided by the rules.

Some items announced in the throne speech, which is written by the cabinet, never did get introduced.

Chief among them were proposals to enact some recommendations of the MacPherson royal commission on railway transportation, revise the Unemployment Insurance Act in light of a special inquiry, provide for the amendment in Canada of the Canadian constitution and abolish the debate-limiting closure rule.

De Gaulle Felt Nassau Deal Double-Cross

PARIS (Reuters) — President de Gaulle is reported to have said that British acceptance of the Polaris missile from the United States precipitated his Jan. 14 press conference in which he cold-shouldered Britain's bid to enter the European Common Market.

Agence France - Presse said de Gaulle told legislators Tuesday night at a reception in the Elysee Palace that in his December meeting with Prime Minister Macmillan the British leader told him:

"You are right to make a nuclear strike force. We ourselves are trying to make our own. We should try to associate them within the European Framework, independently of America."

The legislators quoted de Gaulle as adding: "Thereupon he leaves me to go to The Bahamas (for the Nassau meeting with President Kennedy at which the Polaris agreement was signed).

CHANGED TONE

"That brought forward my press conference a little and changed its tone," de Gaulle said.

At the press conference, de Gaulle rejected an American offer of Polaris missiles to France on similar terms to Britain and said he did not consider Britain ready to join the Market.

De Gaulle said the U.S. was trying to increase exports to Europe because it "can no longer sell anything or else they are selling for practically nothing—to the Africans, the South Americans, even the Arabs."

The U.S. was "forced to try to sell to Europe which is in a position to pay."

"Using the United Kingdom," he said, "America is trying to set up a huge free trade affair using Ireland and Iceland, etc."

Aussies Expel Red Diplomat For Espionage

CANBERRA (Reuters) — The Soviet embassy's first secretary, Ivan Fedorovich Skripov, today was ordered to leave Australia for engaging in what a government statement described as "elaborate preparations for espionage."

External Affairs Minister Sir Garfield Barwick said in a statement that he has informed Soviet Charge d'Affaires Pavel Safonov Skripov is "persona non grata" with the Australian government and will have to leave with seven days.

Barfield said Skripov had used a woman secret agent, who was actually working for the government, to deliver packages and containers from hiding places in Sydney to Canberra.

Once the agent was sent to a particular grave in a cemetary to pick up a bag containing a Canadian passport.

Barwick said events leading to the espionage began with a meeting in March, 1961, between Skripov and the woman agent who was a member of the Australian security intelligence organization.

PAYS HER MONEY

Barwick said Skripov, the first accredited diplomat to arrive in Australia when Russia reopened diplomatic relations in 1959, had sought the woman's assistance and paid her money.

Barwick said the pair held a number of meetings in public places such as streets and restaurants. These all were under the observation of security agents.

During the meetings, he said, Skripov had tried to persuade the woman to apply for work in the defence mission in Australia or in a government department.

Some of the meetings were were set by invisible writing on the back of apparently innocent letters.

When Skripov asked the woman to collect a parcel for him, Barwick said, security agents found it contained a high-speed radio message sender of the type found in the home of Peter and Helen Kroger, who were sentenced to 20-year jail terms in Britain in 1961 for spying for Russia.

Lord Taylor Says Moscow Wives Bored

LONDON (Reuters) — A British peer told in the House of Lords Wednesday night how he was awakened in a Moscow hotel by a strange woman on the telephone.

She said: "Goodnight, goodnight, goodnight."

Lord Taylor said he replied: "This is Lord Taylor speaking. What is it you want?"

The voice at the other end asked "are you asleep, darling?"

Lord Taylor said: "Of course I'm not asleep. You just woke me up."

The woman giggled and hung up.

Lord Taylor said the incident happened while he was in Moscow on a World Health Organization tour and he recounted the conversation to his colleagues the next morning.

They told him they also had been called up in a similar manner and that some had tried to make assignations but the girl did not turn up, Lord Taylor said.

"We have reached the conclusion that Russian wives in Moscow, ordinary respectable wives, are bored stiff. There is nothing whatever to do in Moscow of an evening."

Shipowners

companies have abdicated their rights to hire, fire, transfer, promote and demote their employees, leaving them to the SIU under its hiring hall system and its iron-bound shipping rules.

"That system results in no real relationship between the employer and the employee because in effect the union is giving him a job, you ar not hiring him" said Charles Dublin, lawyer for the federal inquiry. "Is that right?"

"That is correct," said Captain Misener.

Mr. Peterson, 42, whose family firm in Fort William operates 28 ships with some 700 employees, also agreed that the old company-employee relationship had disappeared. He said the loyalties between employer and employee no longer existed.

He agreed with Mr. Dublin that the fear of wildcat walkouts had frightened shipowners, making them fearful of talking against the SIU. This, he admitted, was an "alarming state of affairs."

Captain Misener contended that little in the SIU-shipowners agreement favored the companies.

"This we have pointed out to the department of labor four or five times," he said.

DO OWN BARGAINING?

Dublin: "Do you think that the government should do your bargaining for you:

Misener: "No, but I think they should have an interest in what is going on."

Dublin: "Here is a company that has got the right to hire and you abdicate that right to the union?"

Misener: "Yes."

Dublin: "And you have the right to promote, and you abdicate that?"

Misener: Yes."

Dublin: "And to transfer, you have abdicated that?"

Misener: "That is right because we know what the results are if you do it."

Dublin: "You get a walk-off?"

Misener: "That is right."

Captain Misener said his firm had never tried to prosecute the SIU or lay a grievance before

Must Remain Till Work Done Bishops Told

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John has told the bishops of the Roman Catholic Church they must remain in Rome for the next session of the Vatican Ecumenical Council until they complete their work.

In a papal letter published today, the Pope also exhorted the prelates to push the council a means of achieving progress toward ultimate Christian unity.

The letter re-emphasized the Pope's determination to bring the council, which opened in Rome last Oct. 11, to a positive conclusion.

The Pope in his letter made clear that he does not regard the council as a strictly Roman Catholic assembly.

"The council," he said, "... concerns directly the men bers of our church . . . but if we occupy ourselves only with Catholics and our action is limited to the Catholic Church, . . . it would not seem to respond sufficiently to the words of the Divine Redeemer."

Conservatives planned to discuss election strategy at a caucus scheduled for today. There was no clear picture available of the party's or Mr. Diefenbaker's campaign plans. Organizational experts were scheduled to meet during the week end.

Three basic themes are expected to run through the campaign issues as they develop:

1. The performance of the government and of the opposition in the 25th Parliament elected June 18.

2. The national and international future of Canada, including whether the country should move to the political right or left, or into closer alliances with other nations.

3. The unsettled question of whether Canada should equip its armed forces with nuclear weapons, and under what conditions.

U.S. DISPUTE HOVERS

Hovering in the background will be the current dispute between the Diefenbaker govern-arbitration for violation of its contract.

"It takes time and it takes money and you have to take the crews off the ships to bring them up as evidence—and it is just not practical.

He told Mr. Justice Norris that a company can only go so far in fighting the SIU—then its money runs out.

"We can't afford to do that."

Mr. Dublin said that the rights of individual seamen had been completely overlooked in the battle between the companies and the SIU.

"You sit down with the union and you have a big company and a big union and the employees are merely a pawn to be thrown in the picture as the price of industrial peace. Isn't that the picture?"

"Yes," said Captain Misener. "That is about it. That is it. That is not what was intended to be, but that is what has happened."

The hearing continues.

requires decisive action and firm responsible leadership.

"We must make Canada respected in the world by playing our full part in the search for peace with freedom."

The opposition leader will launch his campaign Monday night with a speech to the Liberal party's national council meeting here. But there was no indication when he will begin his cross-country speaking tours.

STARTS IN FOUR WEEKS

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said he expects to begin his cross-country campaign in four weeks. Mr. Thompson will attend a party organization meeting in Regina Monday.

New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas discussed campaign strategy with the NDP caucus of MPs Wednesday and was to meet with the party's executive committee here today.

He is expected to do a number of campaign TV broadcasts before beginning his national travels toward the end of the month.

Lack of Funds Cramps Efforts Of Party

WINNIPEG (CP) — Lack of funds may prevent the New Democratic Party from nominating candidates in all 16 Manitoba constituencies in the April 8 federal election, Provincial Leader A. R. Paulley said Wednesday.

"We're broke," Mr. Paulley said. "We're still paying off bills for the last federal election and the last provincial election.

"Despite what you hear about all the money we're supposed to be getting from unions, we're in the doldrums as far as finances are concerned."

Mr. Paulley said the NDP provincial executive will meet shortly to discuss the campaign.

The Liberals, who elected only one Manitoba MP in last June's election, say they have been planning for the new campaign for some months.

The Progressive Conservatives, who held 11 Manitoba seats in the last Parliament, are expected to follow their usual pattern and leave plans for a campaign organization up to their elected members.

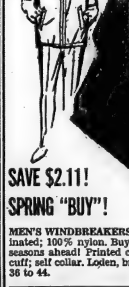
ment's recent intervention criticism in Washington over Canada's obligations to NORAD and NATO.

There is speculation that this dispute and the state department's criticism of Canada's anti-American issue in the campaign. However, there has been no definite indication of just how far any party might go in attempting to exploit such an issue.

Sanding of the Commons at dissolution was: Conservatives 117, Liberals 99, Social Credit 30, New Democrats 19. There were four vacancies in the 265-seat House.

Enumeration of an anticipated 10,000,000 voters will begin Feb. 25 and end Feb. 28.

Nomination day will be March 25, except in 12 large scattered constituencies in which it will be two weeks earlier.



Advance polling will take place March 30 and April 1.

$45,600,000 of the current year.

Mr. Allan said also that the Progressive Conservative government's program of scholarships and loans for students—totalling $4,100,000 for the current year—will be expanded and there will be a new program of post-graduate scholarships designed to provide potential staff members for universities.

In all, the forecast total of spending for education in 1963-64 was $322,000,000, an increase of $33,700,000 over this year. Projects include a new Millqual teachers' college in Sudbury, start of work in London on an Ontario College of Education for secondary school teachers and development of plans for a similar institution in eastern Ontario, likely at Kingston.

Three new "provincial institutes of trades" for training indentured apprentices and retraining unemployed are planned for London, Ottawa and Sault Ste. Marie, to be completed by September, 1964.

Provincial highway spending of all kinds will be boosted in the coming year to about $275,000,000 — up $19,500,000 — of which $192,500,000 will be for capital purposes and the remainder for maintenance. It will include $87,300,000 in road subsidies for Northern Ontario.

Combined with municipal spending, the treasurer estimated it will take a total of $362,300,000 spent on roads in the next year, an overall increase of $27,300,000 from the current year.

NOT ELECTION BUDGET

Although the budget is expected to be the last before an election, Mr. Allan at his press conference suggested it was not what could be called an "election budget."

"Not a lot of carrots in it," he observed. "We've corrected a lot of things."

As to the prospect of increased taxes later:

"I'd hope not."

In the speech, he said that many of the expenditures will "exert a number of positive effects upon our economy."

Expenditures for promoting trade and industrial development would stimulate employment and make better use of present productive capacity. The highways and roads program would improve transportation.

The "vast sums" proposed for municipal and school purposes would provide substantial benefits for local ratepayers and help provide for facilities needed in the future.

The budget, Mr. Allan said, "provides a vigorous and dynamic plan of action by which we can participate to the fullest extent of our ability in the challenging task of providing a better way of life for our people."

A business-promoting measure announced by the minister will be to have community development corporations receive support from the Ontario Development Agency where they can qualify for guaranteed loans. The government has announced that loans totalling up to $100,000,000 will be available through the agency.

TO BOOST TRADE

Mr. Allan said Ontario's "trade crusade" will remain foremost among development plans.

Dealing with aid to local authorities, Mr. Allan said that in various forms it will be $485,000,000 during the coming year, or about 90 per cent of the revenue from the retail sales tax and from corporation and income tax.

He also brought in supplementary estimates of $35,837,000 for 1962-63 which included $20,000,000 to provide advance payments to municipalities and school boards on some of their grants. Instalments on these are to be paid more frequently in the future.

Spending on health in 1963-64 will include $40,800,000 to continue stabilization of hospital insurance premiums at their present levels. This will make a total of $148,000,000 for this purpose in three years.

Expenditures for public welfare were estimated at $61,200,000, up from $58,000,000 in the current year.

Dealing with housing, the minister said the government's "rent certificate plan" being tried out in Toronto—whereby privately - owned units are leased and re-rented to low income families—is being studied with a view to extending it to other centres in the coming year. The housing program was estimated at $5,600,000.

In dealing with budget figures for 1962-63, Mr. Allan noted that his figure of a $378,000 surplus was arrived at after making provision for $62,000,000 in capital disbursements to be paid for out of current revenue, a practice the Ontario government has followed for some years to hold down the public debt.

An amount of $70,000,000 was taken from current revenue during 1962-63 for the same purpose.

In the current year, also, the minister's surplus estimate was for $374,000. The "interim" surplus figure of $30,000 given today was on the basis of nine months' actual experience and three months, estimated.

Corporation tax remained the largest revenue producer, yielding an estimated $182,000,000 for the current year and $190,000,000 for the coming year, with the retail sales tax placing second with $174,000,000 for this year and $180,000,000 estimated for the coming year.

Personal income tax is calculated to yield $151,344,000 this year and $171,376,000 in 1963-64.

Mr. Allan observed that a buoyant economy would enable the government to obtain more revenue, and he said the advances of economic expansion is one of the government's greatest challenges, which it is trying to meet.

ECONOMY IMPROVES

Last year, Ontario's gross provincial product had risen by eight per cent to almost $18,200,000,000. After eliminating price changes, the increase was almost seven per cent, the largest in any year since the capital investment boom of 1955-56.

Personal incomes were up more than eight per cent, and there were more persons employed than in any previous year in Ontario. There had been 45,000 new jobs opened up.

Total unemployment was reduced over the year by some 25,000, the largest year-to-year drop since the end of the war.

"The outlook for the future," Mr. Allan said, "is one of confidence and optimism."

Older Man Loves Girl 16

DEAR DORIS—First of all, I am 39 years old. During the last few months I have fallen in love with a neighbor's daughter. She is 16. I have been holding back on account of the difference in our ages.

I tell you, Doris, she means everything to me. She seems to be a little hesitant about going out with me, but perhaps if I asked her again she might go. Her father has been hinting I should come to see her as he would like her to have a fellow that does not drink. He said it did not make any difference if I was older than her.

DORIS CLARK

Do you think that she might become interested in me? She always seemed to be happy to see me. Do you have any suggestions on how to go about gaining her love?—IN LOVE.

DEAR IN LOVE—The odds are against it. Chances are slim that even if you could win her, you could keep up with her youthful ideas.

In any case, she cannot be asked to choose at this stage of her development. It is barely possible that if, after a few years, she finds herself drawn to an older man, that man might be you. But I'd suggest getting active in your own set.

DEAR DORIS—Last spring my doctor sent me to the cancer clinic in town, where I underwent minor surgery. The doctor who had my case is a very prominent surgeon. I never went to his office; I saw him only at the hospital.

All summer and fall I waited for his bill, but I have never received one from him. I was going to send him a card with a few words of thanks, but I have read that common people aren't supposed to send cards to professionals. Would it be ridiculous to send him a thank-you note at this late date?—GRATEFUL.

DEAR GRATEFUL—Who on earth are "common people?" Your note of gratitude will be precious to a "professional" who gave you back your health.

Could he be failed to send a bill because his secretary had no record of you in office files. Clear it up.

* * *

DEAR DORIS—Your correspondent was asking about the age of students studying drama.

We offer a children's class in drama for students aged ten to thirteen. Most of the students taking regular courses offered in the other arts divisions are fourteen or older.

Our 1962 Summer Session Calendars will be off the press shortly and may be written in for.—BANFF SCHOOL OF FINE ARTS.

DEAR BANFF—Thank you.

TO SO SHY I ALMOST DIE—I am sending you my reading list of books to conquer shyness. It can be done.

DEAR DORIS—I'm married and have a wonderfully understanding husband. But you see, Doris, my husband and I had separated because of marital problems. Well, in the meantime I met this man whom I later thought I'd fallen in love with. I made a bad mistake.

Then my husband and I became reconciled and after a couple of months I found I was pregnant. My daughter is two years old now, since she was premature as everyone thought except me. I knew differently. They don't have a thought that I was unfaithful. This is my problem.

I know I have God's forgiveness, but my conscience is what's bothering me. Should I tell my husband she isn't his? Or should I keep trying to forget it? I know this would break his heart.—MISERABLE.

* * *

DEAR MISERABLE—Bury your secret deep. Otherwise you make him bear your guilt. And remember this: Besides the fact that your husband is the legal father, a child becomes more yours and your husband's through the love you give her than through any blood relationship.

Adenauer Backs Multi-Nation Nuclear Force

CP from AP-Reuters

BONN (AP)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer has pledged that West Germany will cooperate in President Kennedy's plan for a multi-national NATO nuclear force.

"Europe knows that it cannot defend itself without the support of the United States," West Germany's 87-year-old government chief told the Bundestag in a statement outlining the policy of his new coalition government.

The Americans know that the United States can remain permanently free only if Europe also retains its freedom.

"I therefore declare with all emphasis that to us there can never be anything but close cooperation between free Europe and the United States."

Youth Seeks Aid to Start Young PC Body

A 19-year-old Belleville youth had an unexpected welcome into the political spotlight last night. He shared it with a veteran politician and provincial cabinet minister.

Robert Howell is intent on starting a branch of the Young Progressive Conservatives in Belleville. To that end he attended a meeting of the Belleville East Hastings P.C. Association seeking support.

Before it was over he had received a promise of support elicited from the constituency members on the promotion of its MLA Charles Rollins; being given a big hand from the adults and political celebrities and receiving congratulations from Mines Minister Wardrope.

"It won't be long before you are taking the seats we occupy now," Mr. Wardrope told the youthful politico.

"We don't want our young people come into our ranks and become accustomed to our policies and what we stand for."

Robert's maiden speech was pretty much to the point.

"We don't want your blessings but your guidance," he told the veterans.

YOUNG ORGANIZER — Young Progressive Conservative Robert Howell, (centre), gets a few pointers from veteran party campaigner Hon. C. Wardrope, Ontario Minister of Mines, and Clarke T. Rollins, MLA for East Hastings, at last night's Belleville East Hastings Association meeting. Robert hopes to start a constituency branch of Young Conservatives.

Mines Minister Reviews Province's Economic Health In Hard-Hitting Address

The threat of unemployment in the Bancroft-Stanhope area next summer is receiving the full attention of provincial authorities, Ontario Mines Minister G. Wardrope said in Belleville last night.

Speaking frankly to the Belleville East Hastings Progressive Conservative Association at the Tow Motel he noted fears that up to 400 persons may be jobless by next June as production slackens at Faraday and Bicroft mines.

"Like you, we are very disturbed about the uranium (situation)," he told the riding association.

"But experts tell us by 1966 there will be a big improvement and by 1970 our problems should be resolved."

In the meantime, the provincial government is applying itself to the situation in the Bancroft area.

"We are making every effort we possibly can to find some avenue whereby this can be corrected," said Mr. Wardrope. "We have not forgotten Bicroft and Faraday, so don't worry about that."

The last reference came in a hard-hitting speech against opposition critics as the Minister quoted statistics on the province's current economic health and re-iterated the program of social legislation planned by the Robarts administration for the present session of the Legislature.

Given prime attention at the outset of his address was the proposed medicare program which, he said, would be among legislation proposed at this session.

STUDIED MEDICARE

"We have studied medicare now for two years. We don't want to repeat the terrific mess of a million dollars squandered," he said.

"It has created terrible animosities between people (in Saskatchewan) and it will defeat the NDP government there next time."

The Robarts administration has devised a plan which "we think will suit everybody," said Mr. Wardrope, criticizing the scheme proposed by the Liberal and NDP Opposition parties.

"And it will be presented at this session . . . and you will know the facts and what it will mean to you before it is foisted on you in a dictatorial way."

Other social legislation immediately will deal with a portable pension scheme and the minimum wage issue.

Portable pensions would assist the hiring of men in age brackets which presently rule them out from participation in existing company pension plans.

"The NDP promised this in aiming at," said Mr. Wardrope. "To see that a man getting up in his later years will not be prohibited from getting a job because of a (private) pension scheme."

When this series of measures is presented to the Legislature, Mr. Wardrope stated, "they will be factual.

MORE HIGHWAY WORK

"They won't only be political promises to catch votes."

The coming year will also see continued highway expansion, which will include paving of the final stretch of Ontario's trans-Canada highway in the Kenora district, "and we hope that will be finished this fall."

"There will be another tremendous road program out this year which will give a lot of work and be beneficial for our province," he told the press in place."

He verbally laced opposition socialists with a distorted picture of the province's economy and employment situation.

"Don't let them kid you. All they are doing is talking balderdash in trying to get into power again, criticized Mr. Wardrope.

Simultaneously, he promoted the government's trade crusade for greater consumption of domestic products and reducing the export-import gap.

If each Ontario citizen diverted $100 now spent annually on imported goods it would provide an estimated 60,000 new jobs for new recruits joining the labor force.

BUY DOMESTIC GOODS

Bluntly admitting there was "no such thing as full employment" he said the diversion of purchases to domestic goods would keep unemployment at about 3-4 percent of the total labor force.

Experts, said Mr. Wardrope, figured that percentage was necessary in order to avoid an inflated economy and "bidding on workers.

However, the Minister dismissed Opposition charges of economic stagnation. He ticked off these current statistics on the state of the province:

(1) By 1962's end 2,300,000 persons were employed over the year 45,000 new jobs opened up; unemployment is averaging 4.5 percent compared to a national six percent.

(2) Production saw $500,000 motor vehicles assembled — a new record; steel ingots weighed in at 5½ million tons, also a new high; agriculture reached a record $1,250 millions.

OPPOSITION COMPARED

(3) Income rose 8.5 percent; retail sales were up 3 percent; capital investment reached $3.2 billions — the highest since 1957.

"These are important figures that you are not told about by the opposition."

"The political opposition is like Columbus," stated Mr. Wardrope. "Columbus didn't know where he was going; when he got there he didn't know where he was and when he got back he didn't know where'd he been — and it was all on somebody else's money!"

"I do not like to see people's minds in this province and in this country disturbed by statements far from factual. We haven't got time for that kind of thing from our men in public life."

As a final illustration he contrasted the functions of "wreckers and builders."

"We will never be known as wreckers in this province, whereas I cannot say the same for the Opposition we have."

20-Year Shoreline, Parks Acquisition Program Will Be Instituted by Govt.

TORONTO (CP) — Provision of an initial $5,000,000 for the first year of a 20-year shoreline and parks acquisition program highlighted the natural resources measures forecast in Ontario's 1963-64 budget presented to the legislature today.

The program, to be carried out under a new branch of the lands and forests department, involves spending an estimated $200,000,000 in the next 20 years to acquire and develop Great Lakes shoreline into parks and recreational facilities.

Total 1963-64 appropriation for parks development, including a joint federal-provincial survey of outdoor resources, is estimated at $8,300,000 compared with a parks expenditure of $4,000,000 in the current fiscal year, ending March. 31.

Combined appropriations for the agriculture, lands and forests and mines departments for the coming fiscal year were estimated by Treasurer Allan at $69,500,000 for ordinary and capital expenditures.

Agricultural programs will require an estimated $18,853,000, an increase of $1,600,000 from the current fiscal year, Provincial Treasurer James Allan said in presenting his budget.

The mines department forecasts $7,000,000 in revenue out of $240,000 from estimated 1962-63 expenditures.

The lands and forests department will spend an estimated $38,400,000 in the next fiscal year, up $6,900,000 from the current year's total.

Among measures included in the province's agricultural program this year are the creation of an Ontario Food Council representing producers, processors and consumers; application of the recently-passed Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act and re-timing of the scope of the Junior Farmer Establishment Loans Act.

Mining advances planned include enlargement of the department's geological branch staff to speed mapping and improve other services, research into iron ore smelting using natural gas and development of improved methods of ore concentration.

The budget speech said the lands and forests department provided 44,200,000 tree seedlings in the last year for planting on Crown and private land, exclusive of timber and department-timber company projects.

In 1962, the province's junior forest ranger program trained 680 boys in 54 camps throughout Northern Ontario. Five new provincial parks, totalling 11,833 acres, were opened last year and 15 others total 1,000 acres of parks in use to 3,500,000 acres.

The number of visitors to Ontario's 102 parks, up to 7,800,000, was 26 per cent higher than the previous year and the parks organization executive resented a 22-per-cent rise.

Three Mental Hospitals Planned for North Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's gross expenditure on health services in 1963-64 will be $137,471,000, Provincial Treasurer James Allan forecast in his annual budget speech today.

The figure is $12,500,000 less than the interim statement of expenditure for the current fiscal year, ending March 31.

Mr. Allan said the decrease did not mean a drop in spending for actual health services, which had been increased by about $6,000,000 between the current fiscal year and the 1963-64 forecast.

The drop was due to a surplus in the stabilization grants made to the Ontario Hospital Services Commission in the last two years, he said. Overbudgeting for the grants—which were to be $38,500,000 a year in the three years 1961-64 — left the province with only an estimated $7,300,000 surplus for 1963-64.

The budget speech said the health expenditure would include $58,000,000 for mental health purposes, an increase of $4,900,000 from the total for the current fiscal year.

Supplementary estimates for 1962-63 included $200,000 for the Ontario Mental Health Foundation, set up by the NDP administration session to promote research on the care and treatment of mental illness.

PLAN 3 HOSPITALS

Two new mental hospitals have been built in the last year, at Goderich and Owen Sound, and three others are planned for Northern Ontario, Mr. Allan said.

The new hospitals—at Timmins, Sault Ste. Marie and Sudbury—will serve an area where Ontario hospital at North Bay to be used for children.

At least one of the three new hospitals is expected to be a community psychiatric hospital on a plan similar to one worked out with the Royal Ottawa Sanatorium, which uses some of the surplus bed space for mental patients, he said.

Supplementary 1962-63 estimates, the provincial treasurer said, would include $3,400,000 to be paid to the province's federal government and other capital projects. A $2,500,000 federal grant would be made to all qualified public hospitals.

The welfare expenditure for 1963-64 are estimated at $61,800,000, compared with $58,000,000 for the current year.

Welfare progress in the last year included increases to $65 a month in old age assistance and blind and disabled persons' allowances, and grants to charitable organizations for building four new homes for the aged.

Trade Crusade Program Will Be Accelerated

TORONTO (CP) — A small-business management training program, a products and tech niques show and several conferences on standardization of manufactured parts will be initiated this year as part of the Ontario government's industrial development program.

The measures, promised in Provincial Treasurer James Allan's budget speech today, are further steps in the province's 20-point program launched last April with the establishment of the Ontario Economic Council.

The budget speech also said:

The trade crusade program would be accelerated, particularly at the consumer level.

Loans to qualifying industries would be guaranteed under the recently-created Ontario Development Agency.

Legislation would be introduced to encourage creation of community development corporations to assist local or regional development.

In addition to the industry-labor conferences "to encourage standardization of parts" used by manufacturers in Ontario," Mr. Allan said, the province would sponsor a conference on "automation and social change."

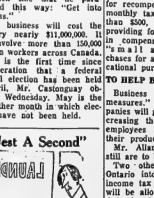
A small-business training program, to be introduced by the economics and development department in conjunction with the education department and the federal trade and commerce department, would offer a series of courses on basic business operations to all of the business owners and managers beginning September, 1963.

Chief Electoral Officer Ready For Election

OTTAWA (CP)—As always, Nelson Castonguay was ready.

The chief electoral officer had kept the election machinery in motion for months before Wednesday's announcement that the April 8 date by Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

As long ago as last fall he had shipped 150 tons of supplies for the enumeration that now will start Monday, Feb. 18.



Another 350 tons are ready to go. This includes 40 tons of ballot papers alone, scattered in thousands of pencils and even blotters and pocket combs. The latter for dropping supplies to remote polls in Labrador, up the Saguenay, and in the far north.

Wednesday's official announcement was the signal the chief chief unperturbed and ready to plunge into his fifth election since he succeeded his father in the $17,000-a-year post in 1949.

He immediately sent telegrams to returning officers informing them of all the important dates, and concluding with a punch line that he parodied this way: "Get into business."

That business will cost the treasury nearly $11,000,000. It will involve more than 150,000 election workers across Canada.

This is the first time since Confederation that a federal general election has been held in April, Mr. Castonguay observed Wednesday. May is the only other month in which elections have not been held.

"I wish to complain about the amount of starch you've been putting in my collars!"

Boyd Warned To Stop Seeing Girl Aged 16

TORONTO (CP)—A forbidden friendship with a 16-year-old girl contributed to the return of Edwin Alonzo Boyd to prison, Flavelle Jive five RCMP officers, Boyd was taken to court Wednesday to be sentenced again to Kingston penitentiary to serve out a life sentence.

The 48-year-old former bank robber and escape artist was arrested Tuesday night and charged with criminal breach of his parole conditions.

Parole board officials said Boyd was warned several times to stop associating with the teen-aged girl, who is reported to have left Toronto recently to live in a room in the same district as Boyd.

Freed from the penitentiary after serving 10 years of his sentence for a series of bank robberies and two escapes from Toronto's Don Jail, Boyd was picked up after little more than five months of his parole.

WILL STAY IN JAIL

Parole board officials say he will remain in Don Jail until arrangements have been made for transporting him to Kingston.

A parole official said Boyd's recent conduct led him to wonder whether Boyd was not doing everything possible to get himself sent back to Kingston Boyd, 44, used frequently without notifying parole officials of his new address, stayed out overnight on school attending, and began to get into debt.

A statement from the National Parole Board in Ottawa Wednesday said Boyd showed a "complete change of attitude from when he was in custody." Kingston officials said at the time of his parole that Boyd had shown evidence of reform while in prison.

Govt. To Spend $275,000,000 On Roads This Year

Will Eliminate Limited Load Capacity Bridges

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario government spending on highways will total $275,000,000 in the 1963-64 fiscal year, Provincial Treasurer Allan announced today in his budget speech. It is an increase of $19,500,000 over the current year.

Of the total, $82,500,000 will be for maintenance and $192,500,000 for capital purposes. Included are road subsidies of $27,200,000 for municipalities and unincorporated townships in Northern Ontario.

The treasurer said the amount will provide for a combined provincial and municipal program for the year of $362,000,000, an increase of $27,200,000 over the combined total for the current year that ends March 31.

Construction of sections of Highway 401 will be accelerated, the minister said, in order to provide a freeway from Windsor to the Quebec border completed by the end of 1963.

There will be additional work on Highway 403 in Hamilton and a start on the Brantford bypass, with the first section for operation of the latter expected to be open to traffic by the end of 1963 from the Highway 24 interchange westerly to Longwood Road.

Work will be continued as scheduled on the Trans-Canada Highway, the Ottawa Queensway, a controlled-access route to the Toronto International Airport, Highway 11 between Fort Frances and Atikokan and Highway 101 from Chapleau to Wawa.

A "crash program" to eliminate limited load capacity bridges will be continued.

Municipal Aid To Be Increased On All Levels

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial assistance to local government in Ontario will reach an estimated $486,000,000 in the coming fiscal year.

This measures with $459,000,000, including $34,400,000 in supplementary estimates, during the fiscal year which ends March 31, Provincial Treasurer James Allan said today in his annual budget speech.

He said the 1963-64 forecast for municipal aid from the province represented 90 per cent of expected revenue from the retail sales tax and corporation and personal income taxes.

"In other words, the province is turning over for local purposes about 47 per cent of its pure, with the remainder as compared with 19 per cent in 1943-47," Mr. Allan said.

In addition he said in "the fundamentally important fields of education, roads, health and welfare," he said, the province contributes to special municipal needs through other grants and payments.

Payments under the Unconditional Municipal Grant Act are expected to rise to $26,900,000 in 1963-64, and an appropriation of $2,800,000 would be required in the next fiscal year for the municipal winter works program.

Ontario Treasurer Indicates Sales Tax Is Here to Stay

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer James Allan indicated in his budget speech to the legislature today that the three-per-cent retail sales tax is here to stay.

Noting that the tax is expected to yield $180,000,000 in 1963-64 and that education expenditures have gone up $161,000,000 in three years, he added:

"It is . . . clear that the trend in our expenditure pattern will continue to emphasize the need of the retail sales tax and the base being made of the revenue from it.

"Indeed . . . I suggest that we should offer it this tax as an educational tax."

Mr. Allan made only minor changes in the tax, the first one being to boost the exemption on a single transaction to $20 from $10. With the increase the treasury less than $500,000.

He also changed the system for recomputing vendors' monthly tax collections of less than $500, simplifying it and providing for a slight increase in compensation. Also, some "small businesses" will be exempt chases for agricultural and educational purposes are removed.

TO HELP BUSINESS

Business got other incentive measures. Manufacturing companies will get tax credit for increasing the number of their employees and for expanding their production facilities.

Mr. Allan said more details still are to be worked out.

Two other measures bring Ontario into line with federal income tax law. A corporation will be allowed as an expense deduction from taxable income 150 per cent of increased expenditure on scientific research, instead of 100 as at present.

Deductions are extended for development expenses of companies engaged in producing, refining or marketing petroleum and natural gas and in mining and exploring for minerals.

The rate of tax on logging income will be increased to 10 per cent from nine but companies concerned will be granted a new tax credit of one-third of the tax.

The Succession Duty Act will be changed so that widows receiving an estate will receive a clear exemption of $60,000. When an estate is over $60,000 but under $100,000 it is taxed, and the net could drop below $60,000. A similar clear exemption of $20,000 for $10,000 for each dependent child. The change could cost the treasury an estimated $2,000,000 a year.

Another provision will raise from $5,000 to $10,000 the exemption on bequests to persons not in the collateral line. Also, the $10,000 bequest received after payment of the tax will be not less that the amount of the succession duty one - half the amount above it.

Legislation will be introduced to permit an alternative date to be chosen by executors of an estate for valuation of listed securities, instead of the present method of confining this to the date of death. The alternative date has not been decided on, but Mr. Allan said the consideration would be not more than six months after death.

October Hinted As Date for Ont. Election

A cautious, though possible pointer to the date of the next provincial election was given out in Belleville last night.

Ontario Mines Minister Wardrope vouched to Ontario Intelligencer reporter the earlier reaction of Premier Robarts to the question of a national election was called.

The Premier said in Toronto he had a program of legislation and he intended carrying it out.

This, the Mines Minister repeated in Belleville.

Pressed on the possibility of a summer provincial election, Mr. Wardrope replied:

"It might not be until October."

You might hear such melodies as "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginay," "I Wanna Go Back to That Lil Ole Shack," "The Cabin in The Woods" and so forth on one of Willie Mays' pearl-inlaid "hi-fi's"—but that is as far as it goes.

The "Say-Hey" kid has "bucket-catched" himself into one of the highest salaries ever paid a major league baseball player, and Willie is spending-it—on Willie.

The Cholly Knickerbocker, motion-picture and television slick magazines are full of such stories. And the hoi-polloi reads them, glances at the pictures, heaves sighs of envy and turns the pages to the gossip columns.

But when a major league star such as Willie Mays joins the golden cocoon set—man—that's a manbites-dog item.

Babe Ruth in the heyday of his $80,000 a year salary when Uncle Sam's tax collectors merely nibbled—the bite came later—spent his money like the proverbial old salt on a post-voyage binge. But not in surroundings that would equal those of a 17th century Persian prince.

On one occasion the Babe collected some $12,000 in cash after a barnstorming tour—and promptly lost it. He dropped it somewhere along the line. The Bambino leaned back his head and laughed when he realized the lettuce had disappeared. "So what," he guffawed, "it's only money."

But not Willie Mays. Willie gathers the salary loot and invests it, as I said before—on Willie.

The Giants' star, a story from the west coast says, has just moved into a humble gold-plated shack that set him back $100,000. It seems $20,000 basic salary and lives alone in the mansion he has furnished himself.

When a telephone rings, Willie doesn't have to walk very far. He has installed no less than five. He has four television sets and deep pile carpeting in gold that cost him $25 a square foot.

Mays didn't spare the punches nor the long green when he took over as his own interior decorator. From the well-appointed living room he can see the colorful panorama of the Bay, including the Golden Gate Bridge. When he gets tired of "looking" he draws $3,000 drapes.

From the white-and-gold living room Mays walks down a circular staircase to the attached garage which houses the new lime-green Cadillac convertible. His monogram appears in Old English on his china, linen, crystal and the glass doors of the showers in his three bathrooms.

Incidentally, the taps in all showers are gold-plated.

Willie never drinks, doesn't read much and seldom plays pool. Yet he has a billiard room, a well-stocked library and a bar that is productive of anything from champagne to aqua pura.

Why does Willie want nine rooms, not including the bathrooms? The story has it Willie now has something he always wanted despite the fact he lives alone and seldom entertains. Besides it is nice to have the proper surroundings when some of the gang drops in for a game of cribbage or gin rummy.

What Willie has not attained is a Jayne Mansfield heart-shaped bathtub, nor a Jerry Lewis closed-circuit TV outlet in every room so when the doorbell rings he can push a button and see who's standing there.

Nor does he have, like a certain TV star, a refrigerator in the wall of every room to keep his martinis cold. Nor that certain comedian's upside-down room with tables and chesterfield bolted to the ceiling where the "boys" are put during the sobering-up period.

Gump Bump Gives Rangers Life ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Blues Thump Habs; Hawks, Wings Tie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pitty Poor Gump Worsley. For the last few weeks opposing National Hockey League players have been shooting at him as though he were the bad guy in a grade B western movie.

So Wednesday night he had a comparatively easy time—only 36 shots as New York Rangers dumped Montreal Canadiens 6-3—and what happened?

He cracked his head on the crossbar of his goal cage, requiring seven stitches to repair the damage.

For Montreal, who blew another chance to move into solo possession of second place, it might have been better if Worsley hadn't been hurt.

The Canadiens were leading 3-1 when Gump had to leave to be sewn up midway through the first period, but the Rangers, apparently inspired by the sight of their counting being somebloood for them, scrambled back with five unanswered goals and the victory.

HAWKS STRETCH LEAD

In the league's only other action, Chi ago Black Hawks stretched their first - place lead to five points by holding Detroit Red Wings to a 3-3 tie.

Detroit rookie Lowell MacDonald gave his club the tie, scoring his 15th goal with only one minute and nine seconds left to play.

The tight action left Chicago in first place with 63 points, Montreal and Toronto Maple Leafs tied for second with 58, Detroit fourth and 54, New York fifth with 39 and Boston Bruins last with 32.

The Rangers got a big helping hand from centre Don McKenney, acquired from Boston earlier this week in a trade for Dean Prentice.

McKenney deflected a shot by Andy Bathgate past Cesare Maniago, Montreal goalie for Bathgate's injured Jacques Plante, for what proved to be the winning goal at 8:03 of the second period. Then he set up Bathgate for New York's fifth marker early in the third period.

Andy Hebenton scored twice for New York, getting the first and last scores. Dave Balon and defencemen Harry Howell scored the other Rangers goals.

LOOKED IN CONTROL

Montreal appeared to have the game in control in the first period, despite Hebenton's opening goal.

The Canadiens roared back with Boom Boom Geoffrion and Billy Hicke scoring within a 20-second span and Claude Provost making it 3-1 before the game was 11 minutes old.

It was on Provost's goal that Worsley was hurt. He went tumbling as Ranger defencemen Jim Neilson and Montreal centre Henri Richard crashed into him.

The Rangers protested the goal on grounds that Richard was inside the crease but referee Frank Udvari ignored the outcry.

The game was delayed for 19 minutes while the trainer patched Worsley. He kicked out 18 shots in the third period.

The loss cost Montreal more than a couple of points. Tom Johnson, their stalwart defence veteran, was forced to leave the ice after aggravating an old groin injury.

HOWE SCORES 26TH

In the Detroit-Chicago game, Gordie Howe opened the scoring, punching in his 26th goal of the season on passes from Alex Delvecchio and Parker MacDonald. On the Red Wings' second goal, Parker MacDonald deflected Howe's drive by Lowe.

Kenny Wharram scored twice for Chicago, with Chico Maki getting the other.

Wharram tied it 1-1 after Howe's first - period goal and Maki's score gave Chicago a 2-1 lead that lasted until early in the third period.

Wharram's second goal, at 11:20 of the third period, looked as though it could stand up, with goalie Glenn Hall playing another outstanding game in the Chicago net. But Lowell MacDonald picked up a loose puck in the corner and scooped it behind Hall.

Only one game is scheduled tonight, Boston at Detroit.

Kitchener-Waterloo exchanged playing dates last week because of a player shortage and when the Tigers finally got to Windsor Wednesday night they had only three regular players with them.

Curlers Swap 'Code' For' Rules'

MONTREAL (CP)—Rules of eligibility scheduled to be presented at the annual meeting of the Dominion Curling Association at Brandon, Man., next month would prohibit money prizes of more than $150 a player, or $600 a rink, it was disclosed Wednesday.

The rules are those approved last Aug. 13 by the Canadian branch of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club, representing clubs in eastern Ontario and Quebec as far east as Quebec City. Headquarters of the Canadian branch said the rules now are in effect in its jurisdiction.

The Dominion Curling Association, representing clubs in all parts of Canada, had originally proposed a 'code of ethics' of its own, but has found the branch's rules of eligibility recorded more suitably.

The change was disclosed in Toronto by Colin A. Campbell of Toronto, a past president of the DCA, who has withdrawn a notice of motion for a code of ethics.

If approved, the rules would become effective in the DCA Aug. 1.

In addition to the cash prize limit for curlers in competitions sanctioned by the DCA, the rules also would prohibit prizes in the form of merchandise readily convertible into money and having a retail value in excess of $150 a person or $600 a rink.

The rules would prohibit a player from receiving directly or indirectly compensation for giving instruction by any means whether demonstrations, lectures, newspaper articles or other means. One exception would be players regularly employed in journalism or broadcasting.

The rules also would prohibit a player from accepting travelling and other expenses to play in competitions, except for regularly sanctioned championship tournaments, international tours and the like.

Skiing, skating and community centre facilities will be used to full-capacity as members of the organization will gather from many points in Ontario, Quebec and U.S.A.

Competition in all classes of skiing, with exception of jumping, will take place and two mechanical tows will be in operation. Members of the Batawa Ski Club will be eligible for entry and various classes will be posted early on the first day. Cross country ski races will be an added feature for members who are expected from Toronto, Montreal, Kingston, Hamilton, Chatham, and other places.

The Sokol Gymnastic Association of Canada are regular participants in summertime gymnastic meets that are held in such places as Chicago and Cleveland onbe each year under sponsorship of the American Sokol Association. At this annual field day thousands of gymnastic experts from all the major cities of United States and Canada gather.

Various divisions of the Sokol Organizations also have their winter games and competitions.

Expert skiers will attend in large numbers and many more will attend as spectators. While it is strictly a Sokol Winter Sports meet, Batawa skiers will participate and all facilities, including the skating rink and Community Centre will be made available to the visitors. A giant Winter Carnival Dance will be a Saturday evening feature of the event and the general public will be invited to this.

City Hockey League

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Reporter

The tail-end Joyce-Rollins Combines served definite notice that they will be a force to be reckoned with in the City Hockey League playoffs when they upset the first place Pepsi's 4-1 last night.

The victory was the second in a row for the Combines and, combined with Trudeaus' unexpected 6-4 win over Welbanks Motors, prevented the Pepsi's from sewing up the loop top spot.

Two more Wednesday night double-headers will complete the regular schedule. Playoffs will commence on Wednesday, February 27th with the club that finishes in first place having its choice of semi-final opponents.

JOYCE-ROLLINS 4 PEPSI's 1

TRUDEAUS 6 - WELBANKS 6

The Combines scored three goals in a matter of four minutes and 30 seconds early in the third period to grab the win against the powerful Pepsi's crew. Each club scored once in the opening heat and they battled hard through a scoreless middle twenty minutes.

Larry Mavety scored what proved to be the winning goal at the 30 second mark of the third, with two of the Pepsi's in the sin-bin, finishing out second assessment sentences. Mavety's winner came on a blueline slapshot, Ted Rowland assisting.

Bob Taylor snapped home Ron Hull's quick passout while perched on Carr's doorstep at 2.55 and 11 giant Pepsi fans a pass out in front of the net which deflected in off Carr for the final 4-1 score at five minutes even.

Back in the first period, Duke Doran gave Joyce-Rollins a 1-0 lead, finishing off a play with Bryant, at 6.00 which Chuck Rowbotham deflected Jack Hughes' shot home to tie it at 14.16.

The winners got a fine game in the nets from young Bobby Moon, a midget goalie who could be the answer to the clubs trouble spot. The youngster booted out everything tossed at him by the Pepsi's except the deflected shot.

Referees Williams and Hurst ruled with an iron hand, dishing out 16 penalties, nine to the winners. The Pepsi's failed to score when they had a two-man advantage for two minutes in the middle heat.

Pepsi's, who started the game with only 11 players, lost Doug Murray at 2.38 of the first period. He was tagged for roughing with Bob Taylor, had a misconduct tacked on for arguing and a game misconduct for shooting the puck at referee Bill Hurst.

Joyce-Rollins: B. Moon, Mavety, Taylor, Bryant, Sheridan, Elliott, D. Hull, Boomhower, Pukancik, R. Hull, Rowland, Reeves, Sutherford, Doran.

Pepsi's: Carr, Brooks, Murray, Trendell, McGuire, Baker, J. Hughes, Waite, Marsele, Rowbotham, Moreau.

PLANS COMEBACK

MONTREAL (CP) — Yvon Durelle, the fighting fisherman from Baie Ste. Anne, N.B., has decided to make a ring comeback.

He announced Tuesday night he has signed a contract to fight here Feb. 25 against either Cecil Cyr or Phonse Lasage in a preliminary bout.

The main event will have Canadian lightweight champion Bob Cleroux of Montreal fight Garvin, Sawyer.

Durelle has not been in the ring since Sept. 15, 1960, when he was defeated by Paul Wright, said he is planning to campaign for a challenge to Cleroux' crown.

All Sights On Eskimo Quarter

EDMONTON (CP)—Open season has been declared on Jackie Parker and owners of every Canadian football league with the exception of Edmonton Eskimos will likely join the hunt.

The rules are simple:

No lethal weapons are needed to bag this one—only wide-open wallets and suitable material for a trade.

Club owners will fire dollar signs and trade bait in the direction of Edmonton, where Parker, 31, has been Mr. Everything for the Eskimos since joining them in 1954.

The fellows with the best chance for a clean shot at the versatile backfielder are Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference a team with which Mr. Parker would like to associate.

Parker stunned Edmonton football public Wednesday when he announced he'd like to put him on the trading block.

SHLW INTERREST

Most Canadian clubs showed immediate interest in obtaining Parker after Red McMahon, Eskimos president, said Parker will be traded or sold.

Parker feels playing elsewhere in Canada would provide better opportunities in the future. He said that while Eskimos are willing to meet his salary demands, he also is in-terested in a firm assurance of a head coaching job.

The Mississippi State graduate has been with Parker, who has scored more points in professional league play than any other player in Canadian football history.

The Argos are without an experienced professional quarterback. Lew Hayman, managing director of Argos, said his club is interested in Parker.

ALS SHOW INTEREST

Said Ted Workman, owner of Montreal Alouettes: "We won't give up half a team or jump into skyrockets to get him."

But, he added, "We'd think it over."

Workman feels the Eskimos have handled the situation well. "They've said that here he is, now you fight over him."

Red O'Quinn, general manager of Ottawa Rough Riders, said Ottawa's interest "would depend on the going rate for Parker's services." He said, though, that head coach Frank Clair would have to be consulted and Clair wasn't available.

Jake Gaudaur, president of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, said: "As a football player, my football club will be interested in Parker." Manager Jim Ausley of the Grey Cup champion Winnipeg Blue Bombers said although the same thing.

In Calgary, Stampeder manager Jim Finks was less reserved.

"We'd love to have Parker. He's a great player and I know he could play for us."

In Vancouver, Herb Capozzi, the Lions general manager, said his club also is interested in obtaining Parker, but as a starter or halfback rather than as a quarterback. The Lions have an established young quarterback in Joe Kapp. Capozzi said he is interested in a cash deal for Parker.

The Edmonton salary runs upwards of $20,000 a season, was a member of Canada's outstanding football players a record three times and was runner-up on another three occasions. He was voted the West's most valuable player three times and made eight consecutive all-star teams until 1962.

His totals total of 676 and 79 touchdowns are Canadian records.

Reds' Robinson Flips For $60,000

Money Magic Mind-Changer

NEW YORK (AP)—Like Popeye, Frank Robinson thrives on the power of positive thinking, a peculiar salve the magic ingredient is spinach, for the muscular baseball player it boils down to cabbage.

Robinson is loaded down with cabbage—$60,000 that makes a bank account and a 1956 sale by the Cincinnati Reds for an estimated $60,000.

If the guess on Robinson's salary figure is correct, he's the highest paid player, who has scored more points in professional league play than any other player in Canadian football history.

The Argos are without an experienced professional quarterback. Lew Hayman, managing director of Argos, said his club is interested in Parker.

The Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Detroit's Gordie Howe took a big stride toward the top of the National Hockey League's individual points list Wednesday by collecting one goal and one assist in the Wings' 3-3 tie with Chicago for a total of 53 points and a share of third place.

Still at the top of the ladder, but with a narrowed margin, are Johnny Bucyk of Boston with 55 points and Toronto's Frank Mahovlich with 54. Both were idle Wednesday.

Howe, with 26 goals and 27 assists, now is only one goal away from Mahovlich's league-leading mark.

Sharing third place is Chicago centre Stan Mikita, who surged one assist Wednesday night. Mikita ranks behind Howe officially, since only 22 of his 53 points represent goals.

Montreal centre Jean Beliveau picked up sec assist in the Canadiens' 6-3 loss to New York to tie Murray Oliver of Boston for fifth spot with 52 points. The assist increased Beliveau's total to 40, tops in the NHL.

Seventh is Andy Bathgate of the Rangers, credited with one goal and one assist against Montreal for a total of 51 points.

KU RELIABLE BUSINESS DIRECTORY

E. H. BELL
Builder, Custom Homes, Alterations & Repairs
66 Wallbridge Road Belleville
WO 2-6170

Thursday, Feb. 7th — Clip out and use this weekly "KU" DIRECTORY and TRADE-MARK as your guide to good friends in business you unfairly accept as the "KU" CHALLENGE. To provide dependable service. To sell everything by honest pricing, definitions, name, model, serial number, free of gimmicks and fine print. To promote products protected with a signed 100% unconditional guarantee up to 5 years or less, free of fine print by the manufacturer and worthy of "KU" IDENTIFICATION. That PLEDGE — To service anything we sell on the signed 100% unconditional guarantee to forfeit their listing if proven to be unworthy of your confidence.

This "KU" DIRECTORY authorizes above listed businesses to be employed in association with "KU" TRADEMARKS for 7 days only. In Belleville, Brighton, Madoc, Prince Edward County, Stirling, Trenton and Tweed.

THRIFTY LOW WAGE EARNERS will ignore double talk of misrepresented facts with a hypnotizing effect making you a contented puppet rushing to accept the so called privileges of signing to be another unsuspecting victim that may lose everything.

EXAMPLE—Suppose you accept a new home from this ridiculous approach with OUTDATED WIRING that doubles your bills from starved power. FOOL CONSTRUCTION that often costs more than your original purchase price before you move in. Suppose you settle for a cheap imitation "KU" QUALITY CONSTRUCTURE HOME with a LIFETIME CERTIFIED "KU" LUXURY HOME ELECTRICAL INSTALLATION of THE OWNERS CHOICE requiring the REAL ESTATE BROKER to provide you with a signed 100% unconditional guarantee up to 5 or more years, automatically accepting equal responsibility with every sub-contractor, as part of your purchase agreement. That lowers electric bills and often starves your home as a builder. That results today in unrealized and unnecessary expenses and claim the highest resale value. All that adds up to more than half of today's normal cost.

BEWARE of anyone attempting to shift the blame to the inspector to cover poor construction and evade keeping their promise.

This comparison of today's misrepresented facts to mislead you and the requirements of "KU" STANDARDS should convince you why most businesses lack courage to accept the "KU" CHALLENGE.

"KU" OBJECTIVE—Since 1957 has been to find one business of every type in every city and town worthy to be listed above, that desire to be known and trusted for providing and protecting their customers with "KU" STANDARDS of a FLEDGED honest dollar value.

For information concerning "KU" identified products, Lifetime Certified "KU" Luxury Home Electrical Installation, Certified "KU" Quality Construction Home, "KU" Home Design and Recommendation Kit, "KU" Home Wiring Checking Kit, "KU" Home Wiring Planning Kit or the privilege of a listing in this directory.

Boy Wonder Of St. Louis Scores Four

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It's a pretty sure bet the old song Take Me to St. Louis will never make the goaltenders' hit parade in the Eastern Professional Hockey League.

There's a bogey-man named Alain Caron that way who is scaring the wits out of the men whose job it is to stop pucks.

Caron is making the EPHL forget its great scorers of the past with the hottest scoring streak in pro hockey.

He added four goals to his total Wednesday night as he paced his last-place St. Louis Bravés teammates to a 12-7 win over Muskegon Zephyrs of the International League in an interlocking game.

The 24-year-old wonder boy from Dolbeau, Que., has scored 36 goals in 26 games—tops in the league even though he missed 18 contests.

13 HERNIATES

Two years ago Caron sat on the bench with the EPHL's Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds then was reinstated as an amateur because they didn't feel he had the goods for pro company.

Back in amateur ranks last season, Caron jumped 76 pucks past goalies in 45 games in the Nova Scotia Senior League as a member of Amherst Ramblers.

He started with Greensboro Generals in the Eastern League this season and joined the hapless Bravés 20 games ago.

Caron has been scoring regularly since joining the team, but he broke out in a rash of goals in the last week. In two weekend games, Caron scored eight goals, added another one Tuesday night and four Wednesday night for a total of 13 in four games.

Ottawa, Hull Juniors To Expand

OTTAWA (CP)—The Ottawa-Hull Junior A Hockey League, which began operations on a shoestring two years ago, now is looking toward expansion.

The eight-club circuit, which ends its regular season schedule tonight, has already drawn the serious attention of scouts from professional clubs in search of potential talent while last year's champions — Ottawa Montagnards—reached the eastern finals of the Memorial Cup.

League president Mickey Larkin and Art Bogart, manager of the Ivanhoe Arena, say the league might expand to Cornwall and Brockville with possibly another entry from Hull, Que.

It now is composed of Ottawa Montagnards and Ottawa Primrose and clubs from Hawkesbury, Smiths Falls, Arnprior and Pembroke, Ont., and Hull, Thurso and Buckingham, Que.

Most of the clubs, sponsored by individuals or community groups, hope to break even financially after the playoffs. Crowds vary in size from Smiths Falls and Pembroke, which have regular attendances of up to 2,500, to smaller centres like Thurso and Buckingham which draw an average 500 to 700.

SELLS SOCCER PLAYER

MANCHESTER, England (AP)—Manchester United Wednesday paid Celtic about £50,000 ($150,000) for the transfer of Scottish soccer star Pat Crerand. Crerand, 23-year-old halfback, has played 11 times for Scotland.

Western Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gord Fashoway, with a flick of his sinewy wrists, Wednesday night scored his 54rd career goal in professional hockey, gave Portland Buckaroos a 5-4 Western League win over San Francisco and ended the Seals' winning streak at 12 games.

In other action, Los Angeles Blades sailed past Edmonton Flyers 6-1 and the Spokane Coliseum jinx held as the host Comets beat Seattle Totems 4-1.

The Buckaroos ran up a 3-0 lead in the first period as San Francisco's Eddie Panagabko and Dallas Smith opened war. Both Panagabko and Smith ended up with five stitches in his head and Panagabko drew 20 minutes in penalties.

The Seals, clawing toward first place in the Southern Division, tied the game three times before Fashoway scored early in the third period.

Portland's other goals came from Art Jones, Gerry Goyer, Mike Donaldson and Tom McCarthy. The Seals' goals were registered by Len Haley, Al Nicholson, Orlie Kurtenbach and Panagabko.

Bankruptcy Suit Filed By Titans

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Titans of the American Football League, plagued with debts and seeking a buyer, have filed a bankruptcy suit but asked permission to continue in operation.

AFL commissioner Joe Foss adopted a no-comment, wait-and-see position on this latest move by Titan president and principal stockholder Harry Wismer.

Wismer, a controversial figure who has a $2,500,000 fraud and slander suit pending in another court action in Boston, listed the team's assets at $271, 908 and its liabilities at $1,341, 000 in the petition filed Wednesday.

At the same time, however, he said the team has entered into profitable radio and television contracts for the 1963 season which he claimed would result in substantial revenues if the team is allowed to operate.

Lions Want Probe of Raid Charge

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions will ask the Canadian Football Council to investigate a charge that American professional teams are raiding CFL rosters.

Lions general manager Herb Capozzi said Wednesday "if there is any evidence of tampering, we'd be prepared to fight back."

"We have made it known in the past that if any National Football League or American Football League team made an offer to one of our players, we would retaliate."

Hamilton Tiger-Cat tackle John Barrow said Tuesday NFL and AFL clubs are trying to induce established Canadian players to play out their options and then cross the border.

The Western Conference Lions want CFL commissioner C. Sonny Gray Hatter to investigate the claim and reaffirm a "no-raiding" agreement between the CFL and the American leagues.

Who Will Replace Jelineks?

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

EDMONTON (CP)—The Canadian Figure Skating Championships opened today and one of the big questions this year is—who will replace the Jelineks?

Otto and Maria Jelinek, brother-sister pairs team from Bronte, Ont., have turned professional and left a big vacancy in the pairs division.

The Jelineks captured the Canadian crown last year then scored a smashing win in the world championships at Prague.

Two pairs teams have the inside track for the Jelineks' vacated title—Debbie Wilkes and Guy Revell of Unionville, Ont., and Sudbury's Gerlie Desjardins and Maurice Lafrance who now skate out of Toronto.

This year's championships will be a rubber match for the teams.

HAVE MET BEFORE

Miss Desjardins and Lafrance were runners-up to the Jelineks in Canada last year and Miss Wilkes and Revell placed third.

But, the Wilkes-Revell team later placed fourth in world competition to sixth by Desjardins and Lafrance.

They've even money going into this year's competition.

Only one defending champion is on hand—Wendy Grisser, 18-year-old member of the Toronto Cricket, Skating and Curling Club who won the senior women's title at last year's championships in Toronto.

Favored in the senior men's event, now that champion Donald Jackson of Ottawa has turned professional, is Donald McPherson of the Stratford, Ont., Skating Club.

Forty-one of the 70 entries in the championships are from Ontario, including 17 from the Toronto Cricket, Skating and Curling Club.

HEADS WHOLESALERS

VANCOUVER (CP) — J. H. Mason of Douglas and Company, Vancouver, Wednesday was elected president of the Canadian Wholesalers' Association at the close of the group's convention.

Barons Clip Hornets 4-1, Bisons Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was a bad night for Dick Van Impe of Cleveland Barons Wednesday night and only a save evening for his teammates even though they won.

The Barons whipped Pittsburgh Hornets 4-1 but failed to make any gain on the first place Buffalo Bisons in the American Hockey League's Western Division race. The Bisons kept pace by edging Rochester Americans 3-2 in the night's only other game.

Van Impe, although he scored a goal in Cleveland's win, found it to be a costly game.

He received a 10-minute misconduct for arguing with referee Dalton McArthur in the second period, then was ejected from the bench with a game misconduct after shoving McArthur in the dispute.

The penalties carry automatic fines of $25 and $50.

Fred Hills, Joe Szura and Wayne Boddy were the other Cleveland marksmen and Warren Tyrell scored the lone Pittsburgh goal.

Jerry Melnyk's 25-foot shot late in the third period gave Buffalo its win. The Bisons had jumped to a 2-0 lead on goals by Billy Hay and Larry Wilson.

Rochester's Johnny MacMillan scored twice within 20 seconds to set the stage for Melnyk's winning goal.

CHOGGES SWAYZE

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Craig Swayze, assistant sports editor of the St. Catharines Standard, has become the first Canadian ever made an official of the United States National Association of Amateur Oarsmen. Swayze, a former Brockville rower, also is publicity director for the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen.

Larks Want Two Sunday HomeGames

MONTREAL (CP) — M. F. (Ted) Workman, owner of Montreal Alouettes, said Wednesday the club plans to ask for two Sunday home games in its 1963 Canadian Football League schedule.

He said Sunday professional football would avoid conflict with McGill University's intercollegiate games and "might mean bigger gates."

"Toronto Argos consider Sundays their best dates," Workman said. "They had three last year and likely will ask for as many in 1963. Hamilton had two last year."

The Alouettes owner said McGill's board of governors has authorized the use of the university's Molson Stadium by the Als for Sunday games.

Faces Fierce Competition

Palmer Seeks Third 'Phoenix'

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Arnold Palmer, running well ahead of his record money-winning pace last year, set out today in search of an unprecedented third straight $35,000 Phoenix open golf championship.

But fierce competition faced the golden man who ran away with $53,700 top money by 23 strokes a year ago.

None of the five tournaments on the 1963 pro tour has been decided by more than three strokes and a different star has won each weekend. Four golfers already have amassed prize totals exceeding $10,000.

Tops among the contenders seeking to unseat Palmer at the 6,679-yard, par-72 Arizona Country Club course are Gary Player, who has banked $15,200 this winter; Jack Nicklaus, with $11,865; Billy Casper, with $10,483, and Jack Burke Jr., with $9,540. Along with Palmer, who has won $11,800, each has won a 1963 tournament.

At this stage last year, Palmer had pocketed only $7,125 but went on to set a record 12-month mark of $81,448.

BUSINESS UNAFFECTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Harold Weaver, a South African business executive, says the state of the world doesn't hold an economic grudge against South Africa because of its racial policies. Mr. Weaver, 48, is advertising director of the South African Citrus Exchange. He said that while trade unions have urged sanctions against South Africa because of its apartheid (segregation) policy, businessmen have not taken up the cause.

Nicklaus No. 3 on Loot List

DUNEDIN, Fla. (AP)—Last week, Jack Nicklaus wasn't even on the list of 10 top money winners of professional golf. Now, he's the No. 3 man.

Nicklaus' playoff victory against Gary Player in the Palm Springs Open Monday gave him $8,000 and a total winning to date of $11,865.

Player, defeated in the playoff by eight strokes, however, still heads the list with $15,802. Player was the 1961 top money earner on the tournament trail.

The all-time money-winning champion of pro golf, Arnold Palmer, rounds out the week's list with $11,800. Fourth is Bill Casper Jr. with $10,483 and fifth is Jack Burke Jr. with $9,540.

SET FREAKNESS DATE

BALTIMORE (AP)—Pimlico race course Wednesday set May 18 as the date for the 87 running of the $150,000-added Preakness at Old Hilltop, middle jewel of thoroughbred racing's triple crown. The Preakness, last year by Carry Back, is the highlight of Pimlico's spring meeting. The classic is for three-year-olds, and nominations close Feb. 15.

Lightfoots Bow 93-54 To Trenton

Trenton Wilsons continued their romp through the Bay of Quinte Basketball League by whipping Belleville Lightfoots 93-54 in Trenton last night. Wilsons are undefeated in league play this season.

Wilsons used a 12-man lineup and got scoring points from every player as they built a 47-26 lead at half time and were never threatened. Lightfoots had six players in the lineup.

Bob Moore again paced the Trenton scorers with 24 points but team mate Warren Whitley was close on his heels with 23. Joe Theriault also hit double figures, dropping in ten.

Don Smith and Don Skinner were tops in a losing effort. Smith hooped 21 points while Skinner added 17.

Trenton Wilsons (93): M. Jeffery 2, G. Bambers 6, M. Eagen 5, B. Moore 24, P. Newsome 8, J. Theriault 10, W. Whitley 23, C. Crews 4, J. Nikpork 4, G. Whitley 5, B. Burleigh 8, D. Burke 3.

Belleville Lightfoots (54): T. Young 3, B. Nasmey 1, G. Reynolds 4, D. Smith 21, D. Skinner 19, D. Morden 6.

Will Allow Pro Boxing In New York

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — New York State will allow professional boxing to continue within its borders but is likely to demand that changes be made to make the sport safer and more palatable to the public, it was learned Wednesday.

A committee formed by the state legislature to investigate the sport will issue its reform recommendations to the lawmakers several weeks from now.

The Associated Press learned that a majority of the seven-man committee is unwilling to recommend abolition of the sport—one of the possibilities the legislature instructed the committee to examine.

The Republican legislative leaders are supporting the committee position, and they have authority to determine what legislation comes before the lawmakers. Governor Rockefeller has left the decision to the Republican - controlled legislature.

The committee—the joint legislative committee on professional boxing—began its investigation last year after the death of Benny (Kid) Paret as a result of a knockout in a welterweight title fight in Madison Square Garden.

OFFER TRADE PLAN

LONDON (Reuters)—Formation of a Commonwealth payments union for the development of intra - Commonwealth trade was urged here Wednesday night in a plan put forward by 55 Conservative legislators opposed to Britain joining the European Common Market. They said the plan should be considered at a Commonwealth economic conference.

Quinte COSSA Wrestling

Moira Beats Campbellford

The wrestling Trojans from Moira Secondary School powered their way to a 43-11 victory over Campbellford in a dual meet held in the losers gymnasium yesterday.

The visitors won 9 of the 12 matches held in a meet that saw almost all of the bouts closer than the final score indicates.

The bouts which provided the most excitement were in the middle weight divisions.

In the under 126 lb. class Bruce Smith of Moira, put up a courageous battle before bowing to Don Gummer by decision. John Pound, wrestling for the Trojans, lost a close decision to Ron Jons of Campbellford, while Art Brunton and John Burns kept the crowd on the edge of their seats before Brunton gained the win by a fall.

Final results:

Under 99 lbs.—W. Weller (MSS) by fall over J. Robbins (C).

Under 106 lbs.—J. Stewart (MSS) by fall over T. Garneau (C).

Police Ask Boxing Ban In Denmark

COPENHAGEN (Reuters)—Copenhagen Police Chief Eivind Larsen says the Danish police have recommended a ban on professional boxing in Denmark because it is "the last remnant of the Roman gladiator battles."

The Danish health board and police officials in separate reports to Justice Minister Hans Haekkerup recommended that professional and amateur boxing matches "charging entry fees" be banned completely.

Haekkerup requested the reports before deciding whether a ban should be introduced in Denmark.

Larsen said Wednesday the police report favored a full ban on professional boxing.

"Unlike other sports it aims to damage the opponent to the greatest extent possible," Larsen said.

SUFFER BRAIN DAMAGE

The health board report, made on the basis of Swedish and Danish medical examinations, said six amateur boxers out of 100 examined had been found to have permanent brain damage.

CUBANS TO TRAIN?

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The leader of the Bay of Pigs invaders said Wednesday his Cuban exile fighters soon will receive six to eight months training in the United States from army, navy and air force personnel. Dr. Manuel Artime, who led a brigade in the unsuccessful assault on Cuba in April, 1961, said at a press conference "all members of the brigade who want the training will get it."

Plans Triple World Title Fight Card

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Promoter George Parnassus announced Wednesday a triple world-title-fight card featuring welterweight champion Emile Griffith and challenger Luis Rodriguez in Dodger Stadium March 16.

The other fights will match featherweight champion Davey Moore against Sugar Ramos, and Eddie Perkins against Batiing Torres for the vacant junior welterweight championship.

Each fight will be scheduled for 15 rounds. This will be the first boxing card for the big baseball stadium in Chaves Ravine.

Griffith, of New York, was guaranteed $70,000 and Rodriguez, from Cuba, $18,000. Davey Moore was guaranteed $40,000 and Ramos, a Cuban who lives in Mexico City, $12,000.

Perkins and Torres will get $7,500 in their match for the title left open when Duilo Loi of Italy retired recently.

Hungarian Champ Puts Briton Away

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Laszlo Papp, Hungary's European middleweight champion, knocked out Britain's George Aldridge in the last minute of the 15th and final round of their title fight Wednesday night.

The 27 - year - old, undefeated Hungarian, only acknowledged pro athlete in the Communist bloc, flattened the bloodied Briton with a barrage of punches after leading all the way. Dutch referee Ben Retl tolled the count over the 27-year-old Aldridge.

It was the 20th victory in 22 pro fights for Papp, only boxer ever to win three Olympic titles.

Papp weighed 165¼ pounds, Aldridge 159.

MAY LOSE CALCIUM

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Russian reports of possible abnormal loss of bone - making calcium during weightless space flight were disclosed Wednesday. ### PARKDALE CUB AND SCOUT AUXILIARY

The Parkdale Cub and Scout Mothers' Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. Nickle for the first meeting of 1963.

Following the usual business session, plans were completed for the skating party which will be held at the Parkdale community Centre on Saturday, February 9th at 7.00 p.m. Everyone is cordially invited. There will be candy and refreshments on sale in the hall.

President Mrs. A. Hyatt gave a short report on the social activities of the Cubs and Scouts during January. The Scout hockey team played against 5th Belleville at the RCAF arena. The score was 6-1 in favor of the 5th. The Cubs were more fortunate in their game with the 17th "B" pack. The score here was 5-1 in favor of the Parkdale team.

The "Coffee Breaks" which proved so successful in November will be resumed this month. The first was held on February 5th at the home of Mrs. Keeble of 14 Maple Drive between the hours of 9.30 to 11.00 a.m. and the rest will be held at the following addresses — Mrs. V. Moon, 545 Sidney St., March 14, from 9.30 to 11.00 a.m.; Mrs Robinson, 42 Tracy St., on Feb. 19, at the same hours; Mrs. Argyle, 539 Sidney St., Tuesday, Feb. 26, at 2.00 to 4.00 p.m.

BOY SCOUT WEEK 1963 COMING UP

More than 300,000 Canadian Scouts and their leaders are busily preparing for Boy Scout Week, February 17th to 24th. The emphasis will be on "World Scouting". Through their International Commissioner, Earl T. Moore of Montreal, greetings are being sent to nearly two million Scouts in 144 countries on six continents.

Ex-Scouts Wayne and Schuster will feature a "Boy Scout Week Skit" on their February 15th television show, Canada's famous comedians started in show business when, as Boy Scouts, they staged a production for the old 50th Toronto Scout Group many years ago.

Chief Executive Commissioner Fred J. Finlay and his staff will welcome visitors to the National Headquarters, Boy Scouts of Canada, 1345 Baseline Road, Ottawa, on Wednesday, February 20th, when "Open House" will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Visitors will be given an opportunity to view every department in the modern headquarters, one of the first fully pre-cast concrete structures in Canada, which went into service in January, 1961. A staff of 75 is employed there, providing services and supplies for boys and leaders in some 11,000 packs, troops and crews from sea to sea, and the Canadian Scout groups overseas.

CAMPBELLFORD

Sale of Plates, Licences Shows Falling Off

CAMPBELLFORD — The sale of licence plates and driving licences in Campbellford has shown a considerable falling off as at the end of January. The Licence Bureau at Anderson's Hardware states that sales are about 20 per cent less than a year ago.

This drop is due in part to truck and trailer permits which will not go on sale until February 28th. In past years several hundred trucks and trailers were licensed during January and early February. However, new truck and trailer plates are not mandatory in 1963 until April 1st. Also, it will be possible to purchase truck and trailer plates for three months period this year if desired. Licence plates for trucks issued on three-month basis will be in distinctive colors different from the annual numbers. Plates issued for the months of April, May and June will be red and white; plates for July, August and September will be green and white; plates for October, November and December will be yellow and black. Plates for January, February and March, 1964 will be the annual black and white series.

The quarterly rate for truck plates issued quarterly will be slightly higher than the regular annual rate. Pickup trucks with a regular annual rate of $20, will cost $6.00 for a three period.

There is no change in the cost of driving licences, passenger month period.

of which are now obtainable.

The result of the increase in the issue of truck plates and the falling off in the number of licence purchasers generally, car and station wagon plates all normally large lineups will be faced at all issuing agencies this year. Only early purchasers can hope to overcome long and tiring waits.

The Campbellford Licence Bureau is remaining open all day Saturdays for the convenience of out-of-town owners who have difficulty in getting to an issuing office during the mid-week.

Make Possible Giving Body To Science

By DENNIS ANDERSON

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Dymond told the legislature Wednesday that proposed provincial legislation would provide the legal machinery through which a person could bequeath his body to science.

Elaborating of the bill, given second reading Tuesday, Dr. Dymond said the new act would be an extension of the Corneal Grafting Act, for establishment of cornea to eye banks, and follows the principle of Britain's Human Tissue Act passed in 1961.

Ontario's Human Tissue Act would recognize as legal any request in writing, or an oral request before two witnesses just before death by any person wishing to give his body for medical purposes.

Pygmalion Was Beautifully Acted and Produced on TV

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Pygmalion, George Bernard Shaw's saucy period piece about making a lady out of Eliza Doolittle, was beautifully acted and produced on television (NBC) Wednesday night.

Julie Harris, who seems perfect playing everything from a young girl to be an aged queen, was marvellous as the suspicious Cockney flower girl caught up reluctantly in an experiment in phonetics. She was perfect also in the finished product —an English lady.

James Donald, as rude Professor Henry Higgins, invested his part with the casual brutality of Leslie Howard, instead of the waspishness Rex Harrison gave him.

As in all the Hall of Fame programs, the 90-minute adaptation of the Shaw classic was notable for effective, subtle use of color: the ballroom scene was gorgeous.

The venerable comedy turned up with a surprise ending for those of us who have the plot thoroughly confused with the musical, My Fair Lady.

At the play's end, Eliza stormily leaves the professor to marry a rather foolish young man named Freddie. The musical inspired by the Shaw work ended with Eliza leaving Higgins for Freddie, then coming back to him after all. My Fair Lady was never intended as British social satire, nor did it have a message, however lost it is on American audiences today.

Surrey Lads Getting Taste Of Sub-Arctic

By FRED CHAFE

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP)—A case-hardened company of British paratroopers is fighting a battle of survival against the Canadian sub-arctic.

The decision will remain in doubt unless the fight becomes deadly serious, but at this stage the tough Britons appear to have piled up an early lead on points.

"The lads have acquitted themselves well and morale is excellent," said Maj. Neil Fidler of Farnham, Surrey. "But we still feel we have much to learn."

He was speaking of the performance of D Company group of the 3rd Battalion, Parachute Regiment, in the final stages of a two-week winter enviromental training program in the barren lands near this military base on Hudson Bay 600 miles north of Winnipeg.

The temperature reached a low of about 40 degrees below zero last week but has moderated to a comparatively balmy few degrees below. Readings of between 30 and 40 below are not unusual in the area.

This sort of winter condition "was new to every mother's son of us," said Maj. Fidler.

CATCH ON WELL

"The men approached it with awe and consternation in some cases. They've caught on well, however. We've learned a lot of tricks about keeping alive in this climate but we feel we still have a lot more to learn."

Walter Pidgeon Wanted To Lose Case in Court

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — I pleaded with them to let me lose the case," said Canadian-born Walter Pidgeon of his subbing for television's ever-winning lawyer, Perry Mason.

"My argument was that it would make Perry look good. But the producers said that I had to win. After all, Perry had never lost, and I'd be letting him down if I took over a case for him and blew it."

Pidgeon, a native of Saint John, N.B., will continue the show's winning ways when he appears for Raymond Burr on the courtroom show Feb. 28. He is one of the four stars who spelled Burr during the latter's operation and recovery.

The guest stint may serve as a start for more strenuous television chores for Pidgeon.

He has made a pilot film for Daystar Productions and ABC, Mr. Kingston. Pidgeon plays the skipper of a luxury liner, and Peter Graves is first officer. The prospective series seems to have an excellent chance of surviving the spring scramble for next season's slots.

HELD OFF

"I had off doing a series for a good reason," said the actor. "A couple of years ago, I happened to run into Ward North. I had been offered a number of series, and I asked him whether he thought I should take one.

"'Go ahead—but you might as well kiss your family and your friends goodbye,' was all he seeing them any more,' Ward said to me. He told me about his schedule and I asked him why he did sit. He said he did it for the residuals he would collect when he was old and feeble.

"A month later, I picked up a paper in New York and read that Ward was dead. That was enough to convince me that carrying the load of a series wasn't worth it.

"But this series we're proposing is far more fun. I'll just work a couple of days a week and let Peter Graves do the hard work. He's young enough for it."

WANTS TO SLOW DOWN

Pidgeon says he hankers to slow down, for he shows little sign of it. Last year he went on a Quebec location for Disney's Big Red. He has just returned from Italy, where he co-starred with the French clown Toto in The Two Colonels.

Since leaving MGM after 23 years, Pidgeon also had a long run on Broadway and on tour in The Happiest Millionaire. And he played a season with Jackie Gleason in Take Me Along. His reaction to that experience: "It would be easy to get mad at Gleason if he didn't do all that talent."

Pidgeon will be eligible for social security in September. But his famed charm shows no signs of dimming. He remains a trim 199 pounds despite a lifetime fondness for desserts.
